“PART B—ENHANCING TEACHER AND SCHOOL LEADER EDUCATION

“SEC. 230. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this part $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2020 and each of the 5 succeeding fiscal years.

“(b) DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.—Subparts 1 through 4 of this part shall each receive a minimum of 20 percent of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year, and the Secretary shall have discretion over the distribution under this part of the remaining amount appropriated for such fiscal year.

“Subpart 1—Honorable Augustus F. Hawkins Centers of Excellence

“SEC. 231. FINDINGS.

“Congress finds the following:

“(1) Our Nation’s schools are experiencing a severe teacher diversity gap that negatively impacts student achievement and school culture—50 percent of current students are students of color while only 18 percent of teachers are of color, according to a 2016 study by the Brookings Institution.

“(2) A 2016 report conducted by the Department of Education shows that teachers of color tend to provide more culturally relevant teaching and better understand the situations that students of color may face. These factors help in the development of trusting teacher-student relationships. Researchers from Vanderbilt University also found that greater racial and ethnic diversity in the principal corps benefits students, especially students of color.

“(3) Teachers and school leaders of color can also serve as cultural ambassadors who help students feel more welcome at school or as role models.

“(4) Research consistently shows that increasing diversity in the teaching profession can have positive impacts on student educational experiences and outcomes. Students of color demonstrate greater academic achievement and social-emotional development in classes with teachers of color. Studies also suggest that all students, including white students, benefit from having teachers of color offering their distinctive knowledge, experiences, and role modeling to the student body as a whole.

“SEC. 232. PURPOSE.

“The purpose of this subpart is to strengthen and expand the recruitment, training, and retention of candidates of color into the teaching profession.

“SEC. 233. ELIGIBLE INSTITUTION DEFINED.

“(i) EXCEPTIONS FOR CERTAIN CATEGORIES OF EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS.—With respect to an institution that loses eligibility to participate in a program under this title in accordance with paragraph (1), such institution may request and be granted an exception to such loss of eligibility for a category of educational programs at such institution by demonstrating to the Secretary that the on-time loan repayment rate for such category of educational programs is greater than the threshold percentage specified under paragraph (1)(B) for each fiscal year of the period on which such loss of eligibility for the institution is based.

“(ii) DETERMINATIONS.—In determining the on-time loan repayment rate for a category of educational programs, subsection (a)(1) shall be applied—

“(I) in subparagraph (A), by substituting ‘received for enrollment in the category of educational programs for which such rate is being determined’ for ‘received for attendance at the institution’; and

“(II) as if the following were added at the end of such paragraph:

“(C) MULTIPLE CATEGORIES OF EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS.—In the case of a student who has received a covered loan for enrollment in more than one category of educational programs, the student (and such student’s subsequent repayment or monthly payment on such covered loan) is attributed to the last category of educational programs in which such student was enrolled.’.

“(D) APPEALS.—Not later than 60 days of receiving notification from the Secretary of the loss of eligibility under subparagraph (A), the institution may appeal the loss of its eligibility under subsection (c).

“(2) REPAYMENT MANAGEMENT PLAN REQUIREMENT FOR CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Beginning on the date that is one year after the date on which the final on-time repayment rates are published by the Secretary for not less than 3 fiscal years, an institution shall be subject to the requirements of subparagraph (B), if the Secretary determines the following with respect to such institution—

“(i) the on-time repayment rate of such institution is less than any threshold on-time repayment rate specified under paragraph (1)(B) for period determined appropriate by the Secretary for such threshold rate; and

“(ii) for each of the 3 most recent institutional fiscal years for which the institution submits to the Secretary disclosures on the expenditures of the institution on instruction for purposes of section 132(i)(1)(AA), the amount expended by the institution for instructional spending is greater than or equal to an amount equal to 1/3 of the amount of revenue derived from tuition and fees.

“(B) REPAYMENT MANAGEMENT PLAN.—An institution subject to the requirements of this subparagraph, shall—

“(i) not later than 6 months after the determination under subparagraph (A), submit to the Secretary a repayment management plan which the Secretary, in the Secretary’s discretion, after consideration of the institution’s history, resources, expenditures, and targets for improving on-time repayment, determines—

“(II) provides reasonable assurance that the institution will have an on-time repayment rate that exceeds the on-time threshold referred to in subparagraph (A)(i) after a reasonable period;

“(ii) engage an independent third-party to provide technical assistance in implementing such repayment management plan; and

“(iii) provide to the Secretary, on an annual basis or at such other intervals as the Secretary may require, evidence of on-time repayment rate improvement and successful implementation of such repayment management plan.

“(c) APPEALS.—

“(1) SECRETARIAL REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary shall issue a decision on any appeal submitted by an institution under subsection (b)(1)(D) not later than

45 days after its submission. Such decision may permit the institution to continue to participate in a program under this title if—

“(A) the institution demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the Secretary’s calculation of its on-time repayment rate is not accurate, and that recalculation would increase its on-time repayment rate above the applicable threshold percentage specified in subsection (b)(1)(B) for the period on which the determination of the institution’s ineligibility under subsection (b)(1)(A) was based;

“(B) the institution demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that there has been improper loan servicing, which, if remedied, would increase its on-time repayment rate above the applicable threshold percentage specified in subsection (b)(1)(B) for the period on which the determination of the institution’s ineligibility under subsection (b)(1)(A) was based;

“(C) there are, in the judgment of the Secretary, exceptional mitigating circumstances that would make the application of this section inequitable;

“(D) for each of the 3 most recent fiscal years for which the institution submits to the Secretary disclosures on expenditures for purposes of section 132(i)(1)(AA), the sum of the expenditures on instruction and student services of the institution is equal to an amount greater than or equal to 50 percent of the institution’s revenues derived from tuition and fees, and the institution complies with the requirements of subsection (b)(2)(B).

“(2) INSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—If an institution continues to participate in a program under this title, and the institution’s appeal of the loss of eligibility is unsuccessful, the institution shall be required to pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the amount of interest, special allowance, reinsurance, and any related payments made by the Secretary (or which the Secretary is obligated to make) with respect to covered loans to students attending, or planning to attend, that institution during the pendency of such appeal. During such appeal, the Secretary may permit the institution to continue to participate in a program under this title.

“(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations designed to prevent an institution from evading the application to that institution of a on-time repayment rate determination under this section through the use of such measures as branching, consolidation, change of ownership or control, or any similar device.

“(e) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary shall publish not less often than once every fiscal year (by September 30 of each year) a report—

“(1) for each category of institution, and for each institution for which an on-time repayment rate is determined under this section—

“(A) with respect to the preceding fiscal year—

“(i) the on-time repayment rate for such institution; “(ii) the on-time repayment rate for each category of educational programs; and

“(iii) the number of students on which the rates described in clauses (i) and (ii) are based; and

“(B) for each of the 3 most recent fiscal years for which the institution submits to the Secretary disclosures on expenditures for purposes of section 132(i)(1)(AA)—

“(i) the amount of the institution’s expenditures on instruction;

“(ii) the amount of revenue derived from tuition and fees by the institution; and

“(iii) the quotient of the amount described in clause (i) divided by the amount described in clause (ii), expressed as a percentage; and

“(2) each on-time repayment rate used for calculating each of the threshold rates under subsection (b)(1)(B) for the period determined appropriate by the Secretary for such threshold rate under such subsection.

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

The purpose of H.R. 4674, the College Affordability Act, is to improve higher education in the United States through reauthorization of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (HEA). H.R. 4674 lowers the cost of colleges for students and families, holds colleges accountable for student success, and gives a new generation the opportunity to graduate on-time and transition to a successful career.

H.R. 4674 addresses the rising cost of a college education by ensuring that federal and state resources are available to help students afford higher education and to contain higher education costs generally. It creates a federal-state partnership to direct federal funding to states that make community college tuition-free for all students and provides mechanisms to create debt-free college pathways. The bill includes the largest increase in the amount of the maximum Pell Grant in history, enhancing support for low-income students. It expands access to dual enrollment programs, so that students can earn free college credits while still in high school. H.R. 4674 reforms the federal student loan system, making student loans cheaper to take out, simpler to understand, and easier to pay off. The Act also simplifies the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) removing potential barriers students face when trying to finance their education.

H.R. 4674 improves the quality of higher education by holding all schools accountable for student success. It empowers accreditors to create meaningful standards for student success by evaluating student outcomes. The bill gives states the tools to protect students from the fallout of abrupt school closures. H.R. 4674 reinstates consumer protections that help defrauded students get back on their feet and prevents low-quality training programs from accessing taxpayer dollars. It protects students, especially student veterans, from predatory for-profit institutions of higher education (institutions) by strengthening the provision that prevents for-profit institutions from overreliance on federal dollars. H.R. 4674 blocks access to federal student aid for institutions with high percentages of students who default on their loans or fail to repay their loans on-time, as well as those that spend excessive amounts of money on marketing and lobbying and not enough money educating students. The Act also promotes student success by improving provisions on campus climate and the safety of students.

H.R. 4674 also advances equity and expands opportunity for students from all backgrounds. The bill provides flexible college options and stronger supports for the students of today. It increases funding for wraparound services, including campus-based child care, academic and career advising, and small emergency grants to support completion. It improves access for students with disabilities, foster youth, students who struggle with homelessness, undocumented students, and student veterans. It also expands access to high-quality short-term programs that can help individuals quickly build their skills in high-demand jobs and move into the workforce. H.R. 4674 also increases and permanently reauthorizes mandatory funding for Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities (TCCUs), and other Minority-Serving Institutions (MSIs).

COMMITTEE VIEWS

Congress originally passed the HEA in 1965 as part of a broader effort by President Lyndon B. Johnson to fight poverty and racial inequality through groundbreaking federal laws.¹ President Lyndon Johnson, when signing HEA into law at his alma mater Southwest Texas State College remarked that the law means that, “a high school senior anywhere in this great land of ours can apply to any college or any university in any of the 50 States and not be turned away because his family is poor.”² The HEA specifically aimed to remove monetary barriers to postsecondary education, giving low- and middle-income students the opportunity to pursue the same postsecondary degrees already available to high-income students.³

Since the enactment of the HEA, the law has only been reauthorized eight times. The last reauthorization was in 2008—more than a decade ago. Since then, there have been several changes in the higher education landscape that must be addressed in any meaningful reauthorization of HEA.

First, the finance structure of higher education fundamentally shifted since 1965 in many important aspects. The most impactful change has been the wave of state disinvestment in higher education which predated, but was crystallized after, the Great Recession. In the 1970s, states funded approximately 70 percent of higher education costs (with 30 percent left to be financed by the federal government and the student).⁴ Over the last four decades this breakdown has inverted, slowly at first, and then rapidly after the 2008 crisis and subsequent recession.⁵ Many states are just returning to higher education spending levels in line with expenditures before the recession over 12 years ago, which were still historically low.⁶ The result has left students paying nearly half of the cost of operating public higher education, with many of students left no other choice but to debt finance their higher education via the federal student aid system.⁷ Additionally, over the last 30 years, tuition cost increases have far outpaced inflation. In-state tuition at public four-year colleges has tripled since 1988 while tuition costs have more than doubled in other sectors, even after adjusting for inflation.⁸

The federal government's response to these financial pressures has been to modify federal loan eligibility requirements, create new loan programs, and establish loan repayment plans that ease monthly payments for borrowers. Repayment plans have been introduced in full reauthorizations, in partial amendments to the law, and via administrative authority.⁹ While well intentioned, these plans have resulted in a patchwork of programs that have made repaying loans too complex.

Recognizing that state disinvestment and inflation of college costs are both existential threats to the higher education system in the United States, H.R. 4674 seeks to provide programs to both contain costs and incentivize states to maintain their investment in higher education. The bill also simplifies the student loan repayment system by eliminating current repayment plans and creating one fixed repayment plan and an income-based repayment (IBR) plan that is more generous than current law.

Second, the demographics of the college student population have changed considerably. HEA was originally written at a time when mostly white, mostly male students entered higher education studying full-time at a residential university directly after high school.¹⁰ Every one of these paradigms has shifted. Women students now outnumber men,¹¹ and students rightfully expect their schools to recognize and respect their sexual orientations and gender identities. Students of color are now participating in higher rates in higher education than ever before, resulting in a more racially, ethnically and financially diverse student body.¹² The majority of students do not enter higher education directly after high school, and are often working at least 30 hours a week while pursuing their degree part-time, commuting to school and often raising a family.¹³ Each one of these demographic shifts has implications on both campuses and the federal programs not originally designed to serve this population of students. H.R. 4674 recognizes these shifts and many of its reforms are designed to better serve the "traditional" student of today.¹⁴

Additionally, many new actors have entered in the service delivery of higher education, most notably large, publicly traded for-profit systems of higher education. The last two decades saw a rise in large corporations opening chains of institutions across the country.¹⁵ These larger publicly traded firms in particular have a fiduciary duty to their shareholders to increase profits as their primary duty.¹⁶ Since the last reauthorization of HEA, we have seen growth of these large for-profit chains and with them, increased cases of widespread fraud and abuse of the federal student aid system.¹⁷ When these cases come to light, they often precipitate abrupt closures of institutions, leaving students with outstanding debt, and limited options on how to continue their education.¹⁸ In the most egregious cases, some of these large for-profit entities have exploited gaps in the system of higher education oversight.¹⁹ H.R. 4674 attempts to strengthen existing guardrails on federal dollars to prevent their abuse, and provides new processes to ensure that institutions cannot escape meaningful oversight.

Other changes in the higher education field necessitated attention in this comprehensive HEA reauthorization. For example, since the 2008 reauthorization the research on effective teacher preparation—the subject of the HEA’s title II—has evolved and illuminated clear practices that produce results for student achievement and help retain teachers in the profession. Further, we are just now experiencing the impact of the implementation of policies established in the last reauthorization. There is also an emphasis on shortening the length of higher educational programs either by allowing students to take college credit courses while in secondary school or designing shorter programs of study to provide skills necessary to immediately enter an in-demand high paying job shortly after completion.

Given all these changes, a comprehensive reauthorization of the HEA is long overdue. H.R. 4674 represents an overhaul of higher education in the United States. The Act addresses critical issues of college affordability, accountability, and opportunity by making substantial and permanent investments in our higher education system to ensure a new generation of students can access and complete a postsecondary degree or credential.

H.R. 4674 Makes College More Affordable

A college education remains the most successful force for upward economic mobility in America.²⁰ Yet, the rising cost of a college education has kept it out of reach for many individuals. An important cause of this rising cost has been state disinvestment in higher education.²¹ Average state appropriation per full-time equivalent (FTE) student fell by 26 percent during the Great Recession and is only slowly recovering.²²

The Committee strongly believes that a comprehensive federal policy solution is necessary to reverse the trend in state disinvestment that has shifted the burden of funding higher education onto America's working families in a time of stagnant wages.

Federal-State Partnership

H.R. 4674 creates a federal-state partnership known as America's College Promise (ACP)—a grant program that makes a historic mandatory investment in states that agree to make college more affordable and invest in public higher education. The Act draws on and builds upon H.R. 4212, the America's College Promise Act as introduced by Rep. Andy Levin (D-MI) in the 116th Congress. This program was first proposed by President Obama in his 2015 State of the Union address and introduced by Committee Chairman Robert C. "Bobby" Scott (D-VA) in the 114th and 115th Congresses. ACP guarantees two years of community college tuition- and fee-free to students in participating states, funded by a mix of state and federal dollars. To access federal grant funds, states must commit to sustained investments in public colleges and state aid programs, creating a powerful incentive to slow state disinvestment and contain college costs. ACP also provides grant aid directly to low-income students who attend Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities (TCCUs), and other Minority-Serving Institutions (MSIs) for up to sixty credits, allowing students who transfer from a community college to an HBCU, TCCU, or MSI to earn a bachelor's degree with little to no tuition cost. ACP further invests in student success and provides the infrastructure for future expansions into debt-free four-year college.

ACP includes four key policy components: a federal-state partnership providing first-dollar tuition waivers at community colleges; a dedicated student success fund; a grant program for low-income students at HBCUs, TCCUs, and other MSIs; and a set of authorizations for expanded affordability guarantees.

Under the first component of ACP, students in states that choose to participate in the federal-state partnership will have access to first dollar tuition and fee waivers at any state community college. The first dollar nature of ACP allows students to use other aid, including federal Pell Grants, to offset other costs of college attendance beyond tuition and fees. Participating states are allocated an amount of funding based on a formula that provides, at a minimum, federal funds sufficient to cover 75 of the tuition and fee waivers based on the average cost of tuition and fees at community colleges nationwide. States must provide a match to cover the remaining 25 percent. However, actual federal grant amounts will be influenced by the level of available funding (with specified levels of mandatory funds provided each year) and the number of participating states. Additionally, many states have already made significant progress in reducing or waiving community college tuition. As a result, states that fund community college tuition may receive more funds than are necessary to cover the cost of the tuition waivers, in which case states are authorized to use remaining funds to support the quality and affordability of all public institutions, and to improve college readiness, expand dual enrollment, and enhance the capacity of high-quality programs at two-year institutions. The Committee intends ACP to increase college success as well as access, so it is imperative that participating states use excess funds for the development and expansion of high-quality postsecondary pathways. For example, states using excess funds for dual enrollment programs should seek to adopt quality standards similar to those laid out in the Jumpstart on College grant program authorized in H.R. 4674.²³

Regardless of how state matching funds are used, under ACP they must supplement, and not supplant, existing state investments. States participating in the federal-state partnership are also subject to maintenance of effort provisions that ensure states maintain a baseline investment in public higher education. States are separately required to maintain baseline spending on operational expenses at public, four-year colleges and on state need-based aid programs. As states dedicate new dollars to meet ACP's matching requirements, the baseline level at which they are required to maintain funding will rise, meaning that states will be increasing investments in public higher education over time. The protection for operational expenses at four-year public colleges means that new funding or community colleges cannot come at the expense of the four-year sector, while the protection for state need-based aid programs ensures low-income students throughout participating states—including those attending public four-year institutions and private non-profit institutions—will continue to have access to vital state-supported grant aid.

Under the second component of ACP, states that join the federal-state partnership have access to a dedicated student success fund to support the adoption and expansion of evidence-based reforms and practices at all public institutions. These practices are already at work in many states. For example, Georgia State University has famously made significant progress in improving student outcomes through the expansion of academic and career counseling services that are bolstered by the use of data analytics. There is also an increasing recognition across higher education that improving student outcomes, particularly for low-income students, requires a focus on basic needs, which has led institutions like Bunker Hill Community College and the California State University System to offer comprehensive wraparound services to ensure that students have access to essentials like food, housing, transportation, and child care. As designed, the state match increases the longer states draw down federal dollars from the student success fund. Again, since state matching funds must supplement, and not supplant, existing state investments, as a result of this increased state investment, the baseline levels at which states are required to maintain funding will continue to rise, ensuring robust investment.

The third component of America's College Promise creates three Pathways to Student Success programs that provide grant aid directly to low-income students who attend HBCUs, TCCUs, and MSIs for up to 60 credits. This would greatly reduce costs for low-income students who start at these institutions for the equivalent of the first two years of, while also allowing students who transfer from a community college to an HBCU, TCCU, or MSI to earn a bachelor's degree while paying little to no tuition cost. Like the community college tuition and fee waivers, benefits under the Pathways to Student Success programs are provided on a first-dollar basis, meaning eligible students can use Pell Grants or other aid to pay for non-tuition expenses. Public and private not-for-profit four-year HBCUs, TCCUs, and MSIs are all eligible to participate in this program. These institutions serve a vital role as engines of economic mobility for low-income students and students of color, making it all the more important to include them in ACP and to ensure that the tuition-free community college guarantee does not undercut their ability to attract price-sensitive students. The Pathways to Student Success programs are supported with dedicated mandatory funds that are separate from the funds used for the federal-state partnership.

Lastly, the federal-state partnership establishes the structures necessary to support future investments in four-year debt-free and tuition-free college. If funding is sufficient to support the primary components of ACP, the Secretary of Education (Secretary) can expand the partnership to provide additional affordability guarantees. Using a so-called 'waterfall' approach, H.R. 4674 authorizes expanded guarantees providing debt-free college at two- and four-year institutions (first for Pell Grant recipients, then for all students) and tuition-free college at public four-year institutions. The Secretary is also granted authority to expand tuition guarantees to private non-profit institutions in participating states.

ACP addresses issues of college affordability in a variety of ways. First and foremost, it makes straightforward, reliable, and powerful promises to students about the cost of a college degree through the provision of tuition waivers and direct grant aid. The program covers the cost of tuition and fees on a first-dollar basis provides a clear message to students that college is affordable and accessible, while allowing low-income students to use Pell Grants and other financial aid to pay for non-tuition expenses like books, transportation, and housing. By focusing a substantial investment on community colleges, HBCUs, TCCUs, and MSIs, ACP ensures that limited federal dollars are focused on historically underserved students and under-resourced institutions enrolling large shares of low-income students and students of color, two of the fastest growing demographic groups in higher education.

Aside from the sustained promise of federal funding, ACP addresses tuition growth resulting from state disinvestment by requiring states to reinvest in higher education and setting robust maintenance of effort requirements going forward. We know cost of college has increased, in large part, due to state disinvestment in postsecondary education. Faced with steep decreases in state funding, colleges and universities have turned to other sources to make up for lost revenue, including higher tuition costs for students and their families. A rigorous study found that decreased state funding accounts for 41 percent of the rise in tuition costs since 2008.²⁴ By providing sustained public investment via a federal-state partnership that is not subject to discretionary annual appropriations, ACP will incentivize states to reinvest in higher education and slow growth in college costs, thereby making higher education more affordable in the future.

ACP additionally establishes requirements for the adoption of promising and evidence-based institutional reforms and innovative practices at the state level to improve student outcomes and supports states in meeting these requirements through the creation of a dedicated student success fund. In addition to controlling costs, the Committee believes the America's College Promise program will help reduce time to completion and ensure that more students earn high-quality credentials that provide a substantial return on investment, another key issue in addressing college affordability.

The Pell Grant

The Pell Grant is the cornerstone of federal student aid. Federal grant aid targeted at low-income students and families has been an essential tool in expanding access to higher education since 1965.²⁵ While Democrats successfully championed historic increases in the Pell Grant through the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act of 2009 (ARRA) and the Student Aid and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 2010 (SAFRA), those investments have not kept pace with rising costs.²⁶ In 1975, the maximum Pell Grant covered nearly 80 percent of the cost of attendance at a public four-year school.²⁷ The maximum Pell Grant award in 2018–19 ($5,920) covers just 29 percent of average tuition, fees, room and board at an in-state, four-year public university; and only 13 percent in a private nonprofit institution.²⁸ To close this gap, Pell Grant recipients are more than twice as likely to borrow federal dollars as their peers.²⁹ The Committee believes restoring the purchasing power of the Pell Grant is necessary to elevate the purpose of the Pell Grant program, and is a key pillar of any comprehensive HEA reauthorization.

H.R. 4674 raises the maximum Pell Grant award by $625—the largest year-over-year increase in the program’s history—and permanently indexes the award to inflation. The latter policy was adopted from H.R. 4639, the Pell Grant Sustainability Act, which was introduced by Rep. Sean Casten (D–IL). The combined result of these two investments is that the grant will cover a larger share of tuition and expenses today, but it will also maintain the purchasing power of the grant for future students. H.R. 4674 additionally incorporates H.R. 4216, Rep. Antonio Delgado’s (D–NY) Strengthening Financial Aid for Students Act, which would increase income protection allowances for working students and expand lifetime Pell eligibility from 12 to 14 semesters, and H.R. 3334, Rep. Ann Kuster’s (D–NH) Expanding Access to Graduate Education Act of 2019, which would incentivize on-time graduation and expand the talent pipeline by allowing students to exhaust full Pell eligibility on graduate studies following completion of a bachelor’s degree. Taken together, these changes mean that Pell students who complete their undergraduate program in 8 semesters would have an additional 6 semesters of Pell eligibility to dedicate to graduate study. Both H.R. 4216 and H.R. 3334 had Republican cosponsors, demonstrating the bipartisan support for these essential improvements to the Pell Grant program.

H.R. 4674 additionally incorporates H.R. 4073 the bipartisan Expanding Educational Opportunities for Justice-Impacted Communities Act, led by Committee member Rep. David Trone (D–MD), which repeals the counterproductive ban on the receipt of Pell Grants among incarcerated individuals. While limited, research shows us that education programs for incarcerated individuals reduce recidivism, and often save more money in terms of criminal justice expenditures in the future than they cost. The bill also ensures these students have access to the information they need about postsecondary opportunities and prevents risky and unscrupulous providers from monopolizing prison education programs. Expanding access to quality postsecondary education among incarcerated students will not only improve reentry and post-release outcomes, resulting in significant return-on-investment and contributing to safer communities across America, it will improve the climate and safety inside prisons, benefitting all incarcerated individuals as well as the staff within correctional facilities.

H.R. 4674 further allows Pell Grants to be used for high-quality, short-term programs that can launch graduates into successful careers, while also giving them a path to a two- or four-year degree. Building on H.R. 3497, the bipartisan Jumpstart Our Businesses by Supporting Students Act, introduced by Reps. Cedric Richmond (D–LA) and Anthony Gonzalez (R–OH), H.R. 4674 ensures that before gaining Pell Grant eligibility participating institutions must collaborate with state or local industry or sector partnerships to confirm the value of short-term credentials in the labor market. Students will be able to use Pell Grants for short-term programs that meet the requirements of the Act, including satisfying earnings benchmarks and demonstrating alignment with state or local labor market needs, career pathways (including by providing counseling for students to support their educational and career goals), and longer-term certificate and degree programs. The latter alignment may be achieved within the institution's own programs or in collaboration with partner institutions. Provisions limiting eligibility to public and non-profit institutions that have not been subject to adverse actions or negative actions by accrediting agencies or associations, State or Federal enforcement agencies, or the Secretary over the past five years are included to protect students from being funneled into high-risk and low-quality programs. Institutions must also be on the Eligible Training Provider List maintained by the state under section 122(d) of the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (29 U.S.C. 3512(d)) in order to participate.

As part of the program approval process for short-term programs seeking Pell eligibility under H.R. 4674, institutions must provide an "expected earnings" benchmark that is determined by a related industry or sector partnership and will be used to evaluate the outcomes of completers. The Secretary must then validate the expected earnings of the program. The Committee anticipates that industry and sector partnerships, convened by or acting in partnership with a State or local workforce board, are likely to rely on information available through such boards—to determine expected earnings. This may include information such as state unemployment insurance records; state, regional, and local economic conditions; current job postings; and historical earnings data. But other data collected through State agencies and federal mechanisms could also prove useful in making these determinations. Examples of these other sources include data collected by State community college systems on the earnings of actual credential holders and the U.S. Census Bureau's Post-Secondary Employment Outcomes data. The Committee further expects that, where the aforementioned sources exist and can be determined to be valid and reliable for this purpose, the Secretary will utilize such data as part of the validation process for eligibility of short-term programs for Pell.

Campus-Based Aid

The Federal Work-Study Program (FWS), the Federal Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant (FSEOG), and the Perkins Loan program all provide critical need-based aid to students, administered directly by financial aid officials on college campuses. However, the formulas that allocate funds among schools participating in these programs are not well targeted. As such, the amount of money a participating institution receives under a campus-based aid program now is largely based on how long it has been participating in the program, and not on either the number of students served, or those students level of need. H.R. 4674 phases out the current allocation formulas for these campus-based aid programs, replacing them with formulas based on the level of unmet need at institutions and the percentage of low-income students present on campus. To ensure that institutions have time to adjust to the new formula allocations, H.R. 4674 includes a five-year phase-in period and also increases authorization levels for the campus-based aid programs. The Committee believes the changes to these programs highlight the vital role financial aid administrators make in our current higher education funding system, while recognizing that any new federal investments in higher education must be targeted and equitable.

In addition to modernizing the formula for campus based-aid, H.R. 4674 also makes significant changes to each of the campus-based aid programs. First, the bill amends the FWS program to better align students jobs with their intended careers. Additionally, to reward participating institutions that are serving low-income students well, H.R. 4674 includes a bonus allocation for campuses in the top 20 percent of institutions that are enrolling and graduating students receiving Pell Grants. The bill also preserves graduate student participation in the program, providing critical funds to low-income students to access a graduate degree.

Aside from changes to the allocation formulas, H.R. 4674 improves FSEOG by increasing authorization levels for the program. Given that 19% of students in academic year 2015–2016 who received a Pell Grant also received FSEOG,³⁰ by increasing the authorization levels, the Committee intends to direct more grant aid to low income students and reduce the portion of their need financed by loans. The bill also creates a new competitive grant program for campuses participating in FSEOG to administer emergency grant aid to students outside of the standard financial aid award. James Kvaal, in his testimony before the Committee this Congress on college affordability, stated that, “Low-income students share the complex realities of other low-income Americans, such as the need to support children and other family members, unstable low-wage jobs, and unexpected expenses like car repairs. The underfunded, blunt instrument of our financial aid system has little flexibility to help students meet extra needs or absorb unexpected financial blows.”³¹

The Committee believes the emergency grant aid program gives institutions that needed flexibility to help students manage financial emergencies. A flat tire, food insecurity, or loss of housing should not prevent students from obtaining their degrees, and the Committee hopes this program will provide results to be expanded upon in future reauthorizations.

And finally, H.R. 4674 revives the Perkins Loan program. In 2015 with the passage of H.R. 3594, the Federal Perkins Loan Program Extension Act of 2015,³² Congress extended the Perkins loan program for an additional year, but authority to make new loans expired in 2017.³³ Recognizing the need for an additional campus-based loan program to provide flexibility to financial aid administrators, H.R. 4674 restores Perkins by dedicating a sizable portion of loan volume from the Direct Loan program to be administered at the campus level. The major difference between these loans and Direct Loans, however, is that administrators could provide needed extra capital to undergraduates and graduates at a fixed five percent interest rate. The new Direct Perkins Loan program maintains the critical elements of the previous program—the fixed interest rate and ability of campus administrators to package Perkins as part of a student’s financial aid package—while ensuring that students can easily benefit from the existing protections of the Direct Loan Program such as accessing PSLF and IBR. Prior to the introduction of H.R. 4674, the Committee worked with Rep. Suzanne Bonamici (D–OR) and Rep. Derek Kilmer (D–WA) to incorporate H.R. 792 the Opportunities for Success Act of 2019 and H.R. 4876 the Earning Experience Act of 2019 and with Rep. Joseph Morelle (D–NY) and Rep. Katie Hill (D–CA) to incorporate H.R. 4308 the bipartisan CAMPUS Act to introduce standalone bills including these changes to the campus-based aid programs.

Dual Enrollment

Since the last reauthorization of HEA, there has been a marked increase in the utilization of programs that allow students to receive college credit before they get to college. Dual enrollment and early college high school programs allow students to earn college credits at little to no cost to the student while still in high school. Particularly for low-income students, these opportunities promote a college-going culture and allow students to earn college credits at little to no cost, improving the affordability of a college degree. Research suggests that dual enrollment and concurrent enrollment programs increase students’ likelihood of enrolling in and completing a postsecondary degree, and that these impacts are stronger for disadvantaged groups.³⁴ Multiple rigorous studies have shown that early college high schools increase postsecondary enrollment and associate’s degree attainment.³⁵ Other studies examining a range of less-intensive dual enrollment and dual-credit models report similar impacts on enrollment and degree attainment in two-year colleges, but results on their effect on four-year college-going are more mixed.³⁶ Across studies, outcomes are generally stronger and more positive for underrepresented students of color, first-generation, and lower-income students,³⁷ suggesting that early college programs may go far in reducing gaps in postsecondary enrollment and attainment. As such, the Committee strongly believes a reauthorization of HEA should include policies both to support existing dual enrollment models and to incentivize their replication.

While dual enrollment and college in high school programs show promise in helping students access college, reducing the cost, and decreasing time-to-degree, the impact of these programs is hampered by pervasive inequities in our K–12 system, which result in many low-income students and students of color being denied opportunities to participate in high-quality programs. To ensure that low-income students have access to programs that work, H.R. 4674 creates the Jumpstart to College program. This program targets grants to low-income school districts to create college in high school programs. The bill also provides states with funding to increase student access to early credit pathways, including dual enrollment, early college high schools, and Advanced Placement and International Baccalaureate programs. Prior to introduction, Committee worked with Rep. Antonio Espaillet (D–NY) to introduce H.R. 4108, the Jumpstart on College Act, standalone legislation including these provisions.

TEACH Grants

Our nation is currently facing a teacher shortage that is preventing schools from providing the best possible education for our children. More than 100,000 classrooms in elementary, middle, and high schools across the country are impacted by this teacher shortage. These classrooms are currently occupied by individuals who lack the education and skills to effectively teach and prepare children to enter the workforce and become productive members of our society.³⁸

To serve as an incentive for individuals to pursue teaching, the Teacher Education Assistance for College and Higher Education (TEACH) Grants were authorized in 2007 to attract individuals into the teaching field and place those teachers in high-need school districts teaching high-need subject areas.³⁹ If teachers receiving grants failed to meet the service requirements of the program, the upfront grant aid they received would be converted to unsubsidized loans. In 2018, the Department released a review of the program that revealed that thousands of individuals had their grants converted to loans despite meeting the service requirements of the program, often due to issues with paperwork.⁴⁰ While the Committee appreciates the steps the Department has taken to address the issues raised about the program, it believes more should and could be done. H.R. 4674 makes significant improvements to the TEACH Grant program with the goal of further reducing the number of recipients who could potentially see their grants wrongly converted to loans.

H.R. 4674 makes reforms to the TEACH Grant program to help ensure that only individuals that did not meet the service requirements see their grants converted to loans. First, the bill changes the annual grant amount from up to $4,000 a year by backloading the grant and allowing only juniors and seniors to receive up to $8,000 each year. This change ensures that only students committed to being teachers receive the grant aid. Further, it is Committee's belief that backloading the grant would allow for individuals to use TEACH Grant funding to offset teacher licensure and credentialing costs. Second, H.R. 4674 requires servicers to be in better contact with grantees about when paperwork is due and requires that grants cannot be converted to loans until an individual cannot mathematically meet their four-year service requirement, as opposed to any initial interruption of service that theoretically could be made up in time. Third, H.R. 4674 provides flexibility for grantees if they have made a good faith effort to meet the requirements of the grant but their school, teacher duties, or subject area no longer meet the initial terms. Fourth, H.R. 4674 directs the Secretary to explore how to streamline the various applications for grants and loan forgiveness available to teachers.

And in a final reform, H.R. 4674 opens up the TEACH grant to individuals pursuing an associate's degree in early childhood education. In 2015, the National Academies of Science concluded that a college education should become the norm for early childhood teachers.⁴¹ Currently, only half of teachers in early childhood centers and a third of teachers in home-based settings have either an associate's or bachelor's degree.⁴² The Committee believes that the TEACH grants could become an invaluable tool to bring well-educated workers into early childhood settings to ensure a strong start for our nation's youngest children. Prior to introduction of H.R. 4674, the Committee worked with Rep. Frederica Wilson (D-FL), Rep. Mark Takano (D-CA) and Rep. Jahana Hayes (D-CT) to introduce H.R. 4578, the BETTER TEACH Grants Act of 2019 and with Rep. Abby Finkenauer (D-IA) and Rep. Wilson to introduce H.R. 4342, the Reducing Extra Teaching Authentication Impacting New Teachers Act.

Federal Student Loans

H.R. 4674 makes substantial changes to the federal student loan program to increase affordability by ensuring borrowers can repay their loans without struggling financially. Since the last reauthorization of HEA, the student loan volume has increased as more students have had to borrow, and the average loan amount has grown.⁴³ These drivers of loan volume are themselves due to the combination of state disinvestment and a more socioeconomically diverse student body enrolling in college. Between 2000 and 2016, the share of public college bachelor's degree recipients with federal or private student loan debt increased from 60 percent to 66 percent.⁴⁴ In constant dollars, the average student now borrows $27,050 in federal loans to complete a four-year degree—$10,5250 more than in 1999. Students who borrow and complete two-year degrees borrow an average of $18,060 in federal student loans—$9,220 more than in 1999.⁴⁵ While federal loans provided these borrowers with the means to enroll in college, families across the nation feel squeezed by the financial pressure of repaying a degree that once cost less. To promote the top level goal of college affordability, H.R. 4674 makes student loan repayment simpler to understand, less expensive, and easier to pay off.

Simpler to Understand

Even without a comprehensive HEA reauthorization, the federal student loan system has undergone major changes in the last decade. In order to better protect borrowers while reducing costs to the government, Congress ended the private, federally guaranteed loan program (Federal Family Education Loan or FFEL) and transitioned into Direct Loans in 2010.⁴⁶ To help borrowers manage their debt, Congress and the Obama Administration established several new income-driven repayment plans.⁴⁷ The array of income-driven repayment plans, in addition to the three non-income-driven repayment plans, make it difficult for borrowers to navigate and determine the best plan for their financial situation.

H.R. 4674 streamlines the nine current federal repayment plans to just two: a fixed repayment plan and an IBR plan. Under the fixed repayment plan, borrowers repay their loans at a set payment for a set amount of time based on their original loan balance. To improve financial stability for low- and middle-income borrowers, the new IBR plan uses more generous and better targeted repayment terms than current repayment plans. The IBR plan caps monthly payments at 10 percent of a borrower's discretionary income, defined as the portion of their adjusted gross income (AGI) above 250 percent of the poverty line for a single borrower earning less than $80,000 or a married borrower earning less than $160,000. This means that borrowers who earn 250 percent of the poverty line or less ($31,900 for a single person, $41,100 for a borrower in a household of two) pay $0 per month until their earnings reach that threshold. After 20 years of repayment, the IBR plan forgives any remaining undergraduate and graduate debt. These are the only two plans available for new borrowers. Current borrowers have the choice to stay in their current repayment plan but would be encouraged to switch to one of the two new repayment plans. This simplification draws on and builds upon H.R. 4670, the Simplifying Student Loans Act, introduced by Rep. Susan Wild (D-PA).

Another problem borrowers face navigating the current repayment system is income verification—the process by which an IBR payment is initially determined. Because a failure to complete income verification can stop borrowers from enrolling in IBR, H.R. 4674 makes enrolling and staying in IBR easier. First introduced in H.R. 4658, the Empowering Student Borrowers Act, introduced by Rep. Stephanie Murphy (D-FL), H.R. 4674 allows for verbal, secure IBR enrollment. H.R. 4674 also draws on the information-data sharing system between the Department of Education and the U.S. Treasury established in the bipartisan bill entitled the Streamlining Income-driven, Manageable Payments on Loans for Education (SIMPLE) Act, H.R. 3833, introduced by Reps. Bonamici, Paul Mitchell (R-MI), Seth Moulton (D-MA), and Brian Fitzpatrick (R-PA) to allow for automatic recertification of income and family size required under IBR plans. The Committee's intent is to reduce the number of borrowers who fall out of IBR and enter delinquency when faced with a fixed payment they cannot afford.

These changes to simplify repayment will also affect other federal student loan programs. For example, changes to repayment will make the PSLF program easier to understand and participate. PSLF was intended to allow teachers, health care professionals, servicemembers, and others working in public and private, non-profit jobs to benefit from loan forgiveness after 10 years of eligible payments. This benefit was intended for Direct Loan borrowers making payments under both the standard repayment plan and the income-driven repayment plans. Unfortunately, the eligibility requirements were poorly marketed and individuals who were in the wrong repayment plan (i.e. extended or graduated repayment plans) found themselves inexplicably ineligible for forgiveness at the end of the 10 years. A 2018 GAO report on PSLF identified a breakdown in communication between the Department, loan servicers, and student borrowers.⁴⁸ The authors found that only 96 of 28,000 applicants received their promised loan forgiveness when the first wave of eligible borrowers applied in 2017—a 99.6 percent denial rate.⁴⁹ In response to high denial rates and widespread confusion among borrowers, Congress established the Temporary Expanded PSLF (TEPSLF) program in 2018 to allow borrowers who were in the wrong repayment plan to be eligible. A second GAO report found that, yet again, the Department denied 99 percent of the new TEPSLF applicants.⁵⁰ GAO recommended the Department make critical reforms to the program. While the Department agreed with all the recommendations in both reports, at the time of the filing of this report, it has yet to fully implement the recommendations.⁵¹

The Committee regrets that Department displeasure with the PSLF program has contributed to poor management of the program, and it hopes these new reforms will ensure the Department will work in good faith with public service employees to ensure that paperwork complications and miscommunication by the Department or loan servicers do not prohibit public servants from accessing loan forgiveness.

To that end, H.R. 4674 allows individuals who were previously in the wrong repayment plan to count monthly payments made under those plans as eligible PSLF payments once they opt in to the newly created IBR plan. The Act also simplifies PSLF by allowing FFEL borrowers to consolidate into a Direct Loan without losing their prior payments, making participation in PSLF more equitable for these borrowers. Additionally, given the changes made to how prepayments are considered, it is the Committee's intent that "pay-ahead" status will no longer interfere with payment counts under PSLF.

H.R. 4674 also expands the PSLF program to allow individuals who work for certain Veteran Service Organizations—such as the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars—and farmers to be eligible for the program. The Act clarifies that a physician working at a non-profit hospital or other health care facility in a state that prohibits the direct hiring of physicians, such as California and Texas, is also eligible to participate in PSLF. Further, the Act allows teachers to count teacher loan payments toward the teacher loan forgiveness program at the same time as PSLF. This change allows teacher borrowers to get their loans forgiven through PSLF faster. H.R. 4674 also makes other reforms recommended by GAO that improve the implementation of the program in order to reduce borrower confusion. The PSLF provisions in the Act draw broadly on H.R. 4391, the PSLF Modernization Act, introduced by Reps. Jimmy Panetta (D-CA) and Marcia Fudge (D-OH), and H.R. 2441, the What You Can Do For Your Country Act, introduced by Reps. Paul Sarbanes (D-MD) and Mark DeSaulnier (D-CA). It also includes H.R. 3232, the bipartisan Young Farmer Success Act, introduced by Reps. Joe Courtney (D-CT) and Glenn Thompson (R-PA) and H.R. 4607, the bipartisan Stopping Doctor Shortages Act, introduced by Reps. Josh Harder (D-CA), Paul Cook (R-CA), Joaquin Castro (D-TX), Dan Crenshaw (R-TX), and Karen Bass (D-CA).

To improve servicing specifically, H.R. 4674 makes changes to the Federal Student Aid (FSA) office to better serve borrowers. The FSA office manages a student loan portfolio that affects one out of every six adult Americans and one-third of young adults. Despite its importance, little has been done legislatively to improve FSA operations over the last 20 years. The bill updates FSA's performance goals to ensure students and borrowers are better served. It also transforms FSA's ombudsman into a borrower advocate to provide borrowers with an individual at the Department who can assist in addressing their complaints and concerns. These provisions are from H.R. 4596, the Student Loan Advocacy Act, and H.R. 4627, the Student Borrower Advocate Act, introduced by Reps. Mary Gay Scanlon (D-PA) and Ilhan Omar (D-MN).

Additionally, H.R. 4674 directs the Secretary to produce a common manual for loan servicing to ensure quality of practice and better borrower satisfaction. This provision is from H.R. 3519, the Better Service to Borrowers Act of 2019 introduced by Reps. Kim Schrier (D-WA), Colin Allred (D-TX), Casten, and Kendra Horn (D-OK). Collectively, the Committee expects these changes will make it easier for borrowers to understand repayment and will make it simpler for the Department and loan servicers to implement.

Less Expensive

Aside from containing costs, disincentivizing state disinvestment, and lowering dependence on loans, H.R. 4674 also reduces other hidden costs in higher education borrowing. For example, provisions of H.R. 4674 allow current borrowers to take advantage of lower interest rates by giving them a chance to refinance their old debt at the same rates offered to new borrowers. Interest rates on Subsidized Direct Loans are lower now (2.75 percent) than they have been at any point in the last ten years. The Act also allows private student loan borrowers to refinance their private loans into the Direct Loan program at today's interest rates. These provisions come from H.R. 1707, the Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act, introduced by Rep. Courtney (D-CT).

Additionally, borrowers are currently forced to pay an origination fee each time they borrow money from the government. The fee is a percent of the total loan and the percent differs based on the type of loan. Subsidized and unsubsidized Direct Loan borrowers pay 1.057 percent of their loan amount and graduate students and parent borrowers who borrow PLUS loans pay 4.228 percent of their loan amount.⁵² From 2012–17, the federal government charged borrowers more than $8.3 billion in origination fees.⁵³ Additionally, because interest accrues on the full loan amount—including on the origination fee even though the borrower never receives that money—this provision adds essentially hidden, unnecessary costs to the borrower. H.R. 4674 makes borrowing less expensive by eliminating the origination fees on all federal student loans, a long-time bipartisan policy found in H.R. 3674, the Eliminating the Hidden Student Loan Tax Act introduced by Reps. Susan Davis (D-CA), Lloyd Smucker (R-PA), and Sharice Davids (D-KS).

H.R. 4674 also removes interest capitalization penalties that currently accrue when a borrower leaves forbearance and certain deferments. The Committee believes that borrowers who face a financial hardship so great that they must pause their student loan payments should not be penalized with additional debt for taking this action. Individuals who defer their loans due to unemployment or financial hardship would be spared from having the interest capitalized on their loans under H.R. 4674. Borrowers who receive deferments for graduate fellowships and Fulbright Grants would also be spared from interest capitalization. These provisions build on H.R. 4590, the End Capitalization for Struggling Borrowers Act, H.R. 4590, introduced by Reps. Danny Davis (D-IL), Casten, and Abigail Spanberger (D-VA).

After the Great Recession, higher education experienced an influx of students, in turn driving up the costs to administer the Pell Grant Program. To generate savings and stabilize the Pell Grant program, subsidized loans for graduate students were eliminated and time limits for subsidized loans were established. While these changes helped defray costs to the government, it also made federal student loans more costly for students. H.R. 4674 overturns these two changes. It allows graduate students to qualify for subsidized loans at the same interest rates available for undergraduate borrowers taking out unsubsidized loans. This provision builds upon H.R. 3418, the Protecting Our Students by Terminating Graduate Rates that Add to Debt (POST GRAD) Act, introduced by Rep. Judy Chu (D-CA). H.R. 4674 also eliminates the provision that bars students from borrowing subsidized loans after being enrolled in a program for more than 150 percent of the length of the academic program. The elimination of this provision, which is commonly referred to as the Subsidized Usage Limit Applies (SULA) flag, is from H.R. 4502, the Giving Relief and Dollars to Undergraduates for Adequate Time for Education Act, introduced by Reps. Casten, Debra Haaland (D-NM), Raja Krishnamoorthi (D-IL) and Sylvia Garcia (D-TX).

Additionally, H.R. 4674 removes interest capitalization after a borrower leaves forbearance and certain deferments. This means individuals who defer their loans due to unemployment or financial hardship would be spared from having the interest capitalized on their loans. Borrowers who receive deferments for graduate fellowships and Fulbright Grants would also be spared from interest capitalization. These provisions build on the End Capitalization for Struggling Borrowers Act, H.R. 4590, introduced by Reps. Danny Davis, Casten, and Spanberger.

Easier to Pay Off

Finally, to increase affordability, H.R. 4674 includes further programmatic changes to the federal student loan program to make the act of paying loans simpler for the borrower. While data show that most borrowers do pay off their loans, there are certain borrowers who are at higher risk of defaulting. Research shows that Black bachelor's degree graduates default at five times the rate of white graduates (21 versus 4 percent), and are more likely to default than white dropouts.⁵⁴ Other research shows that when compared to other racial groups Black Americans have substantially less familial wealth to fall back on in the event of a job loss or other economic stressor.⁵⁵ Familial wealth notwithstanding, the chance of default for all borrower increases significantly if they attend a for-profit institution. Students attending for-profit colleges are at particularly high risk of default—more than two-thirds of Black dropouts who ever attended a for-profit college default within twelve years.⁵⁶ In fact all students who do not graduate are also more likely to default than their peers.⁵⁷

Defaulting on student loans is among the worst outcomes for students. Over one million borrowers default a year, suffering punitive consequences that can follow them for a lifetime.⁵⁸ The Committee firmly believes it is in the best interest of both the federal government and borrowers to make every effort to keep borrowers who are trying to repay their loans out of default. To protect struggling borrowers from the severe consequences of default, H.R. 4674 automatically places borrowers who are more than 120 days delinquent into the newly formed IBR plan. This change will hopefully prevent borrowers who have a financial impediment from defaulting by modifying their payment to match their income. H.R. 4674 also removes the existing burdensome paperwork requirements for loan discharge of borrowers who are totally and permanently disabled by requiring the Secretary of Education to establish procedures to obtain income information during the three-year monitoring period currently required by HEA without further borrower action. These provisions are based on H.R. 3833, the bipartisan SIMPLE Act, referenced earlier.

H.R. 4674 improves the process for borrowers attempting to rehabilitate defaulted loans. It allows previously defaulted borrowers who have made nine payments required under current law to rehabilitate their loan to be automatically placed into IBR to help them smoothly transition from rehabilitation to repayment. Further, the bill allows a servicer to remove default from borrowers credit reports after they have consolidated their loans or paid them off in full. This is currently only available to borrowers that rehabilitate their loans. These provisions are from H.R. 4395, the Clean Slate through Consolidation Act, introduced by Reps. Haley Stevens (D-MI) and Debbie Mucarsel-Powell (D-FL) and H.R. 4396, the Clean Slate through Repayment Act, introduced by Mucarsel-Powell.

Current law penalizes some borrowers due to life circumstances unrelated to loan repayment, like divorce. H.R. 4674 allows individuals who previously consolidated their student loan debt with their spouse's debt to separate their remaining balance and only be held liable for their share. These provisions are from the bipartisan bill entitled the Joint Consolidation Loan Separation Act, H.R. 2728, introduced by Reps. David Price (D-NC), Bradley Byrne (R-AL), and Stevens.

H.R. 4674 also helps parents who have taken out loans to support their children's college education to more easily pay off debt. Under current law, Parent PLUS borrowers are ineligible to make payments on those loans based on their income. The Act allows both Parent PLUS loans and consolidation loans that repay Parent PLUS loans to be eligible for IBR. This provision is from the H.R. 3353, the Parent PLUS Loan Improvement Act of 2019, introduced by Rep. Fudge. Additionally, H.R. 4674 extends total and permanent disability forgiveness to Parent PLUS loan holders if their student sustains a total and permanent disability. This provision is based on H.R. 2180, Domenic and Ed's Law, introduced by Rep. James Langevin (D-RI).

Simplifying the FAFSA and Providing Better Financial Aid Information

Each year, thousands of eligible students fail to apply for financial aid, causing them to leave money on the table and, in many cases, delay or abandon postsecondary enrollment. H.R. 4674 takes a number of steps to simplify the FAFSA, particularly for the lowest income students for whom FAFSA completion represents a significant barrier. Prior to the introduction of H.R. 4674, the Committee worked with Reps. Lauren Underwood (D-IL), Lucy McBath (D-GA), Gregorio Kilili Camacho Sablan (D-MP), and Lloyd Doggett (D-TX) to introduce standalone versions of these provisions.

H.R. 4674 reduces the number of questions on the FAFSA by placing the applicant into one of three pathways based on the complexity of a student's finances. Importantly, students who have benefited from, or whose families have benefited from, a means-tested federal benefit during the two years prior to application will automatically be determined to have no expected family contribution (EFC), thereby maximizing their federal eligibility without requiring them to provide any additional information. The Act also increases the income threshold for qualifying for the so-called automatic zero EFC to $37,000 and requires dependent and independent students who receive Pell Grants to file the FAFSA only one time. The bill also makes necessary changes to conform with changes in federal tax forms resulting from the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (PL 115-97).

H.R. 4674 increases support for working students and provides the FAFSA in multiple languages, among other improvements. It also extends a current-law benefit for the dependents of police officers and active duty members of the military who are killed in the line of duty to the spouses of those individuals. Individuals who meet the qualifications of the section are deemed to have a zero EFC, allowing them to maximize their eligibility for federal student aid.

Students who successfully complete the FAFSA often face further confusion due to wide variation in the structure, quality, and accuracy of financial aid offers, also known as award letters. To remedy this problem, H.R. 4674 incorporates language from the bipartisan FACT Act offered by Reps. Lori Trahan (D-MA) and Smucker, which requires the Secretary of Education to establish requirements for standardizing financial aid offers based on extensive consumer testing and stakeholder input. Under the Act, each financial aid offer will also include a standardized quick reference box which will provide the most important information for comparing aid offers from multiple institutions. H.R. 4674 additionally incorporates provisions from H.R. 1915, the bipartisan Net Price Calculator Improvement Act introduced by Reps. Elijah Cummings (D-MD) and Brett Guthrie (R-KY) to make improvements to the Net Price Calculator system, so that prospective students may have a more accurate understanding of the true cost of college.

In order to ensure that students receive accurate estimates of college costs and to enhance the reliability of the federal aid system, H.R. 4674 sets requirements for the calculation of estimates of off-campus room and board. Under current law, institutions have complete discretion over how to determine these estimates. Research has uncovered significant variation in housing cost estimates among institutions located in the same city or region, raising concerns about the accuracy and reliability of the cost of attendance figure.⁵⁹ Under- and over-estimates of cost of attendance can both have major consequences for students. For example, underestimating living costs can make an institution's total cost of attendance look artificially low while limiting a student's access to financial aid and ultimately make it harder for them to afford and persist in college. Overestimating cost of attendance can result in an institution capturing a disproportionate amount of funds through campus-based aid programs because allocation formulas for such programs rely on levels of unmet need, which in turn are based on cost of attendance and expected family contribution. Furthermore, debt-free college models rely heavily on an accurate estimate of total cost of attendance, so ensuring the validity and reliability of the off-campus living cost component will be essential to ongoing policy development in that area.

Recognizing these issues and the need to provide more accurate information to students on college costs, H.R. 4674 requires the Secretary to prescribe at least one methodology for institutions to use in determining the cost of room and board for students living off campus for the purpose of calculating the projected cost of attendance. These provisions are designed to ensure the accuracy of off-campus living estimates while leaving institutions the discretion necessary to accurately reflect contextual variations and nuances of different student populations. The Committee realized the unique geography of an institution and the surrounding area might mean that a single, federally-proscribed methodology is not appropriate. Standard guidelines that are county-level, for example, may not be appropriate for a school, if the costs of off-campus housing that is convenient to the school or where most students live deviates from county-averages. Availability of public transportation also affects where students are able to live and therefore, their costs. In recognition of these facts, the Act explicitly allows the Department to offer multiple methodologies and provides a waiver for institutions that opt out of using the methodology or methodologies developed by the Department. The requirements of H.R. 4674 are not intended to require total consistency within regions but are instead designed to ensure accurate cost estimates upon which students, families, and policymakers can rely.

H.R. 4674 Improves the Quality of Higher Education

Over the last decade many large for-profit college companies have collapsed abruptly, leaving tens of thousands of students with no degree, high debt loads, and few options. To protect students from predatory actors and better address school closures, H.R. 4674 strengthens the role of each entity responsible for oversight in higher education—accreditors, states, and the federal government. It further provides institutions with necessary support to meet standards and reinstates critical consumer protections that were abandoned by the Trump Administration.

90/10 Rule

The federal government has a crucial role in ensuring appropriate administration of federal student aid funds and evaluating institutional eligibility to participate in federal student aid programs under title IV of the HEA. H.R. 4674 takes several steps to strengthen federal oversight to protect students and taxpayers.

For-profit institutions have, by definition, a fiduciary duty to shareholders to maximize profits. This duty creates a set of goals for for-profit colleges that simply do not exist for non-profit institutions. For for-profit institutions, success is determined by how much tuition money is brought in and not solely by the quality of education provided to students. Due to this incentive, the for-profit sector has been riddled with fraud and abuse for decades, dating back to the expansion of federally funded educational aid to students for college, beginning with the original G.I. Bill.⁶⁰

The incentives of for-profit colleges often result in high costs and poor outcomes. In the 2018–19 year, average tuition and fees at a two-year for-profit college was nearly five times that of a two-year public institution ($15,360 vs. $3,313 respectively).⁶¹ Considering costs to both students and taxpayers, research shows that the cost to society of for-profit college is roughly $15,600 more per student per year than for students in community college.⁶² Further, research on the sector shows that the costs to students and society are much higher in for-profits relative to other sectors and that the outcomes of students attending for-profit colleges are worse on nearly every measure, including debt, default, and earnings, even after controlling for differences in student background characteristics.⁶³

Some members of the Committee have claimed that costs in higher education are linked to an increase in available federal aid, so that when the federal government provides more aid, schools raise their costs to capture more of it. Research demonstrates that this hypothesis only applies to the for-profit sector, which is the only sector of higher education where institutions have been shown to raise tuition to attract more federal student aid dollars rather than provide a higher-quality education. In one study, aid-eligible for-profit colleges charged tuition that was 78 percent higher than similar for-profits that did not receive aid.⁶⁴ In light of this, the Committee believes it is critical to have safeguards in place for institutions that present the highest level of risk to students and taxpayers—especially those that rely on federal dollars to pay shareholders and generate profit.

To ensure that for-profit colleges offer high-quality programs, Congress implemented what is now known as the 90/10 rule. Under this statutory requirement, each for-profit institution must derive at least 10 percent of its revenue from non-title IV dollars. This provision is meant to serve as a market-based consumer check on programs; if the for-profit school was offering high-quality programs, the institution should be able to attract at least 10 percent of its revenue from sources outside of the federal government.⁶⁵ The HEA originally required for-profit institutions to derive at least 15 percent of its revenue from non-title IV funds, but Congress lowered this threshold to 10 percent in 1998.⁶⁶ Congress further weakened this metric in 2008, by allowing institutions to continue to participate in title IV even after failing to derive funds from non-title IV funds. An institution who fails the metric twice loses access to title IV.⁶⁷

The current 90/10 metric also has large loopholes that are exploited by the for-profit sector: GI Bill funding and other federal funding are not counted as federal aid in the 90 percent. The rule therefore creates a perverse and powerful incentive for for-profit institutions to aggressively recruit student veterans. The result is that an institution can effectively generate 100 percent of its revenue from taxpayer dollars rendering the market-based check on quality ineffective. Further, many for-profit institutions have looked to avoid the 90/10 rule and other sector-specific accountability requirements in HEA by converting to non-profit institutions.

H.R. 4674 closes these critical loopholes in the current 90/10 rule by counting veterans' benefits and all other federal benefits in addition to funds under title IV of HEA in the federal share, ensuring that 90/10 is a meaningful measure of a for-profit institutions' financial viability and risk to taxpayers. It also restores the proportion back to 85/15 and makes the requirement a portion of the definition of institutional eligibility. The Committee believes this will strengthen the market-based test of value and restore the efficacy of this longstanding metric, as originally intended by Congress. To ensure that institutions have time to come into compliance, H.R. 4674 phases in these changes, requiring institutions to meet the new requirements of 85/15 starting in July 1, 2022 and eliminates the two-year provisional participation for failure, starting on July 1, 2023. H.R. 4674 also includes provisions that require the Secretary to create a transparent process for for-profit institutions applying to convert to non-profits and requires that such institutions applying to convert to non-profits and requires that such institutions abide by all rules and regulations that apply to for-profit institutions for the first five years after conversion. These provisions were included in H.R. 4725, the Students Not Profits Act, introduced by Rep. Pramila Jayapal (D-WA).

Gainful Employment and Borrower Defense

H.R. 4674 reverses decisions by the Trump Administration to rollback consumer protections in higher education. Notably, H.R. 4674 reinstates both the Gainful Employment rule and the Borrower Defense to Repayment regulation put in place by the Obama Administration and subsequently rescinded by the Trump Administration.

The Gainful Employment rule is designed to hold career programs at both for-profit and private non-profit institutions accountable for student outcomes. Research on this sector is clear: students leaving for-profit colleges have lower earnings and higher debt than similar students in the public sector, even after controlling for differences in student demographics. In the most comprehensive study on the topic, students in for-profit certificate programs had annual earnings that were $2,100 lower and debt that was $5,000 higher than similar students in similar public sector programs.⁶⁸ In light of these differences, it is not surprising that for-profit student borrowers are more likely to default on their student loans. Among all new students entering the for-profit sector in 2004, nearly half had defaulted within 12 years (47 percent)—a default rate nearly four times the rate seen in other sectors.⁶⁹ H.R. 4674 ensures that students in career programs and for-profit colleges are not left with insurmountable debt.

The original 1965 HEA did not allow for-profit colleges or non-degree training programs in other sectors to access federal student aid.⁷⁰ Changes in 1968 and 1972 allowed these colleges and programs to access title IV under the condition that they “prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation”⁷¹ but the term “gainful employment” was left undefined.⁷² Without a definition of gainful employment, these programs received unfettered access to taxpayer dollars with no accountability for student outcomes. In 2014, the Obama Administration established a definition of gainful employment based on a graduates’ debt and earnings. H.R. 4674 requires the Secretary of Education to reestablish a compliance standard for gainful employment that includes a debt-to-earnings metric similar to the thresholds established in the 2016 rule. This metric will ensure that for-profit programs cannot leave students with more debt than they can repay. Additionally, H.R. 4674 requires programs that abide by the Gainful Employment rule to disclose certain information to students. Given the incidents of programs burying the disclosures on websites, it is the Committee’s intent that the institutions find clear and conspicuous ways to disclose the information to its students via its website.

The Committee recognizes that the gainful employment metric plays a critical role in protecting students and incentivizing institutions to reduce tuition and close low-performing programs. In the first round of data released under Gainful Employment in 2017, 29,000 programs across all sectors were subject to the rule. More than 800 programs failed the Gainful Employment metric, 98 percent of them were offered by for-profits.⁷³ The evidence also shows that the 2014 rule also prompted many institutions to either close the worst performing programs or improve program quality.⁷⁴ Even former Rep. Steve Gunderson (R-WI), the recently-retired president of the Career Education Colleges and Universities (CECU), the trade association representing for-profit colleges, admitted to the New York Times that the Gainful Employment rule had made for-profit institutions more affordable and responsive to the labor market.⁷⁵ Finally, new research also shows that restricting title IV eligibility from low-performing for-profit institutions shifts students to higher-performing public institutions, potentially lowering debt and default.⁷⁶

In addition to Gainful Employment, H.R. 4674 also reinstates the Borrower Defense of Repayment rules promulgated in 2016. Borrower Defense is a key consumer protection—allowing student loans to be discharged for students who were defrauded by their institution. HEA allows students to assert a defense to repayment of a federal student loan and allows the Secretary to define under what circumstances students have a right to relief. Although the Borrower Defense provision has been in law since 1995, it provided little detail on the process borrowers could use to receive a loan discharge and the Department's process to adjudicate claims.

Given the abrupt closure of Corinthian Colleges in 2015 that left thousands of students without many options to finish their degrees and with high student loan debt, the Obama Administration rewrote the Borrower Defense regulations to standardize the processing of submitting and reviewing claims.⁷⁷

There have been numerous high-profile closures of national for-profit college chains since 2015 with ITT Technical Institutes closing in 2016, Education Corporation of America shutting down in 2018, Vatterott College also closing in 2018, and most recently Dream Center owned schools Argosy and the Art Institutes closing in 2019. These closures have left thousands of students without many options to continue their education and with high amounts of debt. As of September 2019 the Department had discharged hundreds of millions in debt of students impacted by these closures, but there are still thousands of students waiting for relief.⁷⁸

Despite these continued abrupt closures, the Trump Administration not only weakened Borrower Defense, making it more difficult for borrowers to qualify, but has altogether stopped processing student claims. The Trump Administration refused to process a single claim for more than two years, allowing the backlog to grow to more than 200,000 borrower defense claims waiting to be processed.⁷⁹ Secretary DeVos and the Department were found in contempt of court and ordered to pay a $100,000 fine for violating an order to stop collecting on loans owed by Corinthian College students.⁸⁰ When the Department finally started to process claims in December 2019, it implemented a flawed “partial relief” methodology that provided less relief than the Department had originally recommended for defrauded students.⁸¹ Students who were defrauded by predatory institutions are entitled to have their loan discharged under the law—and discharged quickly. The borrower defense provision in H.R. 4674 reestablishes the Obama Administrations processes, including the establishment of a timeline for the fair and expeditious resolution of claims, so that future administrations cannot continue to delay processing while students suffer.

Accountability for All Institutions

In addition to reinstating important Obama-era consumer protections, H.R. 4674 further strengthens the federal government's ability to hold institutions accountable for student outcomes and taxpayer dollars under title IV of HEA.

Improving Accountability Metrics

One of the most important tools for title IV accountability has traditionally been the Cohort Default Rate (CDR), which is the percentage of a school's borrowers that default on their loans within three years. Colleges may lose access to title IV if CDRs exceed certain thresholds. In fulfillment of GAO recommendations,⁸² H.R. 4674 improves the CDR metric by adjusting for the share of borrowers at an institution and the number of borrowers who are in long-term forbearance. Additionally, instead of allowing institutions to remain under a certain threshold without requiring them to improve further, the bill establishes multiple thresholds and requires institutions to improve. Public and non-profit institutions with a large share of low-income students and a high adjusted CDR can receive technical and financial support from the Department to improve student outcomes.

The GAO also recommended the development of an additional loan repayment metric for title IV eligibility.⁸³ Although default is the worst outcome for a borrower, that measure alone may be insufficient for assessing institutional quality. This is particularly true as the Committee anticipates changes to HEA made by H.R. 4674 will result in more student borrowers participating in income-driven repayment plans, significantly reducing the likelihood of default and rendering the CDR less useful for institutional accountability.

H.R. 4674 establishes a new on-time loan repayment metric for accountability. The metric is based on the percentage of students who have paid at least 90 percent of their monthly payments over three years of repayment. Students with a zero balance (including those with a zero-dollar monthly payment under income-driven repayment plans) or in certain types of forbearance and deferments (including educational and military deferment) are considered paid. As this is a new metric, the bill allows for three years of data collection and for the Secretary to determine appropriate timelines and thresholds to ensure that a significant percentage of students in each institution meet the 90 percent on-time repayment metric. Institutions failing the new on-time repayment rate metric would be subject to loss of title IV eligibility, unless they can demonstrate substantial investments in instruction and student services.

The on-time repayment metric has several important components to ensure accountability. First, it is a student-based metric, rather than a dollar-based metric, meaning that it treats all borrowers from an institution equally and ensures that the poor outcomes of students who dropout do not get masked by a small number of successful completers.⁸⁴ Second, in contrast to “balance-based metrics” or “paydown tests,” where repayment is based on the amount of principal repaid, the on-time repayment rate does not disproportionately penalize institutions with a large number of borrowers in income-driven repayment (IDR) plans or students who attend multiple institutions. Research demonstrates that balance-based metrics are not well-aligned with the goals or structure of IDR plans and may not capture progress in repayment outside of the first few months, even for standard plans.⁸⁵ Students in IDR plans may be meeting the terms of their repayment plan, but may nevertheless have monthly payments that are not large enough to fully cover interest, resulting in a failure under a paydown test. Balance-based repayment metrics may further penalize institutions for students who attend and accrue debt from other institutions, by attributing lack of repayment on the total loan balance as a lack of repayment for each institution.⁸⁶ The on-time repayment rate circumvents this problem by focusing on the proportion of payments made on time and by allowing time spent in other institutions to count as paid.

Third, by measuring on-time repayment over the full three years rather than simply at the end of a three-year period, the metric rewards institutions whose students demonstrate consistent repayment success over time, rather than simply reflecting their status (or creating incentives for repayment) at an arbitrary point in time. And, like other repayment rates, the on-time repayment rate generates clear incentives for institutions to help reduce debt (i.e. by lowering tuition) and provide high-quality education to ensure that students develop the tools and skills they need for a successful career that enables them to meet the terms of their repayment plan.

Incentive Compensation

H.R. 4674 improves the enforcement of the incentive compensation ban to protect students from harmful and predatory recruitment tactics. An investigation by the GAO documented misleading and deceptive recruiting practices at each of fifteen campuses they visited.⁸⁷ In 2019 Career Education Corporation (CEC), a large multi-state for-profit college chain, settled two separate cases amidst evidence that the schools engaged in misleading and deceptive recruiting practices. One case brought by 49 Attorneys General alleges CEC used “emotionally charged language emphasizing the pain in prospective students’ lives to pressure them into enrolling,” misrepresented how school credits could be transferred to other schools and told admissions counselors to withhold important information about tuition costs.⁸⁸

Furthermore, some institutions participating in title IV currently have arrangements to pay a separate entity a percentage of tuition revenue if the entity is involved with both recruitment of students and the provision of other services to the institution. It is the Committee’s view that these arrangements are trying to find a loophole in HEA where none exists and are in violation of the intent of the law’s prohibition on incentive compensation.

H.R. 4674 creates a new undercover monitoring program to effectively enforce existing provisions to ensure that schools are deterred from deceptive and misleading recruiting practices. This is a carefully constructed program that is designed to meet and address a well-documented problem. The Committee believes these provisions will create an effective deterrent to misconduct, while doing so in a way that incorporates best practices and important safeguards.

Financial Responsibility

The financial responsibility composite score is an important tool for the Department to effectively identify institutions at risk of closing in order to effectively protect students. However, as Melissa Emrey-Arras of the GAO stated in her testimony during the Committee’s bipartisan hearing on accountability, “the limitations of Education’s financial composite score hamper its effectiveness at identifying at-risk schools.”⁸⁹ Further, GAO found that “the composite score’s inconsistent performance in identifying at-risk schools is due in part to limitations of the underlying formula and the fact that it has remained unchanged for more than 20 years.”⁹⁰

H.R. 4674 requires the Department to undertake a negotiated rulemaking process to reform the composite score calculation methodology in coordination with finance and accounting professionals and further instructs the Inspector General to conduct audits of the composite score every two years to ensure the composite score is accurately reflecting robust and accepted accounting principles. To ensure the Department can better focus on financially risky institutions, H.R. 4674 provides a pathway for high-performing colleges and universities which have received an investment grade rating from a recognized credit rating agency using existing robust industry and professional standards to bypass portions of this scheme, recognizing independent verification of their financial strength. The Committee further expects the Department to follow more closely existing statutory requirements to ensure that the financial responsibility of an institution is accurately reflected.

H.R. 4674 also includes certain automatic, mandatory, and discretionary triggering events that would allow the Secretary to reevaluate an institution's financial circumstances in order to collect financial guarantees from institutions at risk of closure, better protecting students and taxpayers.

Advertising

H.R. 4674 makes further improvements to federal oversight of title IV by ensuring that institutions that do not make significant investments in student learning cannot use taxpayer dollars on marketing and advertising. A 2010 GAO report⁹¹ and a subsequent investigation by the Senate HELP Committee,⁹² drew the Committee's attention to the aggressive and deceptive recruitment practices of for-profit colleges. With industry reports of advertising spending in higher education reaching all-time highs,⁹³ and numerous allegations of false advertising and misrepresentations by for-profit colleges in recent years,⁹⁴ the Committee believes enhanced federal oversight in this area is long overdue.

Currently, the federal government does not require institutions to report expenditures on marketing, recruitment, advertising, or lobbying and title IV funding can be used unrestricted for these activities. In fact, the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS), the core postsecondary education data collection program at the Department, allows institutions to report these expenses under the category of "student services." For this reason, data on advertising are difficult to obtain, but a recent report on online advertising reveals substantial investments by some colleges on advertising—particularly for-profit colleges—while they simultaneously spend very little on instruction.⁹⁵

To address this concern and limit the use of taxpayer funds for marketing activities by predatory institutions, H.R. 4674 makes two key changes. First, it requires all institutions to separately report expenditures on marketing, recruitment, advertising, and lobbying. Second, if an institution spends less than one-third of its revenue from tuition and fees on instruction, the institution shall be subject to a limitation on these expenditures. For these institutions, total expenditures on marketing, recruitment, advertising, and lobbying may not exceed the amount of revenue the institution receives from sources other than federal financial aid (including the GI Bill and other federal funds). This metric provides enforceability, allowing no taxpayer money to be used on advertising and lobbying for institutions that do not make student learning a priority. Institutions in violation of the limitation for two consecutive years will lose access to title IV for at least two years.

The creation of the one-third instructional spending screen in H.R. 4674 is designed to assess the extent to which the revenue from tuition and fees collected by a college from students is actually invested in student learning. Examining how institutions spend their tuition revenue can provide reasonable insight into the priorities of the institution. The Committee views the percentage of tuition and fee revenue spent on instruction as a reasonable metric for assessing whether a school is invested in student learning and success. In deriving the metric, the Committee considered various alternative formulations of an instructional spending screen. Specifically, the Committee considered adding student services and other categories of spending that indirectly support student success to the numerator. This approach was ultimately rejected, in light of ambiguities in the current definitions of student services (e.g., advertising and marketing is included), as well as a lack of data to explore implications and thresholds under a new definition.

The Committee also considered adding estimated percentages of state and local revenues devoted to instruction, but estimating such a percentage was imprecise given current data and overly complicated.⁹⁶ Ultimately, given current data limitations and a desire for clarity, the Committee settled on the simplest instructional spending metric. The one-third threshold was chosen as a reasonable and attainable lower bound on expectations of spending on instruction. Analyses of historic IPEDS data suggests that over the last three years, roughly 1,460 institutions did not spend at least one-third of their revenue on instruction. Over 85 percent of these institutions are for-profit colleges. Notably, while these institutions would be subject to the marketing limitation, most public and non-profit institutions have sufficient revenue from non-title IV sources to still allow reasonable expenditures on the limited activities. Prior to introduction, the Committee worked with Rep. Tom Malinowski (D–NJ) to introduce H.R. 4475, the Higher Education Student Protection Act, standalone legislation that include these provisions.

Short-term Program Accountability

Beyond institution-level accountability, H.R. 4674 further strengthens accountability for short-term programs receiving loans. Under current law, short-term programs lasting between 300 and 600 clock hours must meet only minimal requirements for initial eligibility—a 70 percent completion rate and 70 percent job placement rate—and this is verified only once at the time of the initial eligibility determination. Moreover, job placement rates can be easily manipulated by institutions, as the law offers no consistent defi-dition and there is currently no way to verify such rates.⁹⁷ In fact, job placement rates reported by for-profit colleges have been found to have been inaccurate or misleading on multiple occasions. For example, a Department investigation in 2015 found that Corinthian Colleges misled tens of thousands of students by systematically misrepresenting programs' job placement rates⁹⁸ and the for-profit Career Education Corporation recently settled with state attorneys generals in 48 states and the District of Columbia over allegations of inaccurate job placement data.⁹⁹

To strengthen the current requirements, H.R. 4674 adds a new benchmark earnings metric for these short-term career programs in addition to current law requirements. It requires that program completers have earnings higher than students with only a high school diploma. The Committee believes that any postsecondary vocational programs should be able to show labor market value beyond what an individual would earn without any postsecondary education. To adjust for geographic variation in earnings, the bill allows programs to use local and state-level average high school earnings as benchmarks rather than U.S. averages. To ensure the ongoing success of graduates, the new earnings metric and completion rate requirement will be applied annually. H.R. 4674 further requires these short-term career programs to meet gainful employment requirements.

Accreditation

For too long, accreditors, the private entities that evaluate institutional quality and fitness for title IV aid, have focused on institutional inputs and largely ignored student outputs. This has resulted in several institutions limping along with lackluster outcomes or abruptly closing while still being accredited at the time of closure (e.g. Corinthian College, ITT Tech, and Argosy University). In 2014, the GAO found that accreditors terminated the accreditation of less than one percent of member schools and that accreditors were no more likely to sanction schools with weaker student outcomes than those with stronger outcomes.¹⁰⁰ GAO also found that the Department did not systematically use information on accreditor sanctions to oversee schools and accrediting agencies.¹⁰¹ In 2018, the Center for American Progress found that while most accreditors do collect valuable outcome information, these data are rarely used to hold institutions accountable for poor performance.¹⁰²

H.R. 4674 requires accreditors to focus on two important student achievement outcomes—completion and workforce participation—and makes the accreditation process more transparent. The Act encourages accreditors to use common terminology established by a working group of accreditors and other stakeholders to measure success with student achievement outcomes. Accreditors must set benchmarks for each measure used, and the Secretary has the authority to reject the accreditor-set performance benchmarks she deems to be too low. The Committee intends these outcome metrics to support institutions in improving student outcomes. Additionally, the Act requires the National Advisory Committee on Institutional Quality and Integrity (NACIQI) to regularly evaluate the effectiveness of the measures and the performance benchmarks set by each accreditor. H.R. 4674 also requires disclosures that make the accreditation process and institutions' accreditation status more transparent, so that students and parents can make informed decisions about where to enroll. The Act draws from and builds on H.R. 4579, the Quality Higher Education Act, introduced by Rep. Wilson.

H.R. 4674 also strengthens requirements for who can serve on an accreditation agency's governing board to reduce conflicts of interests. These provisions are from H.R. 4653, the Protecting Undergraduates with Board Limitations from Influence and Conflicts Act, introduced by Rep. Susie Lee (D-NV). The Act also establishes triggers that would require teach-out plans and agreements. These provisions are from the bipartisan bill H.R. 4615, the Stop College Closures Act, introduced by Reps. Donna Shalala (D-FL), Peter King (R-NY), Casten, Fitzpatrick, Moulton, and Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (D-NY).

State Authorization

States have long had the authority to regulate any entity doing business within a state's boundaries. Since its inception, the HEA has required institutions to obtain state approval to be eligible to participate in title IV. However, there were no regulations that clarified this statutory requirement, which meant that some states had virtually no requirements for institutions serving residents in their state. For example, in some states, a business license was all that was required for an IHE to receive state authorization. Fraudulent institutions raced to the bottom to operate in states that provided very little oversight, moving operations if regulations tightened in that state.

H.R. 4674 heightens state authorizers' role in ensuring accountability. It assigns some oversight duties from the accreditors to the states, including ensuring the quality of facilities and meeting occupational licensing standards when applicable. H.R. 4674 also improves information sharing among the triad of the federal government, accreditors, and state authorizers, tasking states with ensuring that student complaints are funneled to appropriate stakeholder to ensure such complaints are appropriately addressed.

The abrupt closures of several large institutions mentioned earlier in the report have revealed substantial gaps in consumer protections. Importantly, the bill requires states to have processes in place to address such school closures. State processes must include the establishment of a tuition recovery fund or equivalent alternative, maintenance of student contact information, and maintained student access to transcripts. And in recognition of the fact that states have the right to enact, regulate, and enforce consumer protection laws that protect their residents, H.R. 4674 does not amend current law to remove or upset that state authority. H.R. 4674 maintains state authority to protect consumers. The Committee worked with Rep. Mike Levin (D-CA) to introduce H.R. 5148, the Higher Education Standards Improvement Act, as stand-alone legislation that include these provisions.

Improving Postsecondary Data

The existing federal postsecondary data infrastructure is messy, duplicative, inefficient, and incomplete.¹⁰³ H.R. 4674 strikes the “student unit record” ban—a provision that prohibits the Secretary from collecting student-level data—and requires the development of a secure postsecondary student data system that uses student-level data to evaluate postsecondary outcomes including transfer, employment, and earnings. These provisions are from the bipartisan bill H.R. 1766, the College Transparency Act, introduced by Reps. Mitchell and Krishnamoorthi, which has attracted over 200 cosponsors in the House. Collecting data at a student level reduces institutional reporting burden while producing better, more complete information to help students, institutions, and policymakers make informed decisions. In order to lessen administrative burden and avoid duplicative reporting, H.R. 4674 allows the Secretary to utilize the new postsecondary student data system to fulfil other reporting requirements under the HEA. H.R. 4674 protects student privacy by, among other things, placing strict limits on the disclosure of data, prohibiting data from being sold or used for law enforcement purposes, safeguarding personally identifiable information, and establishing penalties for the misuse of student data. The Act also requires disaggregation of postsecondary data by race as measured by the American Community Survey (ACS) to fully capture the diverse experiences of students from different racial and ethnic groups, including subgroups within the Asian American and Pacific Islander community.

The new postsecondary student data system will give students, families, and policymakers access to more extensive and accurate data on institutional outcomes than those currently provided through the Integrated Postsecondary Educational Data System (IPEDS). This is especially important for accurately capturing the quality of institutions that serve large shares of students who transfer between institutions, enroll part-time, or follow non-traditional postsecondary pathways. For example, it is well-established that, on average, community college students take longer to complete degree programs than students in other sectors, and they often do so after transferring to a four-year institution.¹⁰⁴ However, existing graduation rate measures often count students who transfer before attaining a credential as non-completers. The Committee expects the Department to use the new postsecondary student data system to accurately capture the success of students who take different paths to meet their educational goals. In developing the public-facing consumer tool required by H.R. 4674, the Committee further urges the Department to explore the use of extended completion measures, including a completion rate reflecting the share of students who graduate or transfer within 300 percent of normal time. Completion measures should also accurately reflect the success of students in longer than standard (e.g. five-year undergraduate) programs and ensure that institutions are given clear credit for contributing to the success of transfer students.

In addition to making groundbreaking improvements in the federal postsecondary data infrastructure, H.R. 4674 ensures that institutions that offer dual enrollment programs aren't penalized when calculating the share of students who receive Pell Grants and extends a provision from the FY2019 spending bill which allows institutions to share information from a student's FAFSA with scholarship-granting organizations if the student provides explicit written permission.

Strengthening Educator Preparation

Since its inception HEA has included provisions to help prepare the next generation of classroom educators. In the last authorization, Congress created the Teacher Quality Partnership grant program (TQP), designed to support reforming the preparation of profession-ready educators at undergraduate and graduate institutions. Based on lessons learned from the last decade of implementation of the TQP, H.R. 4674 addresses the nation's critical teacher shortage by strengthening and scaling up TQP through a robust reauthorization, recognizing more clearly the role of the state in tackling their respective shortages, increasing the requirements and capacity for effective oversight and intervention for at-risk and low-performing educator preparation programs to ensure program improvement, and authorizing funding for competitive grant programs that will diversify the workforce and close shortage gaps in the highest-needs subject areas.

Teacher demand is on the rise due to changes in student enrollment and high levels of teacher attrition.¹⁰⁵ Reducing attrition by half could virtually eliminate teacher shortages, so the Committee believes federal policy must address why teachers leave the profession. Less than one-third of teachers who leave each year leave due to retirement. Rather, nearly half of beginning teachers are leaving the profession before their fifth year.¹⁰⁶ Teachers with little preparation, such as those with alternative certification, leave at rates that are two to three times higher than the rate at which teachers with comprehensive preparation leave the profession in the first year.¹⁰⁷ Alternatively-certified teachers also self-report feeling less prepared than those traditionally prepared at an institution.¹⁰⁸

Teacher preparation research has arrived at a consensus that a residency model, in which teacher candidates receive extended clinical in-classroom experiences under the guidance of an experienced teacher mentor, both effectively prepares teachers to lead students to greater academic gains and stymies profession attrition.¹⁰⁹ This was confirmed at the Committee's hearing, "Educating our Educators: How Federal Policy Can Better Support Teachers and School Leaders". The witness panel consisted of current practitioners, researchers, and policymakers in the field. H.R. 4674 places greater emphasis on the residency model as an allowable use for title II, part A funds. It also makes key updates in pedagogical and classroom management requirements as skills all teachers need to be successful, such as learning to use universal design for learning, embedding comprehensive literacy skills into pedagogy, and being in tune with the social, emotional, and cultural needs of all students via positive behavioral management, including students with disabilities and English language learners.

H.R. 4674 also recognizes the critical role of teacher leaders, experienced and exemplary teachers who take on greater responsibility within their schools through mentorship or formalized leadership roles, play in improving student achievement. The bill creates additional uses for funds in HEA title II, part A to include partnerships for teacher leader development, recognizing a middlerole for experienced teachers to have opportunities for growth and leadership that does not require becoming a school principal but may include earning a teaching leadership credential. While teacher leaders learn to hone their craft in a new role, they may earn an additional stipend for their work. The Committee worked with Reps. Brad Schneider (D-IL), Trone and Underwood on H.R. 3108, the Teachers are Leaders Act from which this provision was taken.

H.R. 4674 also addresses what research suggests is the most consistent factor associated with teachers' decision to stay or leave a school: a lack of support from school administration.¹¹⁰ Teachers who feel unsupported are twice as likely to leave the profession, resulting in revolving doors at far too many schools, missed opportunities for exiting teachers, and time and money wasted on their training. Increasingly, research demonstrates the positive outcomes effective school leaders can have on teaching and learning, particularly for students in high-poverty areas and students of color.¹¹¹ Effective school leadership is only second to effective classroom instruction in boosting student academic achievement.¹¹² Yet school leader preparation receives little attention in comparison to teacher preparation.

The HEA first addressed school leadership preparation in the 2008 reauthorization. Congress authorized a Leadership Development program in which grantees could use title II–A funds on a pre-service leader preparation program in rural schools and only as a supplemental use of funds already being used on a Teacher Residency or pre-baccalaureate program. Since the 2008 reauthorization, significant research has been conducted in the recruitment and preparation of school leaders. The Wallace Foundation invested in six large urban districts to establish strong principal pipeline initiatives that recruit from within district, prepare, and support effective school leaders. An independent evaluation of the Wallace Foundation programming by the RAND Corporation found that building such pipelines of emerging leaders is both a feasible and affordable way for large urban districts to improve schools.¹¹³ RAND found that principals in districts that had developed these pipelines were less likely to leave their schools when compared to districts that had no pipeline initiative.¹¹⁴ RAND suggested these results were because the school leaders were prepared in cohort-style programs pre-service and supported with targeted mentorship in their first years of principalship.¹¹⁵ Students in schools with a principal prepared in a pipeline initiative outperformed students from schools in the control group in reading by 6.22 percentile points and in math by 2.87 percentile points.¹¹⁶ The Committee also heard direct testimony about the value of prepared principals on school turnaround during the “Educating Our Educators” hearing from Tricia McManus, Assistant Superintendent of Leadership, Professional Development, and School Transformation of Hillsborough County Public Schools in Florida.

Reflecting the principal induction research, H.R. 4674 expands TQP to include Principal and School Leader residency programs, including the creation of pipelines within a school district, as an allowable use of HEA title II–A funds by themselves. TQP grants are renamed Teacher and School Leader Quality Partnership grants (TSLQP). Building on a successful model, principal or school leader residency design requirements mirror the Teacher Residency program requirements, including combining graduate level coursework in cohorts as well as ongoing supports while on the job such as mentorship.

H.R. 4674 also allows TSLQP grantees to develop another form of a pipeline known as Grow Your Own. Grow Your Own was born in response to the research that demonstrates teachers prefer to teach in the communities they grew up in.¹¹⁷ This allows high-need school districts to recruit and support paraprofessionals and other non-teaching staff who already work in the school district in gaining their teacher certifications to teach in their own communities. Partnerships provide tuition support and may provide other financial assistance as candidates work through the program. Grow Your Own programs can close a gap in high-need shortage areas that are otherwise hard to staff because they recruit from a committed-to-the-community pool.

To ensure TSLQP funds are most effectively used, H.R. 4674 strengthens program accountability reporting metrics and requires both traditional institutions and alternative certification programs offering preparation programs to report annually to the State and the public key information on programmatic quality and student success. This will also provide relevant data to the federal government on the effectiveness of federal funds and what changes TSLQP may require to close shortage gaps in the future. The bill further requires states to conduct an assessment to identify at-risk and low-performing teacher and school leader preparation programs and to provide those programs with technical assistance in hopes of improvement.

States are in the best position to meet the shortage gaps within their borders, a point highlighted by Mr. John White, the Superintendent of Louisiana, at the Committee's "Educating our Educators hearing". H.R. 4674 allows state educational agencies to be key partners in partnerships with preparation programs in their states. State partners who enter into a partnership with an eligible preparation program must work in conjunction with one or more high-need school districts in the state to meet the shortage needs in those districts. H.R. 4674's state accountability reporting incentivizes states to build the systems to determine where their state's most critical shortages are. Thus, states may place successful graduates in the highest-needs school districts. To meet the needs of the expansion of TQSLP, H.R. 4674 authorizes a stronger investment in title II, part A by increasing funding from $300 million to $500 million.

Finally, H.R. 4674 maintains most of the HEA title II, part B programs authorized in current law. Because the establishment of these programs are resoundingly supported by preparation programs around the country, but never funded, the bill authorizes part B to be funded at $100 million and requires that each of the four programs it authorizes receive at least 20 percent of those funds.

Part B maintains the recognition of the critical role that HBCUs and other MSIs play in producing most of the country's teachers of color by reauthorizing the Augustus F. Hawkins Centers of Excellence program which supports the teacher prep programs at these schools and strengthening their residency preparation in line with part A. Additionally, part B acknowledges the critical and persistent shortage in special education teachers with the inclusion of the Well Rounded Teachers program. Funds under this program support preparation programs that embed special education into the general education credential, as dual certification. It requires that these programs produce teachers well-versed in positive behavioral management strategies to effectively respond to the needs of all students. Both programs were incorporated from H.R. 4288 the Teacher Diversity and Retention Act, introduced by Rep. Ruben Gallego(D-AZ).

The Committee is also concerned with the increasing demand for bilingual teachers as the country experiences an influx of English language learner students. H.R. 4574 incorporates provisions from H.R. 1153, the Reaching English Learners Act introduced by Rep. Langevin, to develop the Teaching English Learners grant. This grant improves English language instruction preparation.

In line with fostering the pedagogical needs of specific subject areas, Part B also maintains the graduate fellowships program that prepare faculty in high-need areas. These areas include special education, English language instruction, science, math, and career and technical education subjects such as engineering and computer science. Under the bill, the Secretary must also prioritize awarding grants to any part B program that fills these subject area shortages and programs that produce high numbers of educators of color.

H.R. 4674 Advances Equity in Higher Education

The original HEA and subsequent reauthorizations were designed to increase access to higher education for all students. While efforts have resulted in more low-income students and students of color accessing and completing higher education since 1965, significant gaps remain.

As of 2015, 82 percent of high school graduates from families in the highest income quintile (families making more $100,010 annually) enrolled immediately in college, compared to just 58 percent of those from the lowest income quintile (below $20,582).¹¹⁸ While the shares of Black and Hispanic students enrolling in college have increased substantially over the last decades (rising by 52 percent and 23 percent, respectively from 1975),¹¹⁹ significant racial gaps in enrollment remain. Among recent high school graduates in 2017, enrollment rates of Black students lagged 10 percentage points behind the rates of white students, while Hispanic enrollment rates lagged by 8 percentage points.¹²⁰

Students of color and low-income students also lag behind their peers when it comes to degree completion. White students who start at a four-year university graduate within six years at more than one-and-a-half times the rate of Black students (66 vs. 42 percent).¹²¹ Black males lag even further behind with a 36 percent six-year graduation rate.¹²² The gap between white and Hispanic students is smaller but still large (64 vs. 54 percent).¹²³ Gaps in graduation rates are also large across family income: students who receive Pell Grants are 18 percentage points less likely to graduate than students who do not receive Pell.¹²⁴

Disparities in graduation rates mean that students of color and low-income students miss out on the social mobility and the other numerous advantages of a college education. Children whose parents are in the bottom quintile of the income distribution can greatly increase their chances of moving up the income ladder as adults if they obtain a degree. Children in the bottom income quintile who do not obtain a college degree only have a one in two (53 percent) chance of moving up the income ladder as adults, whereas various studies suggest between 84 and 90 percent of children who are born into the bottom quintile and earn a college degree will move out of the bottom quintile.¹²⁵ The benefits of a college degree are so large for low-income students that research has shown that the greatest gains in absolute wealth in the past generation have gone to individuals growing up in the lowest income quintile who earned a bachelor's degree.¹²⁶

H.R. 4674 makes key investments to help close these gaps and ensure that students from all backgrounds have the support they need to graduate from college and successfully transition to the workforce. The affordability measures in H.R. 4674 provide low-income students greater financial support by cutting the cost of tuition and covering other basic expenses that can interfere with their education. The new federal-state partnership program to provide tuition-free community college and a path to a tuition-free four-year degree, freeing up students' federal financial aid dollars to cover non-tuition expenses. Increases in the value of Pell Grant will cover a larger share of tuition and put more money in students' pockets to pay for food, housing, and other basic essentials, while dual enrollment programs offer flexible college options that offer accelerated paths to a college degree.

Supports for Students

In addition to improving affordability, H.R. 4674 further enhances equity and advances student success with numerous programs and provisions designed to support underserved students. H.R. 4674 makes important improvements to TRIO and GEAR UP (Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate Programs), longstanding federal programs designed to identify individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds and help them enroll in college. Among other things, the bill amends authorizing language for both programs to increase funding levels, clarify program requirements, expand and update authorized uses, and ensure homeless and foster youth can participate in and benefit from services and activities.

The Committee recognizes that collecting comprehensive data on homeless and foster youth participating in TRIO and GEAR UP programs may be challenging for grantees, particularly in the short term, and H.R. 4674 includes language specifying that data is only required to be reported "when available". This data is intended to shine a light on the experiences and outcomes of homeless and foster youth. It should not be used preference or penalize applicants based on the demographic makeup of their student populations. Furthermore, the Committee does not intend the newly required disaggregation of TRIO outcome data by homeless/foster status to alter the Department's current practices with respect to the calculation of prior experience points (renamed "accountability for outcomes points" under H.R. 4674).

H.R. 4674 additionally includes language designed to address TRIO and GEAR UP grant administration issues that have emerged since the last HEA. Of particular note, the bill shortens the timeframe in which TRIO applicants must be notified of the status of their grant application from 8 months to 90 days. The Department has been unable to meet the current-law 8 month notification requirement due to the timing of the Congressional appropriation and grant competition cycles, rendering the advance notice provision unachievable and therefore meaningless. The Committee's intent in shortening the notification window is to ensure that applicants are informed of whether or not they will receive funding at least 90 days prior to the startup date of the proposed program. This is necessary for ensuring that continuing grantees do not suffer from an interruption or lapse in funding and for providing all successful grantees with sufficient time to plan and prepare to offer TRIO services. Importantly, the notification requirement applies regardless of whether a TRIO grantee receives funding through the first slate of awards or after the statutorily required second review of applications has been completed.

Far too many college students are struggling with food insecurity. Estimates of food insecurity among college students range from 9 percent to well over 50 percent, and the majority of studies examined by the GAO found food insecurity rates of over 30 percent.¹²⁷ The GAO additionally found that at least 3.3 million students who were at risk of food insecurity and potentially eligible for Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), yet fewer than half of these students reported that they had accessed SNAP benefits.¹²⁸ To address this issue, H.R. 4674 ensures that institutions connect potentially eligible students with federal safety net programs, including food assistance programs like SNAP and the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC). By increasing grant aid and investing in a federal-state partnership, H.R. 4674 provides students with the funds they need to not only cover their tuition, but also pay for the basic necessities of food and housing. States participating in this new federal-state partnership are further required to consider changes to state law to facilitate participation in means-tested federal benefit programs among college students. As mentioned above, H.R. 4674 additionally allows FSEOG funds to be used to provide emergency grant aid to students, which can be essential for addressing issues of food and housing insecurity. The Act also incorporates H.R. 2632, the bipartisan CCAMPIS Reauthorization Act, introduced by Reps. Katherine Clark (D-MA) and Don Young (R-AK), which expands access to affordable, quality on-campus child care for students with children, and H.R. 3950, the Remedial Education Improvement Act, introduced by Rep. Donald Norcross (D-NJ), which supports the adoption of evidence-based reforms of remedial education programs. These changes will help keep students—particularly low-income students and students of color—on campus and on-track to earning a college degree.

While there are multiple pathways to and through higher education, the Committee recognizes that, for most students, a bachelor's degree remains the surest pathway to financial stability and lifelong success. Unfortunately, the low-income students who stand to benefit most from earning a bachelor's degree are significantly less likely than their peers to pursue or complete a four-year degree.¹²⁹ In response to this reality, H.R. 4674 creates a new program to reward institutions that are dedicated to enrolling low-income students and ensuring that they succeed. Under the Federal Pell Bonus Program created by the Act, public and private not-for-profit institutions with a Pell enrollment of at least 25 percent will receive a bonus for every Pell recipient that earns a bachelor's degree within the normal time to completion. Bonus funds can be used by these institutions to expand access and success among low-income students, including through the provision of need-based financial aid and student supports.

Additionally, H.R. 4674 allows undocumented individuals who entered the U.S. when they were younger than 16 years of age and either earned a high school diploma (or its equivalent) or served in the uniformed services for not less than four years to access federal student aid and services under title IV. This would allow Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) recipients access to federal student aid. The Supreme Court has recognized that undocumented students are entitled to a public K–12 education and under current law these students experience an abrupt shift when they graduate high school. Of the estimated 98,000 undocumented students who graduate high school every year, only between 5 and 10 percent pursue higher education and far fewer graduate with a degree.¹³⁰ Enrolling in college becomes difficult without the appropriate financial means to pay for the education. Given their ability to work and contribute to the economy, this provision would allow these students to contribute at higher rates to American society upon earning a college degree or credential. Under H.R. 4674, individuals who would have qualified for Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA) and individuals with temporary protected status are also eligible for federal student aid.

Despite some progress in recent reauthorizations, HEA still needs significant improvements to truly align with the goals of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. H.R. 4674 includes grants to train faculty to deliver accessible, inclusive instruction; establishes an office of accessibility in every institution to facilitate access; and increases access to instructional materials and technologies to make learning accessible for all students. Further, H.R. 4674 requires the office of accessibility at each institution to accept documentation such as an Individualized Education Plan (IEP) or a 504 Plan deemed by itself sufficient to prove the existence of a disability in order to ensure that students with disabilities receive the accommodations they need. The office may also accept and deem sufficient other types of documentation, including a student's narrative about their disability or the results of an evaluation provided by the institution, but cannot require additional types of documentation.

Homeless and foster youth face unique challenges in accessing higher education. H.R. 4674 addresses these challenges in several ways. The bill authorizes a new program at $150 million per year to help states expand initiatives to help foster and homeless youth transition to college. The bill further requires states to provide in-state tuition rates for foster and homeless youth who have not had stable residency and would otherwise be ineligible and requires institutions to provide housing options between terms.

HEA specifies that students who do not hold a high school diploma or recognized equivalent can only qualify for federal financial aid under the so-called "ability to benefit" provisions if they are enrolled in an eligible career pathway program. Such programs provide important supports and ensure that students who enter college without a secondary credential are able to succeed academically and transition to the workforce. However, the Committee recognizes that broad-based liberal arts programs may not be compatible with all the requirements associated with career pathway programs. As such, H.R. 4674 allows individuals who demonstrate an ability to benefit by earning six credit hours toward a postsecondary degree to be eligible for federal financial aid if they are enrolled in a program leading to a bachelor's degree; a two-year or longer program that is acceptable for full credit toward a bachelor's degree; or a degree program that is acceptable to admission to a graduate or professional degree program. Students at public and private nonprofit institutions are eligible for title IV aid under this expansion.

Support for Institutions that Enhance Economic Mobility

A high-quality college degree remains out of reach for far too many students, and students of color and low-income students face particularly steep barriers to college enrollment and completion. Unfortunately, institutions that make it part of their mission to serve large populations of these students facing the greatest barriers—such as HBCUs, TCCUs, MSIs, and community colleges—are generally under-resourced, making it harder to serve students on the path to college completion.

HBCUs, TCCUs, MSIs, and community colleges are all too often subject to severe resource constraints, which limit these institutions' ability to support all students through degree completion. A 2014 report from the Institute for Higher Education Policy found that, in Fiscal Year (FY) 2010, HBCUs, TCCUs, and MSIs operated on an average of $16,648 in per-student revenue, compared to nearly $30,000 at predominantly white institutions. Community colleges had even fewer resources and operated on approximately $10,000 in per-student revenue.¹³¹

¹³¹ ALISA CUNNINGHAM ET AL., THE INST. FOR HIGHER EDUC. POL'Y, MINORITY SERVING INSTITUTIONS: DOING MORE WITH LESS 13, (2014), http://www.ihep.org/sites/default/files/uploads/docs/pubs/msis_doing_more_w-less_final_february_2014-v2.pdf.

Revenue constraints mean that institutions have less to spend on the students. Research from The Century Foundation found that in FY 2013, “private four-year research institutions spent five times as much per full time equivalent student annually ($72,000) as did community colleges ($14,000).”¹³² The Georgetown Center on Education and the Workforce found that, in 2015, “selective public colleges spent nearly three times as much per student as open-access public colleges on instructional and academic support.”¹³³

Aross America, the students who attend the least well-resourced K–12 schools, and those who arrive at college facing the steepest barriers to completion, are concentrated at institutions with the lowest funding levels. This pattern perpetuates and reinforces inequity as students of color and low-income students are systematically deprived of the public resources available to their white and affluent peers. On a macro scale, the lack of access to affordable, high-quality postsecondary opportunities hampers economic mobility and contributes to wage inequality and the cycle of poverty.

These gaps in institutional revenue and spending are not only problematic from a theoretical standpoint. In reality, inequitable funding impacts the success of students. Institutions that have more resources are able to provide high-quality educational opportunities to more students, including those in need of additional support. The evidence shows that additional spending on instruction and student support services can substantially improve graduation rates.¹³⁴

College degrees are essential for upward mobility, particularly for low-income students. College degree holders from families in the lowest income quintile are more likely to experience upward mobility (i.e. more likely to surpass their parents in terms of income and wealth) than degree holders from higher income families.¹³⁵ But income in the top quintile is “sticky”: those born in the top quintile have a significantly lower chance of falling to the bottom quintile regardless of whether or not they earn a degree.¹³⁶

For these reasons, H.R. 4674 strengthens HBCUs, TCCUs, and other MSIs. The Act increases and permanently reauthorizes mandatory funding for HBCUs, TCUs, and other MSIs. It also makes needed reforms to discretionary grant programs and increases funding. Additionally, H.R. 4674 authorizes new grant programs to support innovation at HBCUs, TCCUs, and MSIs; preserve and revitalize Native American languages; and increase opportunities for graduate and doctoral studies at these institutions. These provisions are drawn from the bipartisan bill H.R. 2486, the Fostering Undergraduate Talent by Unlocking Resources for Education (FUTURE) Act, introduced by Reps. Alma Adams (D–NC) and Mark Walker (R–NC) and the Native American Language Vitalization Act, H.R. 4188, introduced by Reps. Sablan (D–MP), Schrier (D–WA), and Ed Case (D–HI).¹³⁷

H.R. 4674 also supports community colleges in developing programs that improve completion. There are multiple innovative models that institutions are implementing to better support students to completion. Worth highlighting is the City University of New York (CUNY) Accelerated Study in Associate Programs (ASAP) initiative, which helps students earn an associate's degree within three years by providing comprehensive services. These supports include advisement, financial assistance (including free metro cards and textbooks), structured pathways, and employment support. As students get close to graduating, they receive special support to help them transfer to a four-year institution or into the workforce. Over a three-year period, the program doubled graduation rates and the cost per degree was lower in ASAP than in the control group despite the initial cost.¹³⁸ The CUNY ASAP program was replicated at three community colleges in Ohio and similar student outcomes were achieved.¹³⁹ Due to this exceptional success, H.R. 4674 provides institutions with planning and implementation grants to replicate the CUNY ASAP program at community colleges across the country. Prior to introduction of H.R. 4674, Committee worked with Rep. Grace Meng (D–NY) to introduce H.R. 3578, the Community College Student Success Act which contains these provisions.

Campus Climate

The Committee recognizes that campus safety requirements in H.R. 4674, including those related to hazing and harassment, may require institutions to revise or expand their approaches to tracking and reporting crimes under the Clery Act. For example, newly required reporting on hazing must include details on findings from campus disciplinary proceedings and information specific to student organizations. Reporting this information will likely require separate documentation in the annual security reports that are submitted by institutions. The Committee expects the Department to provide guidance to institutions on how to comply with new requirements, including how to collect and present data on hazing and harassment incidents.

H.R. 4674 takes important steps to improve campus climate and protects students' safety. The bill blocks Secretary DeVos's Title IX rule and strengthens prevention and reporting of incidents of campus sexual assault, harassment, and hazing. It further supports campus diversity by strengthening civil rights enforcement to prevent discrimination on campus and invests in programs that advance access to education for students with disabilities, foster youth, students who struggle with homelessness, and student veterans. H.R. 4674 additionally provides expectant and parenting students information on campus leave policies, financial aid (including emergency aid), support services, and rights, protections, and accommodations guaranteed under federal and state law. The Act additionally amends the current-law anti-discrimination provision in the HEA to clarify that protections against discrimination based on sex apply to sexual orientation, gender identity, pregnancy, childbirth, a medical condition related to pregnancy and childbirth, and sex stereotype.¹⁴⁰

H.R. 4674 Maintains and Improves Key Policies and Programs in Higher Education

Beyond the changes described in earlier sections, H.R. 4674 maintains or improves several policies and programs that are essential in ensuring affordability, accountability, and equity in higher education.

Institutional Disclosures of Foreign Gifts

In light of recent increased scrutiny on potential foreign influence on college campuses, H.R. 4674 strengthens current reporting on institutional disclosures of foreign gifts and contracts, clarifies what information is necessary, and improves Departmental engagement to ensure institutional reports are useful without being over burdensome. To address concerns about public awareness, the Committee included language in the bill requiring the Secretary of Education to make the disclosure reports publicly available in an electronically downloadable, searchable database that allows identification and comparison of institutional reports.

H.R. 4674 also requires the Secretary of Education to bring together community stakeholders through negotiated rulemaking to ensure the statute is being properly implemented, and to ensure institutions know what is required on gift disclosure reports.

Tuition assistance for students in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) and American Samoa territories

All students, regardless of whether they reside on the continental U.S. or its territories, should have an opportunity to pursue an affordable four-year college degree. The CNMI and American Samoa territories have substantially limited academic offerings for students seeking higher education. Each territory has just a small public college, providing primarily certificates and associate degrees, which hinders many students in these territories from pursuing a college degree beyond two-years. The lack of options forces many students to move great distances away from home and at substantial personal cost to pursue a bachelor's degree. To enable affordable access to students in the territories, H.R. 4674 creates a Tuition Assistance Grant (TAG) Program—modeled after the program in the District of Columbia (i.e. DC TAG)—and authorizes $5 million dollars to cover the difference between in-state and out-of-state tuition costs for students in the aforementioned territories. This program comes from H.R. 2465, the Northern Mariana Islands and American Samoa College Access Act, introduced by Rep. Sablan (D-MP).

Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE)

FIPSE was first authorized in 2008 and authorizes the Secretary to make grants to higher education institutions or groups of institutions to improve postsecondary education opportunities. An example of a program funded through FIPSE is the Shepherd Higher Education Consortium on Poverty, which provides an integrated curricular and co-curricular interdisciplinary study focusing on poverty and human capability for undergraduate and graduate students. Students are provided with service-learning internship opportunities with non-profit agencies located in disadvantaged communities. H.R. 4674 reauthorizes FIPSE for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Programs under title VIII

H.R. 4674 eliminates many programs that were authorized in the 2008 reauthorization of HEA, but never funded. It simultaneously reauthorizes and retools several grant programs under title VIII including the Ronald V. Dellums memorial STEAM Scholars, provisions that were introduced in H.R. 5922 the Ronald V. Dellums Memorial Fellowship for Women of Color in STEAM and National Security Act, introduced by Reps. Barbara Lee (D-CA) and Raúl Grijalva (D-AZ). The bill also reauthorizes the Teach for America program, Modeling and Simulation grants, and others. It further authorizes a new grant program to expand the development and use of high-quality open educational resources to reduce the cost of textbooks and expand access to free educational materials to the broader public.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Sec. 1—Short title; table of contents

This section provides the short title “College Affordability Act” and table of contents.

Sec. 2—References

This section states that, unless otherwise stated in the Act, provisions that are amended or repealed shall be considered made to the Higher Education Act of 1965 (HEA).

Sec. 3—General effective date

This section states that, unless otherwise stated in this Act, the provisions will take effect on the date of enactment.

TITLE I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Part A—Definitions

Sec. 1001—Definition of institution of higher education for purposes of title IV programs

This section adds receivership to the limitations that would prohibit an institution of higher education (institution) from meeting the requirements to participate in title IV of the HEA. This section adds 85/15 to the institutional eligibility definition of a proprietary institution starting July 1, 2023.

Sec. 1002—Additional definitions

This section fixes a reference to the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990.

This section amends the definition of “nonprofit” to make a nonprofit entity not only one that is owned and operated by a nonprofit corporation or association per current statute, but also one that is controlled by a nonprofit corporation or association.

This section defines the term “public institution of higher education” as an institution for which all its obligations are valid and binding obligations of the State (or an equivalent governmental entity) and for which the State (or an equivalent governmental entity) pledges full faith and credit to pay the obligations on time.

This section defines the term “foster care children and youth” as children and youth whose care and placement are the responsibility of the State or Tribal agency, regardless of whether the State or tribal agency has made foster care maintenance payments on their behalf. Individuals who are no longer the responsibility of the State or the Tribal agency but who were under the care of the State or Tribal agency at 13 years of age or older are included in the term.

This section defines the term “federal education assistance funds” as any federal funds provided under the HEA, as well as funds provided under any other federal law, including through funds directly made to an institution on behalf of an individual (i.e. GI Bill Benefits). This definition excludes monthly housing stipend payments made directly to an individual under the Post-9/11 GI Bill.

This section defines the term “progress period status” as the status of an institution that is determined by the Secretary of Education (Secretary) to be in danger of failing to meet title IV eligibility criteria because the institution has a student default risk indicator between 10 and 15 percent.

Sec. 1003—Gainful employment programs

This section establishes a definition for the term “program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation,” which requires training programs to comply with performance metrics and disclosures established by the Secretary. At a minimum, the Secretary must establish requirements for a debt-to-earnings rate including a methodology for calculating such rate, a process to authorize the use of alternate earnings, and a threshold. The threshold must be comparable to the eligibility thresholds for the debt-to-earnings ratio established in the 2014 gainful employment final rule. Training programs that are substantially similar to a training program that did not previously meet the performance metrics are prohibited from participating.

The Secretary is required to develop a consumer-tested disclosure template that training programs must provide to enrolled and prospective students on an annual basis showing student outcome information for such program. The Secretary must also establish a process to annually verify that each training program is providing the required disclosures.

Part B—Additional General Provisions

Sec. 1011—Antidiscrimination

This section amends the antidiscrimination provision in section 111 of the HEA to specify that protections against discrimination on the basis of sex apply to sexual orientation, gender identity, pregnancy, childbirth, a medical condition related to pregnancy or childbirth, and sex stereotype.

Sec. 1012—National Advisory Committee on Institutional Quality and Integrity

This section permanently establishes the National Advisory Committee on Institutional Quality and Integrity (NACIQI) by repealing the expiration date.

Sec. 1013—Disclosures of foreign gifts

This section strengthens and clarifies the disclosure of foreign gifts made to institutions from a foreign entity. It does this by clarifying that the aggregate dollar amount reported to the Department of Education (Department) includes the funding of staff members, textbooks and other in-kind gifts. It also clarifies that tuition and fees are exempted from the reporting disclosures and makes further clarifications to contracts made between the foreign entity and the institution to include any agreements for services from foreign government to include gifts, which is defined as money or property, human resources, or payment of any staff. Additionally, institutes and instructional programs are added to what must be disclosed for restricted and conditional gifts.

This section requires the Secretary to make the disclosure reports electronically available to the public for download 30 days after receipt. It also requires the Secretary to enter into a negotiated rulemaking to ensure institutions know what is required on gift disclosure reports to the Department.

Sec. 1014—Alcohol and substance misuse prevention

This section requires institutions that receive federal funding to adopt and implement an evidence-based program to prevent alcohol and substance misuse by students and employees. The section also requires the Secretary to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop the criteria that satisfy the evidence-based program requirement and promote best practices for adopting and implementing a program.

This section also updates and improves federal grants to support evidence-based alcohol and substance misuse prevention programs. Grant funding under this section can be used for activities including (but not limited to) providing recovery support services to students, re-entry assistance for students on academic probation due to substance use, and the prevention of fatal and nonfatal overdoses. This section authorizes $15 million for FY 2019 and the five succeeding fiscal years for these grants.

Sec. 1015—Exception to required registration with selective service system

This section prohibits making an applicant ineligible for federal student aid under title IV of the HEA for failure to register for Selective Service in accordance with the Military Selective Service Act and repeals the requirement.

Sec. 1016—Integrity of nonprofit institutions of higher education

This section establishes requirements that institutions converting to nonprofit status must meet in order to participate under the HEA as a nonprofit. The institution must be tax exempt and meet the definition of nonprofit established in the HEA. The institution must also demonstrate that assets it acquires from former owners are not acquired at a value greater than its worth. Additionally, the institution must demonstrate that no member of its governing board or any person with the power to appoint or remove members from the governing board receives any substantial economic benefit (e.g. a lease, promissory note, other contract). Further, the institution cannot be controlled by an entity that is not a public institution or other nonprofit entity.

An institution must apply to convert to nonprofit status. The Secretary must publish the institution's application in the Federal Register with an appropriate notice and comment period. Upon final determination, the Secretary's decision and rationale must also be published in the Federal Register. A for-profit institution approved for nonprofit conversion must abide by the rules and regulations that apply to for-profit institutions for the first five years after such conversion.

An institution is prohibited from promoting or marketing itself as a nonprofit institution unless the Secretary has given final approval of the conversion, the accrediting agency has approved the nonprofit status, the State has given final approval to the institution as a nonprofit entity, and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has approved the institution as tax exempt.

The Secretary is required to create an office with expertise within the Department to carry out these provisions. The Secretary is also required to review the institution's governance when a public or private nonprofit institution has engaged in transactions or arrangements determined to be potential indicators of private inurement.

Sec. 1017—Support and guidance for homeless individuals and foster care youth

This section requires the Secretary to issue guidance, provide annual professional development opportunities, and issue a report at least once every five years on best practices for serving homeless individuals and foster care youth.

Sec. 1018—Calculation of percentage of enrolled students receiving or eligible for Federal Pell Grants

This section ensures that an institution offering dual enrollment programs is not penalized when calculating its share of students who receive Pell Grants. Low-income students who are enrolled in courses at an institution while still attending high school are not eligible for federal Pell Grants. This section removes such students from the total count of enrolled students that is used to calculate the share of students who are eligible for or receiving Pell Grants at an institution.

Sec. 1019—Certification regarding the use of certain Federal funds

This section makes a technical fix by striking reference to the Higher Education Opportunity Act (HEOA) and replacing such term with reference to the HEA to prohibit the use of funds from title IV of the HEA to be used to pay an individual advocating for a federal contract, grant, loan, or cooperative agreement. It also prohibits using title IV funds to hire a registered lobbyist for the purposes of securing an earmark.

Sec. 1020—Freedom of Association

This section prohibits institutions from retaliating against any student on the basis of such student's membership in a single-sex organization based solely on the membership practice of such organization limiting membership to only individuals of one sex.

Part C—Cost of Higher Education

Sec. 1021—Consumer information

This section amends the requirements for net price calculators in section 132 of the HEA. This section requires each institution to include a prominent link to the institution's net price calculator on relevant institutional webpages, display a chart of net prices for students receiving federal financial aid disaggregated by income category on the input screen for the calculator, include specified information on the results page of the calculator, and populate the calculator with data from not earlier than 2 academic years prior than the most recent academic year. This section prohibits data collected by net price calculators from being sold or made available to third parties. This section authorizes the Secretary to develop a universal net price calculator to enable users to answer one set of questions and receive net prices for any institution required to have a net price calculator under section 132 of the HEA.

This section adds the new adjusted cohort default rate (aCDR), as well as institutional expenditures on instruction, student services, marketing, recruitment, advertising, and lobbying to the College Navigator website.

Sec. 1022—Postsecondary student data system

This section directs the Commissioner of the National Center on Education Statistics (NCES) to develop and maintain a secure postsecondary student data system to evaluate student-level enrollment, progression, and completion patterns, post-college outcomes, postsecondary costs, and financial aid. In developing the system, the NCES Commissioner is required to focus on the needs of users (including institutions), follow relevant web design and digital service standards, and ensure student data privacy and security in accordance with federal standards. The system is designed to improve institutional transparency, facilitate institutional improvement, reduce regulatory burden, and analyze, evaluate, and improve federal student aid programs.

The Secretary and NCES Commissioner are authorized to consider reporting to the new postsecondary student data system as sufficient to satisfy any other reporting required under section 132 of the HEA in cases where the same reporting or collection of data is required. The NCES Commissioner will review methods for streamlining data collection and minimizing duplicative reporting at least once every three years.

The postsecondary data system shall include, at a minimum, the student-level data elements necessary to calculate the information within any student-related surveys in the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) and the student-level data elements necessary for reporting enrollment, persistence, retention, transfer, and completion for all credential levels within and across institutions. Data reporting must be sufficient to allow for disaggregation by 10 separate characteristics including race, military or veteran status, Pell Grant eligibility, and Federal loan receipt. The NCES Commissioner is directed to consult with stakeholders in determining and revising data elements to be included in the postsecondary data system. The NCES Commissioner is prohibited from collecting the following for the purposes of the postsecondary data system: health data, discipline records or data, elementary and secondary education data, physical addresses, information on citizenship or national origin status, grades, student-level college entrance exam results, political affiliation, and religion.

The NCES Commissioner is authorized, after consultation with stakeholders, to include additional data elements in the postsecondary data system. The NCES Commissioner is also directed to enter into agreements with other federal agencies to create secure linkages between the postsecondary data system and other federal data systems. These secure linkages will result in the consistent reporting of data on postsecondary outcomes, financial aid, and post-college outcomes, protect student data privacy, and comply with all federal data protection protocols and applicable privacy laws.

The NCES Commissioner is required to make summary aggregate information available to the public in a user-friendly format on, at a minimum, institution-level data on access, progression, completion, cost, and post-college outcomes. The NCES Commissioner will also develop and implement a secure process for making non-personally identifiable student-level data available for research and evaluation purposes. Through this process, institutions and states will be able to request and receive non-personally identifiable information and aggregate summary data on current and former students. The process will also allow institutions to receive program-level data related to current and former students at least once a year.

The NCES Commissioner will promulgate guidance and regulations related to data access and security. Data collected under the postsecondary data system shall not be sold to any third party or be used for any activity that would result in an adverse action against a student, including activities related to law enforcement, immigration law enforcement and debt collection.

Each institution participating in a title IV program is required to collect and submit data requested by the NCES Commissioner to carry out this section. Institutions not participating in title IV programs may elect to submit data if they so choose.

Sec. 1023—Avoiding duplicative reporting

This section allows the Secretary to use the postsecondary student data system created under Sec. 1022 of this Act to satisfy any other reporting required of institutions under title IV of the HEA.

Sec. 1024—Disclosure of non-instructional spending increases

This section requires institutions to disclose to students when non-instructional spending increases by more than 5 percent year-over-year. This section also requires such institutions to provide an analysis of the expected impact of such increase on tuition.

Sec. 1025—Textbook information

This section updates the current law definition of supplemental material by removing a reference to computer disks and incorporating references to online and digital learning platforms. It additionally requires that publishers provide information to institutions on whether textbooks and supplemental materials are available in digital formats. This section encourages institutions to disseminate information on institutional programs for accessing lower cost digital course materials and digital textbooks. It also adds inclusive access programs and digital content distribution platforms as examples of alternative content delivery programs. Institutions are encouraged but not required to disseminate information on such programs.

Sec. 1026—Repeals

This section lifts the ban on creating a student-level data system and repeals the state higher education information system pilot program.

Sec. 1027—In-state tuition rates for homeless youth and foster care youth

This section requires homeless and foster care students to receive in-state tuition at public institutions in the state where they live.

Part D—Administrative Provisions for Delivery of Student Financial Assistance

Sec. 1031—Improvements to the Federal Student Aid Office

This section amends the purpose of the Federal Student Aid Office at the Department—a Performance-Based Organization (PBO)—to include prioritizing students and borrowers in the decision-making process related to the management and administration of federal student aid programs. Other changes to the purpose include increasing transparency in the operations and outcomes of federal student financial assistance programs authorized under title IV.

To ensure the PBO carries out its duties effectively and in a manner that accomplishes its purposes, this section explicitly requires the Secretary to implement oversight and accountability measures.

Additionally, the PBO will now be responsible for the collection, publication, and sharing of aggregate and longitudinal data that may be used to evaluate federal student financial assistance programs, including the outcomes of such programs. The PBO is required to make the data available to NCES for purposes of research and policy analysis. The NCES Commissioner must make non-personally identifiable data available to researchers for approved research and evaluation purposes. The PBO must make aggregate data publicly available at least once a year.

This section also strengthens the PBO's performance plan and annual report, including by requiring the inclusion of measurable quantitative and qualitative goals and objectives set by the PBO. The Secretary is required to provide the authorizing Congressional committees a briefing on the steps taken by the Department to ensure the experience of students and borrowers are accounted for in decision-making and that contractors and third-party servicers (as amended by Sec. 4602 of this Act) are adhering to the requirements of title IV of the HEA. Further, within 180 days of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary must enter into a memorandum of understanding with the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB).

Additionally, this section places some pre- and post-service restrictions on the Chief Operating Officer (COO) position. For example, the COO cannot be employed by or have a financial interest in an entity that contracts with the PBO. This section also requires that the performance agreement between the Secretary and COO include metrics that measure progress toward organizational and individual goals. It makes similar amendments to the performance agreement between the Secretary and senior managers. The COO must provide members of the public with information about the PBO's oversight of institutions, lenders, and third-party servicers.

This section renames the Student Loan Ombudsman to the Borrower Advocate and focuses the duties of the position on assisting borrowers and attempting to resolve borrower complaints. In consultation with knowledgeable parties, the Borrower Advocate must also resolve complaints about a homeless student's determination of independence for purposes of federal student aid. Similar to the COO, the Borrower Advocate must abide by pre- and post-service requirements as outlined in this section. Yearly, the Borrower Advocate must submit to the COO a report on the activities of the Borrower Advocate office.

This section establishes an enforcement unit to review and investigate violations of the HEA by institutions, lenders, and third-party servicers. The office is led by a Chief Enforcement Officer (CEO) who is appointed for a term of six years and reports directly to the Secretary. During such term, the CEO may only be removed for cause. The CEO must review and investigate each allegation and provide the Secretary with a recommendation on whether to pursue enforcement action against the entity concerned. The Secretary is then responsible for deciding the action. The enforcement unit must coordinate with existing federal agencies, state agencies, and oversight bodies and develop protocols for information sharing on allegations. The CEO must also submit an annual report to the authorizing committees that includes the number of allegations received, the number of allegations investigated by the unit, and other pertinent information about the allegations.

TITLE II—TEACHER QUALITY ENHANCEMENT

Part A—Teacher and School Leader Quality Partnership Grants

Sec. 2001—Definitions

This section adds 25 new definitions and makes technical edits to align some terms to those used in the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA). The new definitions include: “blended learning,” “comprehensive literacy instruction,” “digital literacy,” “diverse teacher candidates,” “English learner,” “evidence-based,” “evidence of student learning,” “foster care,” “homeless child,” “infant or toddler with a disability,” “mentoring,” “profession-ready,” “residency program,” “school leader,” “school leader preparation entity,” “school leader preparation program,” “teacher leader,” “teacher performance assessment,” “teacher preparation entity,” “teacher preparation program,” and “trauma-informed care.”

Sec. 2002—Purposes

This section expands the purpose of title II to include 1) accountability for educator preparation programs; 2) recruitment of individuals from underrepresented groups and other occupations as educators with an emphasis on addressing high shortage areas as identified by the state; and 3) support for staffing needs of high-need local educational agencies (LEAs) through partnerships with educator preparation programs at universities.

Sec. 2003—Partnership grants

This section expands the Teacher Quality Partnership Grant program to include partnership grants for principal or school leader residency programs in high-need schools. Programs must be based on successful models that prepare principals or school leaders for success in high-need schools. These programs must include rigorous graduate coursework toward an appropriate advanced credential and learning opportunities under an experienced principal or school leader mentor. The section outlines selection criteria for school leader or principal mentors.

Eligible individuals for the principal or school leader residency program must have prior preK–12 teaching experience and have experience as an effective leader, manager, and written/oral communicator. If selected for the program, school leader residents would receive a one-year living stipend or salary in exchange for agreeing to serve for at least three school years in a high-need school. Participants who do not complete the program must repay the stipend or salary to the eligible partnership. This section also adds a requirement for all residency programs to expose participants to the principles of universal design for learning and multi-tiered systems of support. Successful programs will facilitate collaboration and cultivation of relationships with external stakeholders (including professional disciplinary organizations and non-profit advocacy organizations) to foster the sharing of evidence-based resources to promote high-quality, effective practices.

Additionally, this section repeals the existing Partnership Grants for the Development of Leadership program and replaces it with the Teacher Leader Development Program. The Teacher Leader Development program provides grants to fund professional development activities for teachers who maintain their role as classroom teachers but who also carry out formalized leadership responsibilities, including the development of curriculum, team management, family and community engagement, peer observations and coaching, and dual enrollment instruction. Grantees must develop a plan detailing how teacher leaders will allocate their time between leadership activities and classroom responsibilities, as well as how the grantee will support teacher leaders after the program concludes. This section outlines selection criteria for teacher leaders.

This section also authorizes “Grow Your Own” programs as a use of funds for the grants. Eligible partnerships are between institutions and high-need LEAs to recruit and support paraprofessionals and other school personnel to become educators in their schools. Partnerships would integrate coursework and school-based learning opportunities that include a year-long clinical residency with mentorship to support candidates in earning their associate’s, bachelor’s, or master’s degrees and a teaching or school leadership credential. Successful programs offer financial aid (in addition to the assistance that educator candidates qualify for under title IV of the HEA) and may offer candidates stipends to cover living and childcare costs for the duration of the program. Programs may also offer compensation to residency mentors.

Sec. 2004—Administrative provisions

This section maintains that an eligible partnership may not receive more than one grant in a five-year period, except that partnerships may now receive an additional grant if used to establish a teacher or principal residency program not previously established with the prior grant.

Sec. 2005—Accountability and evaluation

This section requires that each eligible partnership develop an evaluation plan that includes rigorous, comprehensive, and measurable objectives for any of the residency programs for which grants can be used.

Sec. 2006—Accountability for programs that prepare teachers, principals, or other school leaders

This section establishes teacher and school leader retention rates in the same LEA and in the profession as indicators of teacher and school leader preparation program quality. Teacher and school leader preparation programs must report retention rates to the state and public. The section also adds school leader preparation programs to the State report card requirement on teacher preparation program quality. It also specifies that states are not responsible for reporting program completion for those who do not teach in the State.

Sec. 2007—Teacher development

This section replaces “limited English proficient” with “English learner.”

Sec. 2008—State functions

This section specifies that states must identify at-risk and low-performing teacher and school leader preparation programs. It also specifies that states must conduct the at-risk and low-performing program identification in order to receive funds under title II of the ESEA, in addition to receiving funds under this title of the HEA, as previously required. It also increases the requirements and capacity for effective oversight and intervention for at-risk and low-performing teacher and school leader preparation programs to ensure program improvement. It adds a requirement that states work in consultation with a representative group of community stakeholders (including leaders and faculty of traditional and alternative route educator preparation programs, preK–12 leaders and staff, teacher leader candidates, and other stakeholders as determined by the state) to identify low-performing programs. States must establish a period of improvement and redesign for such programs.

This section also removes the requirement that states reinstate teacher preparation programs that closed upon demonstration of improved performance, meaning that states are not required to reopen a failing program even if its performance improves. This section maintains the authority for the Secretary to issue regulations on state functions in evaluating teacher preparation programs, so long as such regulations are promulgated pursuant to a negotiated rulemaking.

Sec. 2009—General provisions

This section makes a technical edit to institutions’ reporting requirements.

Sec. 2010—Elevation of the education profession study

This section establishes a new study to examine state policies related to teacher and school leader education and certification. The study seeks to produce a comprehensive set of expectations for entry into the profession and ensure teachers and school leaders are profession-ready upon entering the field. Additionally, the study will include recommendations to Congress on evidence-based best practices to elevate the education practice. This section requires the Secretary to establish an Advisory Committee to carry out the study, which will be comprised of representatives from a variety of educational technology organizations, nonprofits, teacher unions, professional development organizations, and state and LEAs.

Sec. 2011—Authorization of appropriations

This section increases the authorization level of the Teacher and School Leader Quality Partnership Grants program from $300 million to $500 million for FY 2021 and the five succeeding fiscal years.

Part B—Enhancing Teacher and School Leader Education

Sec. 2101—Enhancing teacher and school leader education

This section authorizes $150,000,000 to carry out this part for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. This section repeals authorizations for three unfunded grant programs. This section adds Congressional findings on the teacher diversity gap that negatively affects student achievement to the Honorable Augustus F. Hawkins Centers of Excellence program. It also establishes that the purpose of such program is to strengthen and expand the recruitment, training, and retention of diverse candidates into the teaching profession. It specifies that funds may also be used to implement reforms in school leader programs at eligible institutions.

This section re-designates Subpart 2 as Preparing Well-Rounded Teachers as an update to the previously authorized Part B program that prepared general education teachers to educate students with disabilities. The program will provide competitive grants to improve general educator preparation to ensure that teacher candidates have the skills necessary to instruct students with disabilities in general education classrooms and to expand programs that embed social-emotional learning, trauma-informed care, and positive behavior management practices.

Subpart 3 authorizes the Preparing Teachers for English-Learner Instruction program, which will provide competitive grants to improve the preparation of teacher candidates to ensure they possess the knowledge and skills necessary to effectively instruct English Learners. Eligible partnerships that receive grants must provide a match of at least 25 percent toward the cost of activities. The Secretary is required to ensure geographic distribution in awarding grants. Grantees must report an evaluation of the program to the Secretary who will make the findings public.

Subpart 4 is re-designated as the Graduate Fellowships to Prepare Faculty in High-Need Areas at Colleges of Education, which was formerly authorized as Subpart 5.

Subpart 5 specifies priorities in awarding competitive grants to any Part B program. The Secretary must prioritize programs that increase diversity in the educator workforce, those that recruit candidates to work in their local schools, or address the science, technology, music, arts, math, and computer science teacher shortages.

TITLE III—INSTITUTIONAL AID

Sec. 3001—Strengthening institutions

This section adds the following allowable uses for the Strengthening Institutions Program (SIP): establishing community outreach programs, developing and implementing postsecondary career and technical education programs, aligning and integrating career and technical education programs with programs of study, and developing and expanding dual enrollment programs.

Sec. 3002—Strengthening institutions

This section makes changes to give Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities (TCCUs), Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian-Serving Institutions (ANNHSIs), Predominantly Black Institutions (PBIs), Native American-Serving Non-Tribal Institutions

(NASNTIs), Asian American Native American Pacific Islander Serving Institutions (AANAPISIs), and institutions receiving grants under the SIP more flexibility to develop endowments. Such flexibility includes allowing institutional grantees that use grant funds for endowments to count restricted gifts to the endowment fund toward the statutory matching requirement and reducing such requirement from a minimum of 100 percent to 50 percent. This section further allows institutions using grant funds for endowment growth to use endowment earnings to support student scholarships.

This section adds instruction in Native American language and outreach to encourage adults to pursue an interest in postsecondary education to the list of authorized activities for title III funds for TCCUs. This section also removes the requirement that TCCUs must enroll a certain threshold of needy students and have low educational and general expenditures and allows TCCUs to carry over unspent funds into the next grant cycle.

This section authorizes the Native American Language Vitalization and Training Program to support the preservation, revitalization, relevancy, and use of Native American languages. Under such program, TCCUs, ANNHISIs, and AANAPISIs located in American Samoa, Guam, or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands are eligible to apply for grants (not to exceed five years in length) to support programs that promote Native American languages. Authorized activities include curriculum and professional development, partnerships with K–12 schools, and innovative language programs (e.g. language immersion programs). This section authorizes $20 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years for this program, $15 million of which shall be made available to TCCUs each fiscal year.

This section makes a technical correction to ensure that ANNAHSIs and AANAPISIs are aligned with the other institutions regarding eligibility for Title V. This section also makes a technical correction to ensure that PBIs, like other institutions funded under sections 316 through 320 of the HEA, do not face a wait-out period before being eligible to compete for funding.

Sec. 3003—Strengthening Historically Black Colleges and Universities

This section expands the authorized activities for grants to Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) authorized under section 323 of the HEA to include support for customized instructional courses, such as remedial education; the acquisition of technology; establishment or enhancement of an alternative teacher training program; creation or improvements to distance education programs; establishment or improvements to programs that support the educational outcomes of Black males; financial assistance to students in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM) fields (not more than 30 percent of the grant can be used for this purpose); and establishment or improvement of an office to help identify and apply for external funding opportunities.

This section gives HBCUs flexibility to develop endowments using funds awarded under title III of the HEA. Such flexibility includes allowing HBCUs that use grant funds for endowments to count restricted gifts to the endowment fund toward the statutory matching requirement and reducing such requirement from a minimum of 100 percent to 50 percent. This section further allows HBCUs using grant funds for endowment growth to use endowment earnings to support student scholarships.

This section also amends the process for allotment of funds to allow six years for HBCU graduates to enroll in a graduate or professional discipline where Black students are underrepresented; amends the minimum allotment each HBCU must receive based on whether the institution has previously received a grant under part B of title III; and includes a hold harmless provision for institutions that were funded in FY 2019 in the event additional institutions become eligible. This section also makes changes to require a description of student retention, graduation, and post-graduate outcomes goals on the funding application.

This section updates the allowable uses in grants to Historically Black Graduate Institutions under section 326 of the HEA to allow for strengthening of funds management, tutoring and student supports, and creating or improving distance education programs. This section makes the University of the Virgin Islands School of Medicine an eligible institution for this grant.

Sec. 3004—Historically Black College and University Capital Financing

This section makes several changes to improve the administration and availability of funds under the HBCU Capital Financing program. It recharacterizes the current escrow account as a bond insurance fund to address concerns arising from state laws that have prevented public HBCUs in certain states from accessing funds under this program. This section limits the interest rate on loans for academic facilities in STEM disciplines to one percent and it increases the aggregate bond limit to $3.6 billion. This section improves the Department's ability to provide technical assistance to HBCUs seeking capital improvement loans and allows Department to modify or defer a loan made to an institution. Finally, this section strengthens the oversight provided by the HBCU Capital Financing Advisory Board.

Sec. 3005—Strengthening Historically Black Colleges and Universities and other minority-serving institutions

This section authorizes and appropriates $300 million for FY 2021 and each of the succeeding fiscal years for part F of title III of the HEA and adjusts the allocation amounts for each institutional designation proportionate to the increase annual funding.

Sec. 3006—General provisions

This section reauthorizes discretionary programs in support of TCCUs, ANNHSIs, PBIs, NASNTIs, AANAPISIs, Historically Black Graduate Institutions, and institutions receiving SIP funds for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. This section reauthorizes Endowment Challenge Grants, the HBCU Capital Financing program, the Minority Science and Engineering Improvement Program, and the Programs in STEM Fields.

TITLE IV—STUDENT ASSISTANCE

Sec. 4001—Effective date

This section establishes an effective date of July 1, 2021 for title IV of this Act, unless otherwise provided.

Part A—Grants to Students in Attendance at Institutions of Higher Education

Subpart 1—Federal Pell GrantsSec. 4011—Amount of grants

This section increases the maximum Pell Grant award by $625 (to $6,820 for the 2021 2022 award year) and reinstates and makes permanent annual inflation increases to the maximum award. This section repeals the ban on the use of Pell Grants among incarcerated individuals, continues the year-round Pell Grant program, and makes conforming changes to include references to the aCDR and on-time repayment rate authorized by this Act.

Sec. 4012—Grant eligibility

This section allows students to exhaust full Pell eligibility on graduate studies following completion of a bachelor's degree. This section extends the period of eligibility for Pell Grants from 12 semesters to 14 semesters. This section restores Pell Grant eligibility for students who had federal student loans forgiven due to school closure or fraudulent institutional behavior and for students who successfully assert a borrower defense claim and restores Pell Grant eligibility to students who did not receive a federal student loan but would have qualified for a loan discharge due to such circumstances.

Sec. 4013—Extending Federal Pell Grant eligibility of certain short-term programs

This section authorizes the use of Pell Grants for short-term job training programs that last between 8 and 15 weeks, provide between 150 and 600 hours of instructional time, and lead to an industry-recognized credential. Participating institutions are required to work with an industry or sector partnership to ensure that programs are aligned with the requirements of high-skill, high-wage, or in-demand industry sectors or occupations in the state or local area.

This section makes students who have already received a post-baccalaureate degree ineligible for use of Pell Grants for short-term job training program and stipulates that any period during which a student receives a job training Pell Grant will be included in calculating such student's total eligibility period for Pell Grants. The minimum Pell award is waived for the purposes of this section, and students are prohibited from simultaneously receiving a standard Pell Grant and a Pell Grant for enrollment in a short-term job training program.

Industry and sector partnerships will identify the anticipated earnings of program graduates for short-term programs accessing Pell under this section, which must be higher than earnings of students with only a high school diploma. The anticipated earnings benchmark is subsequently used to review eligibility for job training programs. This section requires institutions providing short-term programs accessing Pell under this section to ensure that students are able to earn academic credits that are applicable to a subsequent certificate or degree program. Credits can be awarded at the time of course completion or upon enrollment in a subsequent program (for example, via a prior learning assessment). Institutions must inform students of the anticipated earnings and subsequent certificate and degree programs associated with Pell-eligible job training programs.

Short-term programs accessing Pell under this section must also meet requirements associated with programs that prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation and the earnings and completion requirements associated with short-term programs that access federal student loans. Only title IV eligible institutions listed in the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) eligible training provider lists may participate under this section, and programs must be part of a career pathway (as defined in WIOA) in order to be eligible. For-profit institutions and any institution that has been subject to adverse or negative actions by accrediting agencies or state or federal enforcement agencies within the past five years are excluded from accessing Pell under this section. This section establishes that job training programs cannot exceed by more than 50 percent the minimum program length required by a state to receive a professional license or certification. Institutions must secure confirmation from the state workforce board of the state in which the program is located of the program's compliance with this and other relevant requirements.

This section requires the Secretary to approve short-term program applications within 180 days and review each program's eligibility at least once every three years. This review must, at a minimum, evaluate whether program completers are earning the anticipated wages identified in the initial application. The Secretary is also required to collect data on the impact of short-term programs accessing Pell under this section and report on such impact to the public and to Congress.

Sec. 4014—Providing Federal Pell Grants for Iraq and Afghanistan veteran's dependents

This section makes the Iraq and Afghanistan Service Grants program part of the Pell Grant program, effective for the award year immediately following the date of enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4015—Federal Pell Grant fraud prevention

This section requires the Secretary to prepare and submit an annual report to Congress regarding potential fraud in the Pell Grant program, including the name of every institution where more than two percent of total applicants were flagged for unusual enrollment history.

Sec. 4016—Federal Pell Grants on behalf of incarcerated individuals

This section establishes requirements that institutions must satisfy in order to receive Pell Grant funding for the enrollment of incarcerated students. Only public institutions, private nonprofit institutions, and postsecondary vocational institutions (as defined in section 102(c) of the HEA) are eligible to award Pell Grants on behalf of incarcerated students. Institutions are not eligible if they have been subject to the denial, withdrawal, suspension, or termination of accreditation over the past five years.

Institutions offering Pell-eligible prison education programs must provide incarcerated students with academic credits that are the same as credits earned by non-incarcerated students for an equivalent course and provide confirmation from each facility involved that the course of study offered by the institution at such facility is accessible to incarcerated individuals, including individuals with disabilities. Institutions offering distance education programs must provide evidence of the institution's success in offering distance programs and confirmation that the distance education program offers levels of faculty interaction, peer engagement, and student support sufficient to enable students to successfully participate the program.

Institutions must additionally institute a process to allow incarcerated individuals to access their transcripts and other educational records, including after transfer or release, and to allow incarcerated students opportunities to provide feedback on educational programs that are comparable to the opportunities afforded to non-incarcerated students. Institutions are prohibited from passing any direct costs onto Pell-eligible incarcerated students or their families, including the cost of accommodations for students with disabilities. The cost of attendance for Pell-eligible students must be covered by other sources, such as federal, state and institutional grants or other grant aid. This requirement applies to students who are determined, based on the income and asset information submitted in the FAFSA, to have an expected family contribution (EFC) that would qualify them for Pell, regardless of whether the student receives a Pell Grant.

A limited exception is made to the direct cost prohibition for students who are determined, based on the income and asset information submitted in the FAFSA, to have an EFC that would disqualify them from receiving a Pell Grant. In such cases, institutions may not directly charge such students an amount that exceeds their EFC.

Institutions must additionally provide the following information to prospective students, the Secretary, the institution's accrediting agency, and the correctional facility with regard to each course of study offered to Pell-eligible incarcerated students: the cost of attendance; the mode of instruction (e.g. distance education, in-person, or blended); how enrollment will impact students' lifetime eligibility for Pell Grants; the transferability of credits and whether credits are counted toward a degree or certificate program offered by the institution; the process for continuing education upon transfer to another facility or release; the process for continuing enrollment at the institution upon release, including barriers to admission such as criminal history questions on applications for admissions; and in the case of programs designed to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation, information on any relevant licensure and certification requirements for the relevant occupation, as well as restrictions in State or federal law related to the employment of formerly incarcerated individuals in the relevant occupation.

This section requires the Secretary to confirm an institution's initial eligibility and determine at least once every 5 years whether an institution should continue to be eligible to receive Pell Grants on behalf of incarcerated students. Reviews of eligibility are based on compliance with the requirements of this Act, the data collected on each course of study offered by the institution, and any other information that may be available to the Secretary. The Secretary is also required to collect data on the courses of study for which incarcerated students receive Pell Grants, including data related to student demographics, the share of students receiving Pell Grants, academic outcomes of incarcerated students (such as credit accumulation and degree completion), to the extent practicable, post-release outcomes (such as continued postsecondary enrollment, employment, and recidivism), and, where available, data from student satisfaction surveys conducted by the institution or correctional facility. The Secretary will provide a report on best practices in educating incarcerated students at least once every three years and issue a report on the impact of the expansion of Pell Grants for incarcerated students within three years of the enactment of this Act.

Subpart 2—Federal Early Outreach and Student Services Programs

Chapter 1—Federal TRIO Programs

Sec. 4021—Program authority; authorization of appropriations

This section authorizes the minimum grant amount for TRIO programs at $220,000 except in cases where total funding would result in fewer than 2,7800 grants being awarded, in which case the minimum is reduced until at least 2,7800 grants can be funded. This section further renames the TRIO priority for 'prior experience' to 'prior success' and ensures that homeless and foster youth are able to participate in and benefit from TRIO services. Homeless and foster youth status are also added as required disaggregation categories for TRIO programs.

This section sets the required timeframe for notifying grant recipients of the status of their renewal applications at 90 days and requires the Department to publish guidance for TRIO applicants at least 90 days before the start of each grant competition. The Department is also required to provide at least one virtual, interactive training for potential grant applicants.

This section prohibits the Department from rejecting a TRIO grant application solely on the basis of a failure to meet page limits and formatting standards. It further requires that the Department provide applicants an opportunity to correct typographical and rounding errors in proposed budgets before issuing any rejection or penalty.

This section allows TRIO programs to use income as reported in the FAFSA and Pell Grant eligibility as proof of low-income status for the purpose of qualifying for TRIO services. For the Talent Search and Educational Opportunity Centers programs, students will also be considered low-income if they attend a school that is receiving or eligible to receive special assistance payments through the federal free and reduced price school lunch program.

This section makes conforming changes to remove references to the Academic Competitiveness Grant Program. For the Talent Search and Upward Bound programs, this section adds outcome metrics related to FAFSA completion and college admissions applications. For Upward Bound programs this section further ensures that programs that specifically target veterans will be evaluated based on a set of criteria reflective of the population served (e.g. not including metrics related to high school performance). For Student Support Services (SSS) Programs, this section ensures that outcome metrics for programs at two-year institutions accurately reflect the success of students who transfer to a four-year institution. For Postbaccalaureate Achievement Programs, this section sets a two-year timeframe for the graduate study outcome metric and a ten-year timeframe for the outcome metric related to doctoral degree attainment. For Educational Opportunity Centers, this section sets a two-year timeframe for the outcome metric related to enrollment in programs that lead to a secondary school diploma or its equivalent and ensures that returning college students are captured in the college enrollment outcome metric.

This section authorizes $1.12 billion for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years and includes an annual inflation increase for FY 2022 through FY 2026. This section authorizes the Department to use up to one percent of program funds to administer grant competitions, conduct oversight, provide technical assistance, and provide guidance to potential TRIO applicants.

Sec. 4022—Talent search

This section adds college advising to the purpose of the Talent Search program, adds career counseling to the list of required services, and ensures that required financial literacy services include information on degree choice and potential federal loan burden. This section requires applicants to provide an assurance that they have reviewed and revised policies and practices to remove barriers to participation of homeless and foster youth and to submit a description of the activities they will undertake to conduct outreach to homeless and foster youth. Talent Search grant recipients must also report on the number of homeless children and youth served and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

Sec. 4023—Upward bound

This section updates the required services for Upward Bound to include career counseling and to ensure that required financial literacy services help participants make informed choices regarding postsecondary options. This section removes a required activity related to providing secondary school reentry, alternative education programs, and GED programs. This section specifies that Upward Bound programs shall provide instruction in math, science, foreign language, language arts, and, in the case of a program not designed specifically for veterans, literature. This section strikes the requirement that multi-year grant recipients provide instruction in such areas and strikes language related to program funding in FY 2008 through FY 2011.

This section replaces references to “youth” with the word “participants” and sets the maximum stipends available to participants at $90 per month in the summer, $450 per month for individuals participating in a work-study program in the summer, and $60 per month during non-summer months. This section authorizes a $100 per month stipend available to adults participating in projects specifically targeting veterans.

This section requires Upward Bound applicants to provide an assurance that they have reviewed and revised policies and practices to remove barriers to participation of homeless and foster youth and to submit a description of the activities they will undertake to conduct outreach to homeless and foster youth. Upward Bound grant recipients must also report on the number of homeless children and youth served and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

Sec. 4024—Student support services

This section includes support for low-income and first-generation college students in the purpose of the SSS Program. This section strikes financial planning services from the program purpose and includes such services as a required service. This section further amends the required services to require that financial literacy services include information on loan burdens, repayment options, and expected earnings.

This section requires SSS applicants to provide an assurance that they have reviewed and revised policies and practices to remove barriers to participation of homeless and foster youth and to submit a description of the activities they will undertake to conduct outreach to homeless and foster youth. SSS grant recipients must also report on the number of homeless children and youth served and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

Sec. 4025—Postbaccalaureate achievement program authority

This section amends required services for the Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program to include year-round internships as well as faculty-led experiences. This section authorizes the maximum annual stipend for participating students at $4,000.

Sec. 4026—Educational opportunity centers

This section amends the purpose of the Educational Opportunity Centers (EOC) program to reflect the participation of returning students and to ensure that financial literacy services include information on financial planning for college, including loan burdens, repayment options, and expected earnings.

This section requires EOC applicants to provide an assurance that they have reviewed and revised policies and practices to remove barriers to participation of homeless and foster youth and to submit a description of the activities they will undertake to conduct outreach to homeless and foster youth. EOC grant recipients must also report on the number of homeless children and youth served and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

Sec. 4027—Staff developmental activities

This section amends staff development activities for TRIO programs to include webinars and online classes and make training available to all staff of TRIO programs. This section provides for two training opportunities on legislation and regulatory requirements and program management—one for new directors and one for continuing directors and staff. This section strikes a reference to “model programs” and inserts a reference to “innovations.”

Sec. 4028—Reports and evaluations

This section expands reporting requirements for various TRIO programs. This section removes references to an FY 2010 evaluation of Upward Bound programs and specifies that evaluations of TRIO programs shall address issues including the effectiveness of programs and projects in meeting or exceeding their stated objectives, enhancing access of low-income and first-generation students to postsecondary education, and preparing such individuals for college. The section further requires that TRIO evaluations compare students who participate in TRIO programs with students who do not participate, including on measures of educational attainment, retention rates, graduation rates, and college admission and completion rates. It ensures that the outcome targets used by TRIO programs are considered when implementing evaluations required under this section and requires that Upward Bound programs be additionally evaluated based on the characteristics of students who benefit most from such programs. This section requires that TRIO evaluations be submitted to the Congress.

This section authorizes reporting requirements related to homeless and foster youth to which Talent Search, Upward Bound, Student Support Services, and Educational Opportunity Centers grant recipients are subject. Such grant recipients must report on the number of homeless children and youth served (when such data are available) and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

Chapter 2—Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate ProgramsSec. 4031—Gaining early awareness and readiness for undergraduate programs

This section makes amendments to emphasize college readiness and codify long-standing policies related to the receipt of multiple awards, the distribution of program funds, the frequency of open competitions, and the treatment of non-federal scholarships for the purposes of the non-federal matching requirement. It also updates competitive priorities and applies such priorities as optional to both state and partnership grantees.

This section requires GEAR UP applicants to describe how they will facilitate the participation of homeless and foster youth in GEAR UP programs, including through identification and outreach activities, data collection and reporting, and the revising of policies and practices to remove barriers to participation among homeless and foster youth.

This section authorizes a two-to-one federal-to-non-federal match requirement. This section authorizes, as grant activities, advising by peer and near-peer mentors, counseling and referral services, additional types of assessments, and capacity building activities that create college going cultures in participating schools. This section authorizes grantees to implement expanded credit recovery programs, to collect and analyze data, and to recruit and retain homeless individuals and foster care youth. This section authorizes, but does not require, grantees to provide services to high school students who received services under a previous grant. This section authorizes the provision of technical assistance as an activity of State grantees.

This section clarifies that free and reduced priced lunch eligibility can be used to determine status as a priority student and provides flexibility for GEAR UP grantees that choose to offer scholarships. This section allows scholarship recipients to use funds for pre-enrollment costs such as application fees and deposits. This section further improves the technical assistance available to, and national evaluations of, GEAR UP programs.

This section authorizes reporting requirements related to homeless and foster youth to which GEAR UP grantees are subject. Grant recipients must report on the number of homeless children and youth served (when such data are available) and any strategies or program enhancements that were effective in meeting the needs of homeless and foster youth.

This section authorizes $500 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years for GEAR UP programs.

Subpart 3—Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants

Sec. 4041—Purpose; appropriations authorized

This section authorizes appropriations for the Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (FSEOG) program and authorizes the creation of an emergency grant aid program for public and private nonprofit institutions that participate in FSEOG. This section authorizes $1.15 billion for FY 2021, $1.3 billion for FY 2022, $1.45 billion for FY 2023, $1.6 billion for FY 2024, and $1.75 billion for FY 2025 and each succeeding fiscal year. This section also allocates $12.5 million from authorized funds in FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years for the emergency grant aid program.

Sec. 4042—Institutional eligibility

This section does not require an institutional match of funds for HBCUs, TCCUs, and HSIs, ANNHSIs, PBIs, AANAPISIs, and NASNTIs (other MSIs), described under title III and title V of the HEA, that participate in FSEOG.

Sec. 4043—Allocation of funds

This section amends the formula for allocation of FSEOG program funds to give more weight to student need and provides for gradual implementation of such amended formula. Beginning in FY 2021 the formula changes to: 90 percent of the amount the institution received in FY 2020 or the fair share amount, whichever is greater. This continues through FY 2022—FY 2025. Starting in FY 2026 and for each succeeding fiscal year, the allocation is the fair share amount.

This section defines the fair share amount as based on undergraduate need at the institution, which is equal to 50 percent of the proportional amount of Pell grants awarded at the institution relative to Pell Grants awarded at all participating institutions, and 50 percent of the proportional amount of undergraduate need at the institution relative to institutional need at all participating institutions. Undergraduate need is determined by taking such student's average cost of attendance at the participating institution and subtracting such student's EFC which cannot exceed such student's annual subsidized or unsubsidized loan limit. An institution that enrolls less than seven percent Pell Grant recipients for two or more fiscal years during a three-year fiscal year period is ineligible to participate in FSEOG.

Sec. 4044—Emergency financial aid grant program

This section authorizes a competitive grant program for participating institutions to provide students with emergency funding of no more than $750 for an individual request and no more than $2,000 total from the federal share of funds through completion. Institutions are provided flexibility to define an emergency for which a grant may be awarded to a student but at minimum, this includes loss of employment, loss of housing, food insecurity, a medical condition, and death or medical condition of the student's parent or guardian. The Secretary will determine how quickly aid must be released to students and priority is given to institutions that enroll at least 30 percent Pell eligible students. Participating institutions are required to report annually to the Secretary about the outcomes of the grant program including the types of emergencies declared and the average grant award.

Subpart 4—Special Programs for Students Whose Families Are Engaged in Migrant and Seasonal Farmwork

Sec. 4051—Special programs for students whose families are engaged in migrant and seasonal farmwork

This section reauthorizes the high school equivalency program and college assistance migrant program projects for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Subpart 5—Child Care Access Means Parents in School

Sec. 4061—CCAMPIS reauthorization

This section reauthorizes and makes changes to the Child Care Access Means Parents in School (CCAMPIS) program. This section authorizes the maximum grant amount at 2 percent of the total amount of Pell Grant funds awarded to students at the institution and authorizes the Department to award bonus funds to long-standing and successful grantees in the event that appropriations for the program exceed $140 million in a given fiscal year. Such bonuses are not to exceed an amount equal to 20 percent of the annual grant payment received by the institution in the preceding fiscal year.

This section authorizes a five-year grant period for CCAMPIS and specifies that grant funds may be used to provide evening, summer, weekend and before and after school services, as well as services to expectant parents. This section requires CCAMPIS applications to include information on the number of low-income student parents being served through campus-based childcare services and the estimated percentage of the institution's grant that will be used to directly subsidize the fee charged for on- and off-campus childcare for low-income students.

This section requires new grantees to meet reasonable quality standards aligned to standards used in other federal childcare support programs within three years of receiving a CCAMPIS grant. This section requires grantees to provide information to student parents on potential eligibility for benefits under the supplemental nutrition assistance program (SNAP), special supplemental nutrition program for women, infants, and children (WIC), and temporary assistance for needy families (TANF) program. Applications must also contain an abstract summarizing the contents of such application and how the institution intends to achieve the purpose of the CCAMPIS program. This section further requires applications to include an assurance that the applicant will provide information regarding the availability of child care subsidies for student parents and the dependent care cost allowance available to parents with dependent children in accordance with section 472 of the HEA.

This section authorizes the Secretary to provide technical assistance to help eligible institutions qualify for, apply for, and maintain a CCAMPIS grant. This section updates CCAMPIS priorities to include the extent to which grantees leverage local or institutional resources and to prioritize applicants that demonstrate a high likelihood of need for campus-based child care based on student demographics.

This section updates and refines the reporting requirements for CCAMPIS grantees and includes specific reporting on the outcomes of students who receive child care services at least once per week. Such outcomes, which include rates of retention, transfer, and graduation, are compared to outcomes among all students and low-income students at the institution. Grant recipients must also report on the percentage of the institution's grant that was used to directly subsidize the fee charged for on- and off-campus childcare and indicate whether the institution restricts eligibility to only full-time students. Institutions receiving CCAMPIS grants must also set sufficiently ambitious performance goals to be used to assess eligibility for bonus funds. Such performance goals are not used to determine initial or ongoing eligibility for CCAMPIS.

This section requires the Secretary to annually produce a public report summarizing the information collected from CCAMPIS grantees and to provide technical assistance to help grantees meet CCAMPIS reporting requirements.

This section authorizes $200 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Subpart 6—Jumpstart to College Grant Programs

Sec. 4071—Jumpstart to college grant programs

This section authorizes the “Jumpstart to College” grant program to increase the percentage of students, particularly low-income students and other students traditionally underrepresented in higher education, who complete a recognized postsecondary credential within 100 percent of normal time for the completion of such credential.

This section defines eligible entities as public or private nonprofit institutions partnered with one or more LEA. This section also aligns definitions of dual or concurrent enrollment and early college high school, along with other definitions, with the ESEA. The term recognized postsecondary credential is aligned to WIOA.

This section authorizes $250 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. This section reserves 40 percent of funds to grants that are partnerships established between institutions and LEAs, 55 percent of funds for grants to states, and 5 percent for national activities.

This section creates a six-year competitive grant competition for eligible entities to establish or support a dual or concurrent enrollment program or early college high school and limits each grant to no more than $2 million. Grantees must provide a match that starts at 20 percent of the grant award and increases over time to 50 percent by year six. This section allows the Secretary to give priority to applicants that propose to establish or support a quality program serving low-income students. Priority shall also be given to applicants located in states that provide state support for dual enrollment or early college. The Secretary shall ensure that award-ees are geographically diverse and represent both two- and four-year institutions.

This section creates a six-year competitive grant competition for states to assist them in supporting or establishing early college high schools or dual or concurrent enrollment programs. There is no authorized limit on the maximum award given to any one state. States must match at least 50 percent of the grant award with non-federal funds. Applicants must provide information on how the state will do the following: Access and leverage resources necessary to sustain the programs; align programs with ESEA, WIOA, Carl D. Perkins Career and Technical Education Act (CTE); and identify and eliminate barriers to program sustainability.

This section requires all grantees to submit annual reports to the Department including information about the number of students enrolled in programs funded under this section, the number and percentage of students who earn a recognized postsecondary credential when they graduate high school, the number of postsecondary credits students earn, and other outcome data.

This section requires the Department to provide technical assistance to grantees and disseminate best practices. Further, this section requires the Department to contract with an independent entity to evaluate the grants awarded under this section.

Subpart 7—TEACH Grants

Sec. 4081—Revised definitions of teach grants

This section defines teacher preparation programs as a state-approved course of study at an institution that meets all the state's educational or training requirements for initial certification or licensure to teach in the state's elementary or secondary schools.

Sec. 4082—Revisions to establishing teach grant program

This section allows for individuals who complete an associate's degree in early childhood development to qualify for up to $8,000 under the TEACH Grant program. If such individuals pursue a bachelor's degree in early childhood development upon completion of their associate's degree, this section clarifies that those individuals can receive up to $8000 more under the program. This section amends the grant structure to authorize $8000 per year per individual in the junior and senior years of such individual's undergraduate program.

Sec. 4083—Revisions to teach grant agreements to serve and eligibility

This section authorizes early childhood education as an eligible high-need field and location for teachers to complete their four years of service under the TEACH Grant. An early childhood educator qualifies if they work at a location serving low-income communities that is in the same geographic location of a high-need LEA. This section includes an assurance that an applicant's loan servicer will notify the applicant when they are required to certify their service, including when they have failed to submit such certification. Further, this section clarifies the timeframe during which an applicant's grant is converted to a loan that must be repaid. This section allows for a TEACH grant recipient's service to still qualify if their LEA no longer meets the high-need definition, they change duties or assignments at their school, or their subject area no longer meets the high-need definition.

Sec. 4084—Revisions to teach grant data collection and reporting

This section requires the Secretary to make publicly available annual reports with aggregate student data on recipient outcomes, proportion of those whose TEACH grant is converted into loans and requires data to be disaggregated. This section requires the Secretary to provide reports at least once every three years to Congress on the utilization rates of TEACH grants, review of best practices associated with higher rates of completion of agreements, and recommendations to improve the program.

Subpart 8—Northern Mariana Islands and American Samoa College Access

Sec. 4091—Northern Mariana Islands and American Samoa College access

This section authorizes a grant program to increase access to four-year institutions for eligible students residing in the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) and American Samoa. Funding is provided to the Governors of CNMI and American Samoa to pay an eligible participating institution the difference between the tuition and fees charged for in-State and out-of-State students. The participating institution must enter into an agreement with the Governors and be a public four-year institution located in one of the fifty states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, or Guam. Eligible students are individuals who enroll in a participating four-year institution within three years of graduating from a two-year college located in the CNMI or American Samoa.

This section authorizes $5 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. The amount paid on behalf of an eligible student cannot exceed $15,000 during one award year and not more than $45,000 in the aggregate. If there is insufficient funding, the amount paid on behalf of the student can be ratably reduced. The Governors are authorized to prioritize the amount of tuition and fee payments based on the income and need of eligible students. A Governor cannot use more than 5 percent of the available funds to pay the administrative expenses of the program.

Each Governor must carry out the program in consultation with the Secretary and must develop policies and procedures to administer the program. Additionally, each Governor must submit an annual report to Congress detailing the number of participating students and their progress in completing a degree.

This section also requires that the Government Accountability Office (GAO) report on the effect of the program on educational opportunities for eligible students and any barriers to implementation.

Subpart 9—Student Access

Sec. 4092—Community College Student Success Grant program authorized

This section authorizes a competitive grant program to community colleges to plan and implement student success programs designed to increase the rates at which community college students either transfer or complete their programs of study within 150 percent of the normal time of completion.

This section authorizes a one-year competitive planning grant for community colleges to develop community college student success programs and gives priority to institutions eligible to receive funds under title III or title V of the HEA. Applications must be peer-reviewed by non-federal employees who have research or practical experience with community college student support programs.

This section authorizes a five-year competitive grant for community colleges to implement student success programs and limits eligibility for receipt of implementation grants to community colleges that received a planning grant authorized under this section. This section requires a non-federal match starting in the second year of the grant and requires institutions to contribute an increasing match between years two and five of the grant. TCCUs and colleges located in the U.S. territories are not required to match more than 5 percent of the cost to carry out the community college student success program for each year.

Community colleges must use funds to implement a community college student success program, regularly review student progress through data monitoring, and employ individuals specifically responsible for administering the student success program. This section also authorizes uses of funds including the creation or expansion of data tracking systems; provision of financial assistance to help cover the cost of textbooks, living expenses, and childcare; funds to cover financial gaps for summer courses; and establishment or expansion of career development and tutoring services.

Further, this section requires community colleges to submit annual reports to the Secretary on grant progress and requires a final report within a year after the grant concludes on the success or failure of the program; challenges faced and opportunities for improvement; and plans for program continuation.

This section requires the Institute of Education Sciences (IES) to contract with an independent evaluator prior to awarding implementation grants and mandates program evaluation of each individual community college student success program as well as the average impact, variation in program impacts, and cost effectiveness of student success programs on graduation and transfer rates compared to eligible institutions without such programs. The Secretary is required to notify eligible institutions of the availability of grants under this program and to provide technical assistance in developing sufficiently ambitious outcome goals and implementing community college student success programs. The Secretary is required to submit a report to Congress within one year of receiving the final evaluation results. This section prohibits grantees from using grant funds to carry out activities that would have been carried out in the absence of federal funds.

This section defines community college student success program as a program carried out by an eligible institution (i.e. a public two-year institution) that provides eligible students with additional support to meet unmet financial need. This section requires such students to meet with a program advisor twice monthly during the first semester and as directed in subsequent terms and participate in career advising events at least once per semester. For students referred to remedial education, this section requires such students to meet with tutors at least weekly.

This section requires grantees to actively offer students tutoring, career services, and program advisors who provide comprehensive advising, including help with the creation and implementation of an academic plan and academic goals. An eligible student is defined as a full-time community college student enrolled in an associate degree program and is either a first-time undergraduate or a transfer student with no more than 15 credits and a 2.0 minimum GPA. Eligible students must need no more than two remedial courses and have completed the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). This section authorizes $1 billion in FY 2021 to be available until expended for five succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 4093. Federal Pell Bonus Program

This section authorizes and appropriates $500 million for FY 2021 and each succeeding fiscal year to reward institutions for enrolling low-income students and ensuring that such students succeed. Under this section, eligible institutions (i.e. public and private not-for-profit institutions with a Pell enrollment of at least 25 percent) will receive a bonus for every Pell recipient that earns a bachelor's degree within the normal time to completion. Funds authorized and appropriated under this section may be used by eligible institutions to expand access and success among low-income students, including through the provision of need-based financial aid and student supports.

Part B—Federal Family Education Loan Program

Sec. 4101—Termination of certain repayment plan options and opportunity to change repayment plans

This section allows borrowers with a loan under the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program to discontinue repayment under their existing repayment plan and enter repayment in either the section 493C(f) income-based repayment (IBR) plan or section 493E fixed repayment plan authorized under Sec. 4630 and Sec. 4631 of this Act, respectively. In the case of a defaulted borrower whose loan is assigned to the Secretary, the Secretary may require the borrower to repay according to the section 439C(f) IBR plan.

Sec. 4102—Termination of interest capitalization for subsidized loans after certain periods

This section prohibits accrued interest on FFEL Subsidized Loans from capitalizing after periods of forbearance subsequent to enactment of this Act. This section requires lenders to inform borrowers that interest will not be capitalized at the end of forbearance.

Sec. 4103—Termination of interest capitalization for PLUS loans after certain periods

This section prohibits the accrued interest on FFEL and Federal Direct PLUS Loans (applicable to parent borrowers and graduate/professional student borrowers) from capitalizing at the end of forbearance and certain types of deferment (i.e. graduate fellowship deferment, rehabilitation training program deferment, unemployment deferment, economic hardship deferment, military service deferment, and post-active duty student deferment) subsequent to enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4104—Consolidation loans

This section allows borrowers who have already consolidated their loans to obtain a subsequent consolidation loan for the purpose of separating an existing Joint Consolidation Loan into two separate Direct Consolidation Loans (see Sec. 4302 of this Act for more information), Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF), or entering repayment under the section 493C(f) IBR plan or section 493E fixed repayment plan authorized under Sec. 4630 and Sec. 4631 of this Act, respectively. This section also allows prohibits the accrued interest on consolidation loans from capitalizing at the end of forbearance and certain types of deferment (i.e. graduate fellowship deferment, rehabilitation training program deferment, unemployment deferment, economic hardship deferment, military service deferment, and post-active duty student deferment) subsequent to enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4105—Default reduction program

This section requires the Secretary to request any consumer reporting agency to which the Secretary reported the default of the loan to remove any adverse information relating to such loan from the borrower's credit history.

Sec. 4106—Termination of interest capitalization for unsubsidized loans after certain periods

This section exempts the accrued interest on unsubsidized FFEL loans from capitalizing at the end of all forbearance and certain types of deferment (i.e. graduate fellowship deferment, rehabilitation training program deferment, unemployment deferment, economic hardship deferment, military service deferment, and post-active duty student deferment) subsequent to enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4107—Disbursement of student loans

This section allows institutions with an aCDR (authorized under Sec. 4110 of this Act) below a specified threshold for each of the three most recent fiscal years to disburse loans (FFEL and Direct Loans) in a single installment for a period of enrollment. Further, this section makes additional conforming amendments related to use of aCDR.

Sec. 4108—Student loan contract and loan disclosures

This section requires that the master promissory note be referred to as a “student loan contract” for periods of enrollment subsequent to enactment of this Act. A borrower may only enter into a student loan contract after completing all annual loan counseling required under Sec. 4611 of this Act. The loan contract is only valid for one academic year. This section requires the Secretary to streamline the student loan disclosure requirements under the HEA.

Sec. 4109—Borrower advocate conforming amendments

This section makes conforming amendments to account for the use of “Borrower Advocate” in place of “Student Loan Ombudsman” (see Sec. 1031 of this Act).

Sec. 4110—Cohort default rates

This section prohibits the default management plans required of poorly performing institutions from including forbearance as a means of reducing cohort default rates.

This section improves the cohort default rate (CDR) metric by adjusting for the number of borrowers at an institution and the number of borrowers who are in long-term forbearance (18 months or longer). An institution’s aCDR is defined in this section as the share of students in default within three years after entering repayment multiplied by the share of students enrolled at the institution who are borrowing a loan under part D of title IV of the HEA (i.e. direct loans including direct subsidized loans, direct unsubsidized loans, and direct PLUS loans). Borrowers who are in non-mandatory forbearance for between 18 and 36 months are not counted as having entered repayment until they cease to be in forbearance and otherwise meet the requirements for being in repayment, while borrowers in forbearance for 3 or more years shall be counted as being in default for the purpose of the aCDR calculation.

This section establishes multiple thresholds that require institutions to take measures to improve their aCDR. Institutions lose eligibility to participate in programs under title IV of the HEA if they have an aCDR of greater than 20 percent for three consecutive fiscal years. Institutions with an aCDR of 15 percent or higher for six consecutive fiscal years lose eligibility unless the Secretary determines that the institution has made adequate progress in meeting accreditor standards for student achievement (see Sec. 4713 of this Act) during the six-year period. Institutions subject to loss of title IV funds based on the six-year threshold may request exceptions to maintain access to title IV for categories of educational programs defined at the credential level (e.g. bachelor's degrees, associate's degrees, and certificates) that have aCDRs below 15 percent. Institutions with an aCDR of 10 percent or higher for eight consecutive years lose eligibility unless the Secretary determines that the institution has made adequate progress in meeting accreditor standards for student achievement during the eight-year period.

This section makes conforming changes to provide for the orderly transition from the CDR metric to the aCDR. This transition is made after the Secretary has published final aCDR rates for at least three fiscal years. This section also provides for a transition period during which any covered institution with an aCDR of over 20 percent may request an exception to maintain title IV eligibility for a maximum of three years after the transition to the aCDR is made. Covered institutions include public institutions, HBCUs, and private nonprofit institutions with a low-income student enrollment of 45 percent or greater.

Institutions with a high aCDR can receive technical assistance and financial support from the Department to improve student outcomes. Only covered institutions with an aCDR of 10 to 15 percent are eligible for such assistance and support (see Sec. 4731 of this Act for details).

Sec. 4111—Automatic income monitoring procedures after a total and permanent disability discharge

This section requires the Secretary to establish and implement automatic income monitoring for borrowers who have experienced a total and permanent disability. The Secretary must provide the borrower with an opportunity to update the income information obtained before determining the borrower's continued eligibility for loan discharge. The Secretary must also allow a borrower to opt-out of the automatic income monitoring under this section.

Sec. 4112—Automatic closed school discharge

This section requires the Secretary to automatically discharge the loans of a borrower who was unable to complete a program due to the closure of the institution and has not enrolled in another institution two years after closure.

Sec. 4113—Repayment of parent loans due to student disability

This section requires the Secretary to discharge a parent's liability on a Federal PLUS loan if the student on whose behalf the parent received the loan becomes permanently and totally disabled or is unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity for at least 60 months due to medical impairment. Safeguards to prevent fraud and abuse applicable to total and permanent disability discharge for loans taken out by students apply to these provisions. This section authorizes the Secretary to promulgate regulations to reinstate the obligation of discharged loans in cases when reinstatement is determined to be necessary and appropriate.

Part C—Federal Work-Study Programs

Sec. 4201—Purpose; authorization of appropriations

This section authorizes $1.5 billion for FY 2021; $1.75 billion for FY 2022; $2 billion for FY 2023; $2.25 billion for FY 2024; and $2.5 billion for FY 2025 and each succeeding fiscal year for Federal Work Study (FWS). This section authorizes “work-based learning” as qualifying under Community Services and defines such term.

Sec. 4202—Allocation formula

This section authorizes use of up to $150 million for each fiscal year to award bonus payments of $5,000 or greater to private non-profit and public institutions for enrolling and graduating high numbers of Pell Grant recipients. To qualify for the bonus fund, institutions must meet certain thresholds of Pell enrollment and completion. This section also directs the Secretary to make publicly available the list of institutions that receive awards from the bonus fund.

This section amends the FWS formula to allocate funds to institutions serving the neediest students and phases-in such amendments. During the phase in period each institution receives the greater of a declining percentage of its FY 2021 allocation or its fair share amount. Beginning in FY 2021 the formula changes to: 90 percent of the amount the institution received in FY 2020 or the fair share amount, whichever is greater. This reduction continues in FY 2022 through FY 2025. In FY 2026 and for each succeeding fiscal year, the institution’s allocation is the fair share amount.

The allocation for FY 2026 and future years is based on the fair share amount for the institution, which is the sum of 100 percent of an institution’s undergraduate need and 25 percent of the institution’s graduate need. Under this formula, institutional undergraduate need is equal to 50 percent of the proportional amount of Pell grants awarded at the institution relative to Pell Grants awarded at all participating institutions, and 50 percent of the proportional amount of undergraduate need at the institution relative to institutional need at all participating institutions. Institutional graduate need is equal to the proportional amount of the institution’s graduate need compared to graduate need at all participating FWS institutions. Undergraduate need is determined by taking such student’s average cost of attendance at the participating institution and subtracting such student’s EFC which cannot exceed such student’s annual subsidized or unsubsidized loan limit. Graduate need is calculated in a similar way and cannot exceed the unsubsidized loan limit for graduate students. An institution is no longer eligible to participate if its student population has less than seven percent Pell Grant recipients for two or more fiscal years during a three-year fiscal year eligible or if the institution only serves graduate students, fewer than five percent have an EFC of zero for two out of three fiscal years.

Sec. 4203—Grants for Federal work-study programs

This section requires institutions to use at least seven percent of total funding to pay students employed in work-based learning positions and use at least three percent of total funding to compensate students with the lowest EFC employed in work-based learning positions during qualified periods of non-enrollment, allowing for individuals to use FWS during the summer. It further allows FWS funds to be used for cooperative education programs in a part-time or full-time capacity that is no longer than six months. This section also requires institutions to provide funding for students' travel expenses if such travel is necessary to allow for participation in the program and requires alignment between a student's educational and career goals.

This section requires institutions to notify students participating in the FWS program of their potential eligibility for SNAP and to provide documentation of such students' participation in FWS for the purposes of qualifying for SNAP benefits. This section requires the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, to provide guidance to states and institutions on how to identify and communicate with students who are likely to be eligible for SNAP, including students participating in the FWS program.

Sec. 4204—Flexible use of funds

This section authorizes participating institutions to carry over 20 percent of program funds from one year to the next and allows students to continue to earn unearned portions of their work study award from the previous year if they are employed in a work-based learning position.

Sec. 4205—Job location and development programs

This section authorizes 20 percent or $150,000 for Job Location and Development Programs and requires institutions to locate and develop work-based learning opportunities and prioritize placing students with exceptional need and FWS recipients in such opportunities.

Sec. 4206—Community service

This section allows participating institutions to use up to 10 percent of funds an institution receives for administrative expenses for the operation of the community service-learning programs, including the work-based learning requirement. Funds must be used to assure the academic quality of the student experience and support a student's career goals.

Sec. 4207—Amendments to Work Colleges

This section adds a staggered date for new Work College applications, requires all applicants to have participated in the Federal Work Study program for at least two years prior to applying, and clarifies that only four-year programs are eligible to participate in the Work College program.

Sec. 4208—Pilot grant program

This section authorizes a $30 million pilot program to provide grants to eligible institutions to establish or expand a program to develop work-based learning positions targeted to students with exceptional need. The application must: identify high-demand occupations and develop partnerships with those employers; involve participating employers in the evaluation and improvement of the program; track and report academic and employment outcomes for participating students; and show the institution's ability to continue implementation when the grant term ends. Institutions must submit a report to the Department on the pilot program, which will include graduation and completion rates of participants, student satisfaction of the program, and the percentage of participants employed in high-demand occupations.

Sec. 4209—Department activities

This section requires the Secretary to develop a consumer-tested electronic survey for students awarded work-study employment and employers of students participating in work-study employment. The Secretary is required to implement such tool no later than one year after enactment of this Act and every four years.

Sec. 4210—Study and report

This section requires the GAO to conduct a study on best practices for assisting students participating in the FWS program.

Part D—Federal Direct Loan Program

Sec. 4301—Program authority

This section makes available to the Department mandatory funding to make newly authorized (1) loans under the Refinanced Direct Loan program, which would include refinanced FFEL Loans and Direct Loans under the new authority, and (2) loans under the Federal Direct Refinanced Private Loans program.

Sec. 4302—Amendments to terms and conditions of loans and repayment plans

This section makes changes to the Direct Loan program, including changes to:

- Provide graduate and professional students attending public and non-profit institutions with access to subsidized loans at the same interest rate available to these students for unsubsidized loans.
- Repeal origination fees on all loans subject to collection of such fees—Direct Subsidized and Unsubsidized Loans and Direct PLUS Loans.
- Require the Secretary to end new eligibility for all existing repayment plans and offer new borrowers either the section 493C(f) IBR plan or section 493E fixed repayment plan established under Sec. 4630 and Sec. 4631 of this Act, respectively. The Secretary must initiate an awareness campaign to inform borrowers of the new existing repayment plans. If the borrower does not select a plan, the Secretary may enroll the borrower in such fixed repayment plan. An existing borrower who is in repayment may choose to retain their repayment plan or elect to enter one of the two plans authorized by this Act. If the borrower elects one of such plans, they will retain any years of repayment in their prior repayment plan for purposes of forgiveness or cancellation.
- Authorize the Secretary to obtain income and family size information of a borrower (and the borrower's spouse, if applicable) who is 60 days delinquent. This section requires the Secretary to provide certain information to such borrowers (e.g. identification of the delinquent loans, monthly payment amounts applicable to the borrower's loans under the newly created repayment plans, and clear instructions on how to select a repayment plan). A borrower has the option to opt-out of this process.

- Require the Secretary to place borrowers who are 120 days delinquent on a covered loan and not already enrolled in an IDR plan into the section 493C(f) IBR plan if the borrower's monthly payment is lower under the section 493C(f) IBR plan. Such borrower has the option to opt-out of this process and may elect to enroll in the section 493E fixed repayment plan.

- Authorize the Secretary to obtain income and family size information of a borrower (and the borrower's spouse, if applicable) who is rehabilitating a covered loan. Within 30 days of a borrower's sixth payment required for loan rehabilitation, the Secretary must notify the borrower that upon making the ninth (and final) required payment, the borrower will be placed in the section 493C(f) IBR plan. A borrower who is rehabilitating a defaulted loan may opt-out of this process.

- Require a borrower's prepayments to be applied first to such borrower's loan with the highest interest rate, unless such borrower requests otherwise for any borrower who has multiple loans with different interest rates. For a borrower who makes a prepayment on multiple loans with the same interest rate, the prepayment is applied first to the loan with the largest outstanding principal balance. Such requirements relating to the application of a borrower's prepayment apply to such borrower's loans that are held by the same entity and on which there are no outstanding fees or collection costs owed.

- Make a conforming amendment to authorize borrowers enrolled in the income contingent repayment (ICR) plan on the day before the date of enactment of this Act to enroll in the section 493E fixed repayment plan or the section 493C(f) IBR plan authorized by this Act.

- Provide for automatic annual recertification of a borrower's income (and their spouse, as applicable) and family size for borrowers enrolled in specified IDR plans, including the section 493C(f) IBR plan authorized by this Act. Borrowers may opt-out of such automatic recertification. Any such borrower must actively provide recertification information to the Secretary on an annual basis.

- Prohibit accrued interest from capitalizing after forbearance and specified types of deferment (i.e. graduate fellowship deferment, rehabilitation training program deferment, unemployment deferment, economic hardship deferment, military service deferment, and post-active duty student deferment) for Federal Direct PLUS loans, Federal Direct Unsubsidized Loans, and Federal Direct Consolidation Loans subsequent to enactment of this Act.

- Allow married borrowers or previously married borrowers who received a Joint Consolidation Loan (JCL) to apply to separate such loan into two Federal Direct Consolidation Loans. Each such loan is equal to either (1) the unpaid principal and accrued unpaid interest of the proportion of the JCL attributable to the loans initially borrowed by each individual or (2) a different proportion mutually agreed to by the borrowers. Borrowers are eligible to receive a separate Consolidation Loan, irrespective of currently existing statutory restrictions on Consolidation Loan borrower eligibility. The two resulting Federal Direct Consolidation Loans have the same terms and conditions of the JCL. For purposes of PSLF, any qualifying payment made on the JCL during a period in which the individual borrower was employed in public service would be treated as if such payment was made on the newly separated Federal Direct Consolidation Loan and count toward forgiveness. Any payment made on the JCL under the standard repayment plan, graduated repayment plan, extended repayment plan, income-contingent, and IBR plan are treated as if such payment were made on the resulting Consolidation Loan. Individual borrowers seeking separation of an existing JCL must apply jointly. Individuals who suffered domestic violence or economic abuse may apply individually for separation of their JCL if they certify that they are unable to reasonably access the loan information of the other individual borrower.

- Repeal subsection (q) of section 455 of the HEA, which bars students from borrowing subsidized loans after being enrolled in their program for more than 150 percent of the length of their academic program commonly referred to as the Subsidized Usage Limit Applies or SULA.

Sec. 4303—Amendments to terms and conditions of public service loan forgiveness

This section makes conforming amendments to include payments made under the section 493C(f) IBR plan or section 493E fixed repayment plan established under Sec. 4630 and Sec. 4631 of this Act, respectively, as qualifying payments for forgiveness under this section.

This section repeals the requirement that a borrower be employed in a public service job at the time of forgiveness and requires the Department to provide forgiveness authorized under this section without further action by the borrower upon such borrower having satisfied eligibility requirements for such forgiveness.

This section requires the Department to consider payments made prior to a borrower's receipt of a Refinanced FFEL or Direct Loan during which time such borrower is employed in a qualifying public service job as qualifying payments for forgiveness under this section. Such payments are treated as a monthly payment on the portion of the refinanced loan attributable to such discharged loan. Payments made prior to a borrower's receipt of a Federal Direct Consolidation Loan during which time such borrower is employed in a qualifying public service job made on or after the date of enactment of this Act shall be considered as qualifying payments for forgiveness under this section. Such payments shall be made attributable to the portion of the Direct Consolidation Loan that the Consolidation Loan discharged. Special rules apply in cases of subsequent consolidation loans.

This section requires the Department to maintain an online portal that provides borrowers with a variety of information to help such borrowers determine eligibility for PSLF and how to submit any forms associated with the program. The portal must allow borrowers to electronically sign and submit any required forms. The portal must allow a borrower to file a dispute and the Secretary must provide status updates on the claim at least once every 90 days. The Secretary must ensure that employers can electronically sign and submit any required forms. This section requires the Department (in consultation with the Commissioner of the IRS) to establish and regularly update a database listing qualifying public service jobs.

This section expands public service jobs to include part-time faculty at public and nonprofit institutions teaching no less than two courses and not working full-time anywhere else. Additionally, public service jobs will now the following include full-time jobs:

- as an employee or manager of a farm or ranch with fiscal year gross revenues greater than $35,000;
- at certain veterans or military service organizations that do not engage in partisan political campaign activity (must be an organization described in section 501(c)(19) and (23) of the Internal Revenue Code); and
- as a healthcare practitioner who provides medical services at a nonprofit or public hospital or healthcare facility and who is prohibited by state law from being employed directly by such hospital or healthcare facility.

This section repeals the prohibition on receiving a reduction of loan obligation for the same service under PSLF and loan forgiveness for teachers.

Sec. 4304—Federal Direct Perkins Loans terms and conditions

This section authorizes the Federal Direct Perkins Loan program to allow participating institutions to award 5 percent interest loans to undergraduate and graduate and professional students. Such authorization prohibits annual awards from exceeding $5,500 for undergraduate students and $8,000 for graduate and professional students.

Sec. 4305—Common manual for loan servicers

This section makes a conforming amendment to align with the requirement that the Department develop a common manual of standardized procedures and policies for entities that contract with the Secretary for the servicing and collecting of loans authorized by Sec. 4632 of this Act.

Sec. 4306—Refinancing FFEL and Federal Direct Loans

This section requires the Secretary to allow borrowers to refinance FFEL and Federal Direct Stafford Loan, Federal Direct Unsubsidized Stafford Loan, Federal Direct PLUS Loan, and Federal Direct Consolidation Loans to statutorily-specified interest rates. This section limits eligibility for such refinancing to FFEL loans disbursed no later than July 1, 2010 and all other eligible loans no later than July 1, 2020.

Interest rates for refinanced loans would be fixed for the life of the loan and are as follows:

- Where the original loan was a FFEL or Direct Loan program Subsidized or Unsubsidized Loan issued to an undergraduate student, the current rate applicable to Direct Subsidized and Unsubsidized Loans issued to undergraduate students between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 4.53 percent).

- Where the original loan was a FFEL or Direct Loan program Subsidized or Unsubsidized Loan issued to graduate/professional student, the current rate applicable to Direct Unsubsidized Loans issued to graduate/professional students between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 6.08 percent).

- Where the original loan was a FFEL or Direct Loan program PLUS loan, the current rate applicable to Direct PLUS Loans issued between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 7.08 percent).

- Where the original loan was a FFEL and Direct Loan program Consolidation Loan, the Secretary must calculate an interest rate according to the proportion of unpaid principal balance on each of the component loans. The refinanced interest rate must be the rate established for borrowers originating a loan between July 2017 and June 2018 or the original interest rate of the component loan, whichever is lowest. For component loans that are not FFEL or Direct Loan program loans (e.g. Health Education Assistance Loans program loans, Nursing Student Loans, National Defense Student Loans, etc.), the original interest rate of the component loan is applied in calculating the weighted average of the FFEL or Direct Loan program Consolidation Loan.

The refinanced loan carries the same terms and conditions as the original loan. Refinancing a loan under this section shall not extend the duration of the repayment period and the borrower shall retain the same repayment term. Borrowers shall have the authority to elect a different repayment plan at any time following such refinancing.

This section requires the Secretary to establish debt-to-income eligibility requirements in a way that considers access for borrowers with the greatest financial need.

This section requires the Secretary, in coordination with the CFPB, to initiate an awareness campaign to inform eligible borrowers of refinancing opportunities authorized under this Act. The Department is required to develop consumer information materials, which shall be provided to borrowers by servicers.

Sec. 4307—Refinancing private student loans

This section establishes a Federal Direct Refinanced Private Loan program, which allows eligible borrowers with qualified private loans disbursed before July 1, 2020 to refinance such loans through the Federal Direct Loan program. To be eligible for refinancing of private loans authorized by this section, loans must have been taken out to pay educational expenses at an institution participating in the Direct Loan program when the loans were first disbursed and must be current for six months prior to the application and in good standing. Furthermore, borrowers must undergo loan counseling before their loans are refinanced and must meet debt-to-income eligibility requirements and other criteria established by the Secretary.

The Federal Direct Refinanced Private Loan is issued in an amount equal to the unpaid principal, accrued interest, and late charges on the private education loans being refinanced. To discharge the private education loans, the proceeds of the loans are paid to the private loan lender. Terms and conditions are the same as a Direct Unsubsidized Loan except as follows:

- Where the private education loans refinanced were for undergraduate study, the interest rate is the current rate applicable for Direct Subsidized and Unsubsidized Loans issued to undergraduate students between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 4.53 percent).
- Where the private education loans refinanced were for graduate/professional study, the interest rate is the current rate applicable for Direct Unsubsidized Loans issued to graduate students between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 6.08 percent).
- Where the private education loans refinanced were for undergraduate and graduate/professional study, the interest rate is the current rate applicable for Direct PLUS loans issued to graduate students between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020 (i.e. 7.08 percent).
- The amount of a Federal Direct Refinanced Private Loan shall not count against a borrower's annual or aggregate federal student loan limits.
- Refinanced private loans are ineligible for certain loan forgiveness (i.e. for service in areas of national need, loan repayment for civil legal assistance attorneys, teacher loan forgiveness, and PSLF).

This section requires private educational lenders to report data (e.g. total number of private education loan borrowers served and average interest rate on its outstanding private education portfolio) to the Secretary, Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Director of the CFPB. The Secretary, in coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury and Director of the CFPB, is required to initiate a campaign to alert private education loan borrowers of the opportunity to refinance eligible loans into a Federal Direct Refinanced Private Loan.

Part E—Federal Perkins Loan

Sec. 4401—Authorization of appropriations for Perkins loan

This section authorizes appropriations for the Federal Direct Perkins loan program.

Sec. 4402—Allocation of funds for Perkins loan

This section clarifies that the allocation formula of Perkins loans in effect prior to enactment of this Act shall be used for any year before FY 2021.

Sec. 4403—Federal Direct Perkins loan allocation

This section authorizes up to $2.4 billion in annual loan authority for the allocation of Federal Direct Perkins loans for award year 2021–2022 and each succeeding award year. The minimum allocation amount must be no less than the average of the institution's total Perkins loans from academic years 2011–2012 to 2015–2016. If this is the case, the Secretary will take steps to ensure an institution's minimum allocation by ratably reducing the amount of the loans to all participating institutions. Loan authority authorized by the section shall be allocated to institutions using the formula authorized under Sec. 4202 of this Act.

Sec. 4404—Agreements with institutions of higher education for purposes of the Perkins loan program

This section stipulates requirements for agreements made between the Department and institutions participating in the Perkins loan program before and after July 1, 2021. This section repeals authority for the Department to use collections on defaulted loans to cover collection costs and repeals the authority for the Secretary to divide defaulted loan collections among other institutions. This section requires the Secretary to return a portion of funds from loan repayments to the institution and amends the authority for institutions to receive payments in lieu of reimbursement for expenses in servicing loans made before July 1, 2021. For loans made after July 1, 2021, the institution shall operate the program consistent with the requirements of the direct loan program unless otherwise specified and will lose eligibility to participate in the direct Perkins loan program if such institution has a high adjusted cohort default rate.

Sec. 4405—Student loan information by eligible institutions for purposes of the Perkins loan program

This section clarifies that disclosure requirements in place for Perkins loans on the day prior to the date of enactment of this Act shall be used for loans made before FY 2021.

Sec. 4406—Terms of loans for purposes of the Perkins loan program

This section maintains requirements in place for Perkins loans on the day prior to the date of enactment of this Act for Perkins loans made before July 1, 2021. For Perkins loans made on or after July 1, 2021, the loan agreements no longer require an institutional match from the institution.

Sec. 4407—Reimbursement for cancellation of Perkins loans for certain public service

This section amends the reimbursement for cancellation of Perkins loans under the program authorized through October 2017 to require the Department to repay each quarter. This section also allows institutions to deduct from their loan repayments owed to the Department, loan payments from loans the institution has retained for servicing.

Sec. 4408—Distribution of assets from student loan funds for purposes of the Perkins loan program

This section subtracts an institution's outstanding administrative costs, charges, and loan cancellation costs and short-term loan costs from the amount paid to the Department by the institution. This section authorizes a quarterly payment until all outstanding Perkins loans originated under the program authorized through October 2017 have been assigned to the Department.

Part F—Need Analysis

Sec. 4501—Amendments to family contribution

This section makes conforming amendments including by replacing the term “academic year” with the term “award year” as it relates to the calculation of EFC. This section extends the benefit for the dependents of police officers and active duty members of the military who are killed in the line of duty to the spouses of such individuals. Individuals who meet the qualifications of the section are deemed to have a zero EFC.

Sec. 4502—Amendments to data elements when determining the expected family contribution

This section makes specified data elements used to determine a student’s EFC only applicable for FAFSA filers whose families were required to file lettered tax schedules (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R) for purposes of their income tax return or whose adjusted gross income exceeds $60,000.

Sec. 4503—Amendments to family contribution for dependent students

This section makes specified data elements used to determine a dependent student’s EFC only applicable for FAFSA filers whose families were required to file lettered tax schedules (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R) for purposes of their income tax return or whose adjusted gross income exceeds $60,000.

This section eliminates statutory inconsistencies between academic year and award year by replacing the term “academic year” with the term “award year,” where appropriate.

This section increases the income protection allowance for academic year 2021–2022 to $9,230 for a dependent student.

Sec. 4504—Amendments to family contribution for independent students without dependents other than a spouse

This section makes specified data elements used to determine the EFC for independent students without dependents other than a spouse only applicable for FAFSA filers who were required to file lettered tax schedules (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R) for purposes of their income tax return or whose adjusted gross income exceeds $60,000.

This section eliminates statutory inconsistencies between academic year and award year by replacing the term “academic year” with the term “award year,” where appropriate.

This section increases the income protection allowance for academic year 2021–2022 and to $14,360 for single or separated students, or married students where both are enrolled and to $23,030 for married students where one is enrolled.

Sec. 4505—Amendments to family contribution for independent students with dependents other than a spouse

This section makes specified data elements used to determine the EFC for independent students with dependents other than a spouse only applicable for FAFSA filers who were required to file lettered tax schedules (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R) for purposes of their income tax return or whose adjusted gross income exceeds $60,000.

This section eliminates statutory inconsistencies between academic year and award year by replacing the term “academic year” with the term “award year,” where appropriate.

This section updates the table to increase the income protection allowance for independent students with dependents other than a spouse by 35 percent. The dollar amount varies based on family size and number of dependents in college.

Sec. 4506—Institutional calculations for off-campus room and board

This section requires the Secretary to prescribe at least one methodology that institutions must use in determining the cost of room and board for students living off campus for the purpose of calculating the projected cost of attendance.

Sec. 4507—Updated tables and amounts to need analysis

For each academic year after 2021–2022, this section directs the Secretary to publish in the Federal Register updated income protection allowance amounts and tables by increasing the 2021–2022 dollar amounts by a percentage equal to the estimated percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index, rounded to the nearest $10.

Sec. 4508—Zero expected family contribution

This section amends the criteria that qualify a FAFSA applicant for an automatic zero EFC determination, including by removing the income requirement for filers who received a means-tested federal benefit in the previous two years. Eligible means-tested federal benefit programs include the following: supplemental security income (SSI); SNAP; TANF; WIC; Medicaid; and any other program identified by the Secretary.

A student who did not benefit from a federal benefit program can qualify for an automatic zero EFC if they (or, in the case of a dependent student, their parents) had an adjusted gross income (AGI) of $37,000 or less and did not file a lettered tax schedule (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R). The section requires the Secretary to annually increase the AGI threshold by the estimated percentage change in the Consumer Price Index, rounded to the nearest $1,000.

This section removes the requirement that independent students have dependents in order to be eligible for an automatic zero EFC.

Sec. 4509—Amendments to definitions in need analysis

This section requires the Secretary to allow the use of income data from the previous year’s tax return on the FAFSA.

This section removes specified data elements from the definition of “untaxed income and benefits” for the purposes of calculating EFC, including workman’s compensation; veteran’s benefits such as death pension, dependency, and indemnity compensation; and interest on tax-free bonds.

This section amends the definition of an independent student as it relates to foster and homeless youth and streamlines the processes for determining and verifying independent status for such youth, including by listing examples of documentation that shall be considered adequate to verify independence by financial aid administrators and requiring that a determination of independence be made as quickly as practicable, and no later than the award year for which the student initially submits a FAFSA. Students who are determined to be independent for one award year are presumed to be independent for the subsequent year unless the student informs the institution that their circumstances have changed or the institution has specific conflicting information about the student's independence.

This section amends the definition of excludable income to explicitly include payments made through title IV part E of the Social Security Act to or on behalf of any child or youth over whom the State agency has responsibility for placement, care, or supervision. This includes the value of vouchers for education and training and amounts expended for room and board for youth who are not in foster care but are receiving services under section 477 of such Act (John H. Chaffee Foster Care Independence Program).

Part G—General Provisions Relating to Student Assistance Programs

Sec. 4601—Definition of eligible program

This section specifies loan eligibility requirements for certificate programs lasting 300 to 600 clock hours. This section establishes an earnings metric for eligibility that requires graduates to have earnings higher than students with only a high school diploma. This section requires such programs to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation. To maintain eligibility, such short-term certificate programs must meet a completion rate metric, the gainful employment metric established by the Secretary, and the newly created earnings metric each year. This section also requires the Secretary to collect and report data on these programs.

Sec. 4602—Definition of third party servicer

This section expands the definition of third party servicer to include any entity that contracts with an institution to recruit students.

Sec. 4603—FAFSA simplification

This section makes conforming amendments to section 483 of the HEA in accordance with the changes contained in this Act.

This section directs the Secretary to include a single, easily understood screening question on the FAFSA to determine if a student is homeless or self-supported and at risk of homelessness.

This section reduces the number of questions that an applicant must answer when completing their FAFSA by placing the applicant into one of three authorized pathways:

- Pathway 1: Applicants (or in the case of a dependent student, the student's parents) who benefited from a means-tested federal benefit program in the previous two years may automatically skip all financial questions and be deemed to have zero EFC, thereby maximizing their eligibility for federal aid. To verify the information, the Secretary is directed to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of the Treasury to allow for the exchange of information needed to verify receipt of eligible federal benefits.

- Pathway 2: Applicants (or in the case of a dependent student, the student's parents) who did not participate in a means-tested federal benefit program in the previous two years, but have an adjusted gross income of less than $60,000 and do not have to file lettered tax schedules with their federal income tax (other than the schedule EIC or schedule R) shall complete a limited number of financial questions based on the changes made in Sec. 4502 of this Act. The Secretary is directed to use the data retrieval tool (DRT) to obtain necessary federal income tax information from the IRS.

- Pathway 3: All other applicants (those who file lettered tax schedules other than the EIC or R or who have an adjusted gross income of over $60,000) must complete the remainder of the financial questions in the FAFSA. The Secretary is directed to use the DRT to obtain necessary federal income tax information from the IRS.

This section requires Pell Grant recipients to file a FAFSA just once before going to college, instead of annually. In subsequent years, students will maintain the EFC amount that was calculated for that first year if their circumstances have not significantly changed. This section requires such an applicant to annually certify via a simple, consumer-tested form, that they have the same dependency status and indicate whether their need or eligibility for federal financial assistance has substantially changed. Applicants experiencing a change in dependency status or significant change in circumstances either will re-file the FAFSA or receive a professional judgement determination from their financial aid administrator.

This section requires the Secretary to provide the FAFSA in both paper and electronic formats in at least 11 foreign languages based on the languages most often spoken by English learner students and their parents. This section also requires the FAFSA to be available in formats accessible to individuals with disabilities.

This section directs the Secretary to make every effort to allow all applicants to utilize the DRT to automatically populate the FAFSA with tax return information for an expedited process. This section requires the Secretary to examine whether IRS information can be used to generate an EFC without additional information being provided by the applicant. This section requires the Secretary to report on these simplification efforts at least once every other year.

This section directs the Secretary to annually publish data on the number of FAFSA applicants who are homeless, including unaccompanied youth and foster care children and youth, disaggregated by state and the source of the determination of homeless status. The Secretary will also report on the number of undetermined requests for homelessness consideration, including statuses that remain unknown because no determination has been made.

This section prohibits the Secretary from including any question about convictions related to the possession or sale of illegal drugs on the FAFSA.

This section requires the Secretary to annually report information about the number and percentage of Pell-eligible applicants who are asked to verify their income disaggregated by a number of characteristics, including whether applicants filed the FAFSA through Pathway 1, 2, or 3 as authorized by this section. The report must be submitted to Congress and made publicly available.

This section requires all title-IV participating institutions to use a financial aid offer that complies with federal requirements developed by the Department following consumer testing. This section enumerates a number of required elements that must be included in all aid offers and requires the Secretary to establish standardized terms, definitions, and formatting requirements. Each financial aid offer must include a standardized quick reference box with a maximum of eight elements including, at a minimum, cost of attendance, total grant aid, and net price.

Sec. 4604—Student eligibility

This section allows individuals who have temporary protected immigration status and qualifying undocumented individuals to be eligible for federal student aid and services provided under title IV of the HEA. Such undocumented individuals (defined as “Dreamers” in this Act) are those who were younger than 16 years of age on the date of U.S. arrival and earned a high school diploma (or its equivalent), enrolled at an institution without a high school diploma (or its equivalent) but meets the eligibility requirements under section 484(d) of the HEA, or served in the uniformed services for not less than four years. Individuals who would have been eligible under the Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA) program are also eligible for federal student aid and services. This section authorizes the Secretary to provide a waiver for the age requirement if the individual shows a hardship exception.

This section allows individuals who do not hold a high school diploma or the equivalent to be eligible for federal student aid and services provided under Title IV of the HEA if they demonstrate an ability to benefit by earning six credit hours toward a postsecondary degree. Such students must be enrolled in a degree program meeting specific requirements in order to qualify. Only students at public and private nonprofit institutions are eligible for Title IV aid under this expansion.

This section lifts the selective service registration requirement for federal student aid eligibility and repeals statutory language that limits eligibility for students who have a drug-related offense.

Sec. 4605—Reasonable collection costs on defaulted loans

This section places a cap on collection fees charged to defaulted borrowers. For purposes of the first collection effort, the collection cost cannot exceed five percent of the outstanding principal and interest on the defaulted loan. Subsequent collection efforts, cannot be more than five percentage points greater than the collection costs charged in the preceding collection effort. The maximum amount that can be charged is 20 percent of the outstanding balance of principal and interest.

Sec. 4606—Student eligibility information for nutrition assistance programs

This section requires institutions to provide students with the most recent relevant student eligibility guidance for SNAP and WIC, as well as the contact information for the State agency responsible for administering those programs and information on food pantries and other food assistance facilities and services available to students. This section requires the Department to make available and annually update the student eligibility guidance for SNAP and WIC on the College Navigator website.

Sec. 4607—Exit counseling

This section requires institutions to use an interactive program or the online counseling tool created by the Secretary for exit loan counseling provided pursuant to section 485(b) of the HEA. The section outlines additional information that must be included in exit counseling such as a summary of the borrower's outstanding loan balance, an explanation of the grace period prior to repayment, the expected date the borrower will enter repayment, and contact information for the loan servicers. The section makes conforming amendments.

Sec. 4608—Clery Act amendments

This section amends section 485(f) of the HEA, also known as the Clery Act. This section requires institutions to disclose campus policies regarding required background checks for employees and volunteers working with student athletes, children, or youth participating in university-sponsored programs held in campus facilities. This section also requires institutions to report on the number of incidents of hazing and harassment that are reported to campus security authorities or local police and establishes definitions for hazing, harassment (including sexual harassment), commercial mobile service, electronic communication, and electronic messaging. For the purposes of this reporting, harassment includes conduct undertaken in whole or in part through the use of electronic messaging services, commercial mobile services, and electronic communications.

This section requires institutions to report on each finding that a student organization has committed a violation of the anti-hazing policies of the institution. This section requires institutions to provide victims of campus sexual assault with information on institutional policies regarding the reimbursement of lost tuition and costs associated with student loan interest accrual. This section further requires institutions to develop and distribute a statement of policy regarding harassment, which shall include a prohibition on harassment, a description of the institution's programs to combat and prevent harassment, and a description of the procedures that the institution will follow when harassment incidents are reported. This section authorizes a civil penalty of $100,000 on an institution that has substantially misrepresented the number, location, or nature of the crimes required to be reported under the Clery Act per each such misrepresentation.

Sec. 4609—Online survey tool for campus safety

This section requires the Secretary to develop a standardized online survey tool regarding student experiences with domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, sexual harassment, and stalking. Such survey must reflect best practices and peer-reviewed research; be fair, unbiased, statistically valid and reliable; use trauma-informed language; and meet the highest standards of survey research. The section describes the elements that will be included in the survey to gather information on student experiences with dating violence, sexual assault, sexual harassment, and stalking, including questions regarding the prevalence of such incidents, whether victims reported the incidents or were referred to campus resources, relevant contextual factors, the impact of incidents on victims' education, the impact and effectiveness of prevention and awareness programs, and respondents' attitudes toward sexual violence and harassment, including the willingness of individuals to engage in bystander intervention.

This section requires institutions to administer such survey every two years. Institutions are authorized to add additional elements specific to their institutions and will be required to ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that an adequate, random, and representative sample size of students complete the survey. The Secretary is prohibited from charging institutions from modifying the survey tool. This section directs the Secretary to prepare and publicly release a biennial report using the information gained from the standardized survey and requires that each institution publish the campus-level results of the survey on the website of the institution. Survey responses must be confidential and, when published in a report, shall not include personally identifiable information. Survey results shall not be included in the school's crime statistics.

Sec. 4610—Transfer of credit policies

This section requires institutions participating in title IV programs to provide information on transfer of credit policies to students including information on articulation agreements into which the institution, relevant deadlines, financial aid information, and staff contact information.

Sec. 4611—Amendments to institutional and financial assistance

This section repeals notice requirements related to the impact of drug offenses on title IV eligibility. The relevant penalties are repealed in Sec. 4604 of this Act.

This section requires institutions that participate in federal student aid to have a single point of contact to assist homeless foster care youth, including by connecting such students to support services, programs, financial aid, academic advising, housing, food, public benefits, healthcare, health insurance, mental health services, and mentoring. This section requires institutions to give homeless and foster youth priority for housing that is open on a year-round basis and to have a plan to help homeless and foster youth access housing during school breaks.

This section also requires institutions to provide annual loan counseling to borrowers in an interactive format either in-person or online. This section requires certain information that must be included in counseling sessions, including information about various financial aid options including encouraging students to use grant aid first, interest rates on the loan, and how repayment works. This section requires borrowers to sign a student loan contract that affirmatively states the borrower accepts the loan. This section requires the Secretary to maintain an online counseling tool that institutions may use for exit counseling and annual loan counseling.

This section establishes requirements for institutions that request, receive, or exercise a religious exemption to the requirements of title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. This section requires such institutions to submit a written statement identifying the provisions that conflict with a specific tenet of the religious organization to the Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights. Institutions are required to publish online, in a prominent location, the following: each request letter submitted to the Department to request a title IX exemption; each exemption letter from the Department that grants or denies a requested exemption; a notice indicating that the institution has requested an exemption; if applicable, a notice that the institution has received an exemption; a list of the personal characteristics, behaviors, activities, and programs to which each exemption applies; and a statement of rights specifying that students continue to have the rights under title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 and providing contact information for the Department's Office for Civil Rights.

This section requires institutions to make information available to expectant and parenting students on how to take a leave of absence, how to take advantage of financial aid and support services (including emergency aid programs offered by the institution), and how to exercise rights and secure protections and accommodations under title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. This section also requires institutions to inform expectant and parenting students of the rights and protections guaranteed under applicable federal and state laws.

Sec. 4612—Prevention of improper access

This section directs the Secretary when administering the National Student Loan System to prevent improper access to borrower information. This section also directs the Secretary to create a new form of third-party access, similar to the preparer function under the FAFSA for those applying to repay their loans on behalf of a student and their family.

Sec. 4613—Information with respect to crime statistics for programs of study abroad

This section requires institutions to develop and distribute a statement of policy regarding crime and harm that may occur during study abroad programs approved for credit by the institution. Institutions are required to, at a minimum, conduct a biennial review of study abroad programs to determine the effectiveness of the programs at protecting students from crime and harm and whether changes to the program are needed. Institutions must also report on the number of deaths, sexual assaults, accidents and illness that result in hospitalization, and incidents that result in police involvement that occur during the study abroad program. Such reporting will include incidents that occurred during program participation (and, in the case of death, during any other activities during the period of study abroad) over the preceding five years.

Institutions are further required to provide each student who is interested in participating in a study abroad program with an orientation session and advising that includes travel warnings and alerts issued by the State Department and the crime and safety statistics collected for the relevant study abroad programs. Students returning from study abroad must be provided with a post-trip debriefing session and exit interview to inform the data collection required under this section.

Sec. 4614—Remedial education grants

This section authorizes a grant program to improve remedial education.

Eligible entities are required to provide an assurance they will use multiple measures to identify students in need of remedial education, rather than the traditional method of basing the placement into remedial education on one test. Eligible entities seeking funding must also describe how they will use evidence-based strategies to improve remedial education, how the new model will be sustained once the grant program concludes, and the plan for internal monitoring and evaluation.

The Secretary is required to contract and consult with an independent third-party evaluator in carrying out the remedial education grant program authorized by this section. Such evaluator will provide input on which entities should receive grants and conduct a rigorous evaluation of the effectiveness of remedial education programs funded under this section.

The section requires eligible entities to develop or improve remedial education programs based on one or more of five authorized models. The first model supports partnerships between institutions and local educational agencies or state educational agencies to align coursework between the high school and colleges and allows for early assessments to be implemented measuring a student's readiness for college. The second model requires eligible entities to redesign or improve course work that allows a student to complete in an accelerated time schedule. The third model, Modular Instructional Methods, allows the eligible entity to use or improve assessments that provide information based on specific skills needed to be ready for credit-bearing coursework. The eligible entity can then provide targeted skill instruction to students rather than requiring a student to take an entire course for specific skill deficits. The fourth model, co-requisite remediation, allows students to enroll in remedial education classes while also enrolling in credit-bearing coursework. The final model, systemic reform to implement comprehensive, integrated support programs, requires a system-wide restructuring of remedial education programs that help students find success in their remedial education course work and once in credit-bearing courses.

When making awards, the Secretary is required to consult with the Director of IES and must make at least 30 awards to eligible entities. Other considerations include geographic distribution, distribution of awards in rural and urban entities, and provision of awards to a range of institutional types and sizes. Applications that primarily serve students who are low-income shall be given preference. The Secretary must also seek to distribute funds in such a way as to allow for statistical comparisons within and between each model.

This section clarifies that grant funds are meant to supplement not supplant any other funding provided for remedial education. Eligible entities are required to match funding up to 10 percent of the amount of the grant from non-federal sources. TCCUs and institutions located in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, United States Virgin Islands, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Republic of the Marshall Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, and Republic of Palau are exempt from such matching requirement.

This section provides eligible entities the option to voluntarily use an experimental authority granted to the Secretary to extend funding for students under title IV of the HEA to two years for non-credit bearing course work.

Grant recipients are required to provide student-level data sufficient to determine the number of students in remedial education programs, the type of remedial education courses students receive, the cost of courses, the amount of grant or loan funds awarded to students for enrollment in remedial education programs, the length of time students spend in remedial education, the number of students who complete the remedial education program, the number of students that enroll postsecondary-level courses after completing remedial education, the time it takes students to complete a credential, and the number and percentage of students who graduate from the institution within 150 percent of the normal time of completion. Data shall be disaggregated by race, gender, income, first-generation status, veteran or active duty status, and disability status.

Data reported by grant recipients shall be used by the third-party evaluator to conduct an independent evaluation of the impact of the remedial education programs funded under this section. The evaluation will address the effectiveness of remedial education programs in increasing course and degree completion and compare the effectiveness of the five models identified in this section. The Secretary is required to provide an initial report a year after the first award is distributed and a final report not later than five years after the last award is distributed. Both reports will be submitted to the authorizing committees and made available to the public.

This section specifies that it is unlawful for any person with access to personally identifiable information to share such information with any unauthorized person. Those in violation of this section will be fined or, in the case of federal employees, be dismissed. Sale of data is prohibited. The data cannot be shared with federal agencies not explicitly authorized and cannot be used for law enforcement activity.

This section defines eligible entity as an institution per the definition in section 101 of the HEA or as a partnership between an institution and a local educational agencies or state educational agencies. This section defines the term “remedial education” to mean below-college-level courses and training that provide the competencies necessary for a student to succeed in college level coursework. Remedial education may also be identified as developmental education. Five other definitions relevant for this section are included.

This section authorizes $162.5 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 4615—Competency-based education

This section authorizes the voluntary implementation of five-year competency-based education (CBE) demonstration project at institutions. The Secretary shall develop an application process to select eligible entities and will conduct outreach to HBCUs, TCCUs, and other MSIs, rural institutions, institutions predominantly serving adult learners and; and institutions serving students with disabilities.

Institutions applying to participate must include a description of the CBE program and information on the project's academic delivery, business, and financial model. Applying institutions must also explain how the CBE program will differ from standard credit hour programs, facilitate student achievement of competencies, evaluate assessments of student learning, align the competencies with workforce needs and career pathways. Additionally, applying institutions must explain how the CBE program will lead to strong earnings, job placement, and loan repayment rates, and result in lower costs or shorter time to degree or certification completion.

In the application, institutions must provide a proposal for determining a student's federal student aid eligibility and develop safeguards to ensure students are making satisfactory academic progress that warrants aid disbursement. Institutions must ensure that students participating in the program are eligible for the same amount of federal aid under a credit or clock hour program. Applying institutions must also identify the population of students who will be served under the project and disaggregate the data by certain student demographics. Other application requirements are outlined under this section.

To participate, institutions must meet financial responsibility standards. Additionally, entities seeking to be part of the demonstration project must ensure its accreditor will review and evaluate the program based on standards outlined under this section. Accrediting agencies must create standards for determining when to deny, withdraw, suspend, or terminate a program's accreditation. Additionally, participating institutions must enroll no more than 3,000 students. However, institutions that have been evaluated at least twice under this section may amend its application (with Secretarial approval) to expand CBE program enrollment to no more than 5,000 students.

The Secretary will select up to 100 eligible entities, prioritizing programs that are committed to program evaluation, have a history of compliance with federal higher education laws and regulations, and commit to working with the Secretary and Director of IES to evaluate the demonstration project. The Secretary will ensure selection of programs that represent a diverse group of eligible entities. The Secretary is prohibited from awarding grant funds to institutions with a high aCDR, under probation from the accrediting agency or the State, or under public investigation or facing a pending lawsuit from a State or federal agency.

The Secretary may waive or provide flexibility from certain statutory and regulatory requirements as listed under this section for participating institutions. Within nine months of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary must provide Congress and the public a list of the participating institutions and the specific statutory or regulatory waivers provided.

Participating institutions must provide student-level data to the Director of IES who will use the data to calculate information such as the average period of time between a student's enrollment and the first assessment of student knowledge of such student, the average time to completion, and a cohort's completion rate. The information must be disaggregated by student characteristics and demographics as outlined in this section. The Director of IES, in consultation with the Secretary, must annually evaluate each participating entity and submit an annual report to Congress detailing the evaluation results. To allow IES to rigorously compare the success of the CBE program, eligible entities must submit data on students in the demonstration program, students participating in a CBE program outside of the demonstration project, and other students attending the institution. This section outlines provisions on data privacy including penalties for individuals who knowingly disclose to any person personally identifiable information.

The Secretary must assure compliance of participating entities, provide technical assistance, monitor enrollment changes at eligible entities, work with accrediting agencies and State regulatory authorities on ways to improve CBE implementation, and share best practices with participating entities.

This section authorizes $5,000,000 to carry out the demonstration project.

The section defines the term "competency-based education" as a program that provides CBE which an institution's accreditor has established or will establish standards described in this Act and in accordance with certain standards outlined in this subsection. This section also defines "eligible entity" as an institution defined in section 102 of the HEA and may include dual or concurrent enrollment programs.

Sec. 4616—Competency-based education council

This section establishes a council to study CBE. The council is comprised of individuals appointed by the Secretary, the CFPB Director, and both the majority and minority leadership in the Senate and House. The Comptroller General will also appoint eight to 13 individuals such as experts in CBE, faculty members, administrators, CBE students, and representatives from accrediting agencies, state educational agencies, and business. This section details the administrative obligations of the council. The council is charged with conducting a study on the development of CBE programs. Based on the study and the annual evaluations described under Sec. 4615 of this Act, the council must develop recommendations related to defining CBE, the amount of learning in a competency unit, the transfer of competency units, the minimum amount of time in an academic year, considerations for accrediting agencies, the role of faculty in CBE programs, and additional resources that may be needed for adequate oversight of CBE. A final report containing the study's findings and the Council's recommendations must be submitted to the Secretary and Congress no later than six years after the date of enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4617—Written arrangements to provide educational programs

This section establishes requirements for each institution that outsources of portion of its educational programs to a third-party provider. This section sets transparency and accountability requirements for institutions that partner with third-party providers and prohibits institutions from outsourcing both admissions and educational content to the same provider.

Sec. 4618—Improvements to program participation agreements

This section makes conforming changes to the program participation agreement requirements as it relates to the alcohol and substance misuse prevention program, aCDR, and postsecondary data collection. This section amends the program participation agreements by requiring institutions to provide students with access to housing for foster youth. The section amends the requirement that institutions distribute voter registration forms to require all institutions make a good faith effort to distribute such forms, regardless of the state in which the institution is located. This section modifies the “90/10 rule” to require for-profit institutions to receive at least 15 percent of their funding from non-federal sources and includes a phase-in for institutions to meet this new requirement starting July 1, 2022. This section modifies the program participation agreement to require institutions that enter into written arrangements with other entities to provide part of an educational program to comply with the requirements of section 486D of HEA, as amended by Sec. 4617 of this Act.

Sec. 4619—Compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964

This section requires each institution to designate at least one employee to coordinate compliance with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Institutions are required to annually submit a report to the Secretary including all title VI complaints, to make such report publicly available on the institution’s website, and to notify students and employees of the existence of such report, the name and contact information for the employee designated by the institution to coordinate title VI compliance, the title VI enforcement policies, and the procedure for reporting and investigating title IV complaints.

Sec. 4620—Submission of data with respect to students with disabilities

This section adds data regarding students with disabilities to IPEDS. New information includes: total number of students with disabilities enrolled, number of students accessing or receiving accommodations, percentage of students with disabilities of all undergraduate students, and the total number of undergraduate certificates or degrees awarded to students with disabilities.

Sec. 4621—Education program on hazing

This section requires institutions to provide students with an educational program on hazing, including information on hazing awareness, hazing prevention, and the institution's policies on hazing.

Sec. 4622—Changes to program participation agreements to strengthen consumer protections

This section prohibits an institution from preventing a student (current or former) from accessing their transcripts, degree scrolls, or other certifications of coursework or educational attainments due to a student's default on the repayment of a federal student loan. This section prohibits institutions from requiring a student to agree to (or enforce) a limitation or restriction on the student to pursue a claim against the institution in court.

Sec. 4623—Misrepresentation and substantial misrepresentation defined

This section authorizes the Secretary to impose a civil penalty of $60,000 on an institution that violates any provision under title IV of the HEA or engages in substantial misrepresentation about its educational program, its financial charges, and the employability of its graduates per each such violation or misrepresentation. This section defines the terms "misleading," "misrepresentation," "statement," and "substantial misrepresentation."

Sec 4624—Revenue requirement

This section clarifies that if an institution is a holder or guarantor of a loan made to a student, only the payment made on the loan count as revenue under the formula. This section allows brick and mortar institutions providing training contracted with an independent third party entity before the date of enactment to count such revenue for up to 5 percent under the formula. This section aligns the formula with the new definition of federal education assistance funds.

Sec. 4625—Teach-out plans

This section requires that teach-out plans include procedures to maintain student contact information as well as ensure students have access to their transcripts aligning with requirements of Sec. 4701 of this Act.

Sec. 4626—Experimental programs

This section amends the Department's experimental sites as authorized under section 487A of the HEA. It combines two subsections (one authorizing a Quality Assurance Program and another authorizing regulatory improvement and streaming experiments) into a single experimental sites authorization focused on increasing student success.

The Secretary is authorized to continue experiments in effect on the date of enactment of this Act. However, experiments that have not been successful in increasing student success must be discontinued before the start of the award year following the enactment of this Act. This section maintains the waiver authority for the regulatory improvement and streamlining experiments subsection.

This section requires the Department to develop an evaluation plan and provide notice to Congress before carrying out an experiment under the new experimental sites program. The evaluation plan must include a description of the methodology that will be used to evaluate the experiment and to disaggregate results by age, race, gender, disability status, veteran/military status, first-generation student status, and Pell recipient status. If practicable, evaluations must include a randomized control design and an assessment of differential impact of the experiment on different types of students. The evaluation plan must also provide a schedule for conducting the experiment, an estimate of the cost, and an estimate of the size of the study sample. The notice to Congress must be submitted at least 60 days before the start of the experiment and must include a description of the experiment and a list of the specific statutory and regulatory requirements that will be waived, among other items.

This section also sets duration limits for experimental sites. Experiments can last a maximum of four years after the first award year in which the experiment is active, except that the Secretary may extend an experiment for up to two additional years on a case-by-case basis.

This section provides a definition of success for the purposes of evaluating the results of experimental sites. Determinations of success under this section are based on whether, and to what extent, student outcomes improve as a direct result of the experiment; whether the experiment improves the delivery of services to, or otherwise benefits, students; and the extent to which the experiment reduces administrative burden without harming students.

This section additionally strengthens reporting and evaluation requirements for the experiments. Under this section, the Secretary must submit annual reports as outlined in this Act about each experiment. If the Secretary has deviated from the data collection methodology included in the experiment's evaluation plan, the Secretary must provide an explanation of the deviation and a description of the alternative methodology that will be used. The Secretary is also required to submit a final report, which must include a summary of the results (including disaggregated results), the conclusions reached regarding the experiment, recommendations for changes to relevant statutes and regulations, and an explanation of any regulatory changes the Secretary plans to make as a result of the experiment. All annual and final reports must be made available on the Department's website. Information collection requirements included under section 3507 of title 44 of the U.S. Code are waived for the purposes of this section.

Sec. 4627—Administrative expenses

This section removes references to Perkins Loans in the laws related to administrative expenses that are paid to institutions to offset the cost of the administration of Title IV programs. Perkins Loans will no longer be used in the calculation of administrative expenses.

Sec. 4628—Criminal penalties for misuse of access devices

This section clarifies that it is a federal crime to access U.S. Department of Education information technology systems for fraud, commercial advantage, or private financial gain, and impose fines on scammers for violations of the law.

Sec. 4629—Regional meetings and negotiated rulemaking

This section establishes requirements for the Department's negotiated rulemaking process. It requires that rulemaking panels include representatives of students, borrowers, and consumers and negotiators that are broadly representative of constituencies in different sectors and geographic locations. This section also requires the Department to comply with reasonable requests for data from negotiators, to make issue papers and proposed regulations available to the public in a timely manner, to provide live and archived videos of negotiation sessions, and to make transcripts of negotiations available to the public.

Sec. 4630—Income-based repayment plan

This section authorizes the IBR plan under section 493C(f) of the HEA. Borrowers entering an IBR repayment plan after June 30, 2021 will only be able to select the section 493C(f) IBR plan. Borrowers already in repayment may retain their repayment plan or choose to leave their repayment plan and enter the section 493E fixed repayment plan established under Sec. 4631 of this Act or section 493C(f) IBR plan established under this section. Payments made under a current borrower's original repayment plan count toward repayment upon switching to the section 493E fixed repayment plan or section 493C(f) IBR plan. Borrowers who elect to leave their repayment plan will not be allowed to re-elect a repayment plan that is not the section 493E fixed repayment plan or section 493C(f) IBR plan.

The section 493C(f) IBR plan shares the same characteristics of the existing current law IBR plan with the following exceptions:

- The repayment amount is equal to 10 percent of the borrower's (and the borrower's spouse, if applicable) adjusted gross income that exceeds 250 percent of the poverty line that is applicable to the borrower's family size. The amount of income protected is reduced by 10 percentage points for each $1,000 by which the borrower's adjusted gross income exceeds $80,000 or by 10 percentage points for each $2,000 by which the borrower's and borrower's spouse adjusted gross income exceeds $160,000. Unless the borrower is separated from his or her spouse or is unable to reasonably access the income information of the spouse, the adjusted gross income of the borrower and the borrower's spouse would be used in the calculation.
- The maximum repayment term is 20 years, irrespective of the type of loan.
- A borrower is not required to have a partial financial hardship to elect and remain enrolled in the new IBR plan regardless of income level.
- A borrower's monthly payment may exceed the monthly repayment amount under a standard 10-year repayment plan or the section 493E fixed repayment plan.
- Unpaid accrued interest will not be capitalized when a borrower switches repayment plans or makes payments that are more than the amount under a standard repayment plan.

For Direct Consolidation Loans made on or after the date of enactment of this Act, monthly payments that had been made on such loans prior to consolidation are treated as a monthly payment under this section 493C(f) IBR plan. However, if the borrower's consolidation is a subsequent Direct Consolidation Loan, payments made on underlying loans that had been included in the first Consolidation Loan shall not be treated as monthly payments under this section 493C(f) IBR plan.

For a borrower refinancing FFEL or Federal Direct loans, all monthly payments made for the original loan count toward the borrower's length of repayment. However, for Federal Direct Refinanced Private loans, monthly payments prior to the refinance do not count toward the length of repayment. For such loans, only payments made after the date of the refinance count toward the 20 years of repayment under this section 493C(f) IBR plan.

This section requires the Secretary to develop and implement a process (including verification) that allows borrowers to enter the section 493C(f) IBR plan through written, electronic, or verbal notice to the Secretary.

Sec. 4631—Fixed repayment plan

This section authorizes a fixed repayment under section 493E of the HEA. Borrowers entering repayment after June 30, 2021 will only be able to select the fixed repayment plan or the section 493C(f) IBR plan.

Under the section 493E fixed repayment plan, a borrower makes payments in fixed amounts over a repayment period that is indexed to the outstanding balance of principal and interest on the borrower's loan as of the day prior to entering repayment. Borrowers have the option of having their loans amortized over a shorter period if desired. Under the section 493E fixed repayment plan, borrowers with a balance that is—

- equal to or less than $20,000 pay a fixed monthly amount over 10 years;
- greater than $20,000 but less than $30,000 pay a fixed monthly amount over 15 years;
- equal to or greater than $30,000 but less than $40,000 pay a fixed monthly amount over 20 years; and
- equal to or greater than $40,000 pay a fixed monthly amount over 25 years.

For Direct Consolidation Loans made on or after the date of enactment of this Act, monthly payments that had been made on the loans prior to consolidation would be treated as a monthly payment under this section 493E fixed repayment plan. However, if the borrower's consolidation is a subsequent Direct Consolidation Loan, payments made on underlying loans that had been included in the first Consolidation Loan would not be treated as monthly payments under this section 493E fixed repayment plan.

Sec. 4632—Requiring a common manual for loan servicers

This section requires the Secretary to develop a manual of common procedures and policies for entities with which it contracts for the origination, servicing, and collection of loans (e.g. servicers). The purpose of the manual is to standardize and ensure consistency across loans servicers and ensure minimum standards of practice. The Secretary is required to update the manual as frequently as necessary, but not less than every five years.

Sec. 4633—Removal of record of default

This section specifies that upon repaying a defaulted loan made under title IV (including FFEL, Direct Loan, Perkins Loan, and Direct PLUS Loan) in full, the holder of the loan shall request that consumer reporting agencies remove all adverse credit history, including default, from the borrower's credit history. This section also requires the holder of the loan to contact the consumer reporting agency when a borrower requests removal of adverse information from their credit history for having cured their defaulted loan by paying the loan amount in full prior to the enactment of this Act.

Sec. 4634—Amendments to terms and conditions of borrower defenses

This section specifies that students are entitled to relief on their federal student loans under title IV of the HEA in cases of substantial misrepresentation or an act or omission that would give rise to a cause of action against the school under State law. The Secretary must specify through regulation other acts or omissions that are also applicable as a defense to repayment of a federal student loan. This section requires the Secretary to decide on a borrower defense claim based on all evidence available and sets the evidentiary standard of proof as "preponderance of evidence."

Further, this section requires the Secretary to establish procedures for the fair and expeditious resolution of borrower defense claims. The Secretary must specify a fixed timeframe for the resolution of claims that is no longer than 12 months from when a claim was filed. Further, this section requires the Secretary to resolve pending claims that were submitted prior to enactment of this Act within 12 months of enactment.

This section also requires the Secretary to review a borrower defense claim at any time without regard to the repayment status of the borrower's loan(s) that are subject to such claim. This section also requires the Secretary to process claims for groups of similarly-affected borrowers. Borrowers with pending claims will have their loans placed in deferment and adverse credit reporting and collection suspended. Borrowers may opt-out of the deferment.

The borrower is entitled to full relief (i.e. cancelation of all outstanding debt and return of prior payments) when the claim is based on substantial misrepresentation. If the Secretary determines that a borrower is entitled to relief based on a claim other than substantial misrepresentation, this section establishes a presumption of full relief. If, in a particular case, the Secretary determines that full relief is not appropriate, the Secretary must provide the borrower with a written explanation as to why partial cancellation is appropriate. The Secretary must develop and implement an appeals process. Borrowers may refile a denied claim for good cause. Borrowers with a pending claim must be notified at least every 90 days with a status update.

This section requires the Secretary to designate Department personnel to process borrower defense claims. The Secretary must produce publicly available quarterly reports on the status of borrower defense claims.

This section repeals subsection (h) of section 455 of the HEA, which limited borrower defense claims to Direct Loans.

Sec. 4635—On-time repayment rates

This section creates an on-time repayment rate metric for institutional accountability. Institutions that have at least 20 percent of their students participating in federal student loan programs are subject to this provision. For each participating institution, an on-time repayment rate is calculated as the percentage of students who have paid at least 90 percent of their monthly payments over three years of repayment. Students with a zero balance or in certain types of forbearance and deferments (including educational, military, teacher, and national service) are considered paid. The Secretary shall determine the threshold on-time repayment rate(s) and time period(s) for which such thresholds apply.

Institutions failing the on-time repayment rate threshold must demonstrate a commitment to investing in students to avoid loss of title IV. Institutions that spend at least 1/3 of their revenue from tuition and fees on instruction in each of the previous three years avoid loss of Title IV but must create and implement a repayment management plan. Institutions failing the on-time repayment rate threshold and spending less than 1/3 of their tuition and fee revenue on instruction in any of the previous three years are subject to loss of Title IV.

Institutions subject to title IV loss based on on-time repayment and instructional spending may request exceptions to maintain access to title IV for categories of educational programs defined at the credential level (e.g. certificates, associate's degrees, and bachelor's degrees) that pass on-time repayment thresholds. Institutions may appeal if their expenditures on certain types of student support services and instruction together account for more than 50 percent of their tuition and fee revenue. Appeals may also be based on inaccurate repayment data, improper loan servicing, or exceptional mitigating circumstances.

This section also requires the Secretary to publish annual reports listing on-time repayment rates and instructional spending metrics for each institution.

Part H —Program Integrity

Subpart 1—State Role Sec.Sec. 4701—State responsibilities

This section requires states to certify to the Department that each institution located in the state or seeking authorization to operate in the state meets the applicable state standards in the following categories: facilities, equipment, and supplies; program length state licensure requirements. This section requires states to accept student complaints from all students in the state as well as residents pursuing distance education outside of the state. It also requires states to manage, compile, and distribute data on student complaints to the appropriate entity. This section requires states to have the following procedures in place to protect the interests of students in the event of institutional closure: maintenance of sufficient cash reserves in the form of a State Tuition Recovery Fund or equivalent alternative; a mechanism to maintain student contact information and to ensure students have access to their transcripts; and a process for addressing individual campus closures of national chains.

Subpart 2—Accrediting Agency Recognition

Sec. 4711—Accrediting agency recognition of eligible job training programs

This section establishes requirements for accreditors that oversee institutions participating in the job training Pell Grant program authorized in Sec. 4013 of this Act. Such accreditors must establish a process for determining whether the job training program provides training aligned with the requirements of employers. They must further require that job training programs demonstrate that the program has identified each recognized postsecondary credential offered and the corresponding industry or sector partnership that recognizes each credential. Accreditors must also require a demonstration that the program provides the academic content and instructional time necessary to meet the hiring requirements of employers and to satisfy applicable prerequisites for relevant licensure and certification exams.

Sec. 4712—Accrediting agency recognition of institutions enrolling incarcerated individuals

This section establishes requirements for accreditors that oversee institutions receiving Pell Grants on behalf of incarcerated students as authorized under Sec. 4016 of this Act. Such accreditors must establish a process for determining whether institutions have the capability to effectively offer a course of study to incarcerated individuals. They must further require institutions receiving Pell Grants on behalf of incarcerated students to demonstrate that the courses of study available to incarcerated students are taught by faculty with experience and credentials comparable to those of faculty who teach courses available to non-incarcerated students; that academic credits awarded to incarcerated students are treated the same as those earned by non-incarcerated students; and that such institutions have the capacity, staffing, and expertise to provide incarcerated individuals with the support and advising necessary to select and successfully participate in a course of study and, to the extent practicable, with support upon reentry.

Sec. 4713—Requirements for accrediting agency recognition

This section directs the Secretary to establish a working group to create a common glossary of measures that accrediting agencies may use to assess three outcomes: 1) completion, 2) progress toward completion, and 3) workforce participation. Such glossary shall provide accrediting agencies with enough flexibility for adequate assessment of each outcome and may include measures from IPEDS, the postsecondary data system established under Sec. 1022 of this Act, or a successor system. The working group must be comprised of accrediting agencies, institutional representatives, the Commissioner of the NCES or a representative, and student advocate representatives familiar with the accreditation process. This section clarifies that accrediting agencies may use measures not included in the glossary and that the glossary shall not include performance benchmarks for the use or application of measures included in the glossary.

Additionally, this section directs the Secretary to initiate a negotiated rulemaking to develop procedures for identifying representative member institutions an accrediting agency must use to demonstrate to the Secretary that the agency consistently applies and enforces standards and effectively evaluates the quality of education or training offered by the institutions it accredits. The negotiated rulemaking must also establish definitions for terms to describe actions taken by an accrediting agency with respect to an institution and establish notice and disclosure requirements for such terms.

Further, this section requires student achievement to be assessed for completion, progress toward completion, and workforce participation. Accreditors may use measures from the glossary created by the working group and may use different measures for different institutions. Accrediting agencies must establish a single performance benchmark for each measure used. An accrediting agency may establish a different performance benchmark for each credential level. Accreditors may consider the historical significance of the institution and whether the institution is in an educational desert when assessing whether the institution meets the student achievement standards.

To facilitate institutional improvement, accreditors must establish standards on student achievement outcomes disaggregated by certain student subgroups, as long as the data yield statistically reliable information that do not reveal personally identifiable information. This section specifies that curricula standards must assess program length, course sequencing, and objectives related to credentialing. Accreditors must have standards regarding the value of credentials (including non-monetary value); faculty; student support services; recruiting and admission practices, academic calendars, catalogues, publications, and grading; and fiscal and administrative capacity. This section repeals requirements that accrediting agencies have standards related to facilities, equipment, and supplies; record of student complaints; and record of institutional compliance with its program responsibilities under title IV of the HEA based on student loan default rate data, the results of financial or compliance audits, program reviews, and any such other information as the Secretary may provide to the agency or association.

This section requires the accrediting agency to make certain information available on a publicly accessible website. Information includes the performance benchmark established for each measure used to determine success with regard to student achievement as established under this section, the rationale for such performance benchmark, and how such performance benchmarks are factored into the accreditation process. Accrediting agencies must also specify the process used when an institution fails to meet an accreditation standard established by the agency. Any institutional sanction or adverse action taken by the accreditor must also be included on the website.

This section increases transparency of accreditor actions. Including by reducing the number of days an accreditor has to notify the Secretary and the State about any adverse action (e.g. final denial, withdrawal, and probation) to 10 days. This section requires accrediting agencies to ensure that any substantive change to an institution's educational mission or program does not adversely affect the institution's capacity to meet the accrediting standards. In order to change an institution's scope of accreditation or preaccreditation, the institution must obtain approval for any substantive change.

This section amends the restrictions on who may serve on the board of an accrediting agency to include individuals who exercise substantial control over an institution that is in trouble with the Department as specified under this section (e.g. an institution that is on Heightened Cash Monitoring 2 or an institution against which the Secretary is initiating or carrying out an emergency action). This section also increases the number of public members that must serve on an accreditor's board from one for each six members (14 percent) to one for each four members (20 percent). This section requires that the public member be selected to serve on the board in the same manner that other board members are selected for such service. This section prohibits the public member from having previously served on the board as a non-public member in the preceding 10 years and from being an owner, shareholder, consultant, or full-time employee of an institution that is accredited by that accrediting agency. This section further codifies certain regulatory requirements related to serving as a public member.

This section requires accrediting agencies to ensure peer reviewers are well-trained and knowledgeable about the history and mission of the institution being reviewed. This section requires accrediting agencies to monitor institutions that are experiencing significant enrollment decline. This section requires an accrediting agency to mandate a teach-out plan and an agreement upon the occurrence of certain events as outlined under this section. This section also requires an accrediting agency to respond within 30 days to complaints received with respect to an institution and submit relevant complaints to the Secretary and the State that authorizes such institution.

Furthermore, nothing in this section prohibits the Secretary from implementing a different recognition process for accrediting agencies that accredit institutions or programs for the purpose of participating in other programs outside of title IV of HEA (including programs outside of the Department).

For purposes of evaluating an accrediting agency's recognition, the Secretary must make the accrediting agency's application public upon publishing the agency's solicitation for third-party information. In the case where a Department official (other than the Secretary) makes a decision on the recognition of an accrediting agency that differs from NACIQI's recommendation, the official must submit the rationale and evidence for such decision to Congress.

Each fiscal year, the Secretary must submit to Congress information about each accrediting agency reviewed during the preceding fiscal year, NACIQI's recommendation about whether to recognize each accrediting agency, and the Department's decision regarding each agency.

This section also requires the Secretary to direct NACIQI to regularly evaluate the effectiveness of the measures selected and the performance benchmarks established by accrediting agencies. NACIQI must account for similarly situated accreditors, which cannot be determined solely by the educational sector of the institutions accredited by the agency. If the Secretary determines that an accreditor's performance benchmark is too low, this section authorizes the Secretary to require an accreditor to review and revise such performance benchmark. This section also includes a rule of construction to clarify that the Secretary cannot specify the specific performance benchmark that the accreditor must use.

Within six months of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall publish an annual report on accrediting agencies including information specified in this section.

This section also states that nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit an institution from seeking accreditation, in a manner consistent with certain requirements in the section, from an accreditor that accredits a branch campus of such institution in the State in which the institution is located.

Subpart 3—Program Review and Data

Sec. 4721—Eligibility and certification procedures

This section enumerates automatic, mandatory and discretionary events that could affect the financial health of a private nonprofit and proprietary institution.

Automatic triggering events that result in a failure of the financial responsibility requirements include: the institution must submit a teach-out plan if the Secretary takes an action to limit that institution's participation in title IV or takes an emergency action against the institution; the institution is at risk of failing the aCDR under Sec. 4110 of this Act; and the institution has more pending or approved borrower relief claims that equals or exceeds the number of full-time enrolled students for the previous year. For proprietary institutions, additional automatic events include: an action from the Securities and Exchange Commission for publicly traded institutions; failing 85/15; and if shareholder equity is reduced after an institution fails to meet the financial responsibility standards.

Mandatory triggering events require an institution to submit to the Secretary updated financial information if the following events happen: the institution is required to pay a large debt or incur a large liability resulting from a final judgement or administrative proceeding; the institution is involved in a lawsuit for financial relief claims for federal loans; and if the Secretary determines that an institution has programs that are at risk of noncompliance with the statutory requirement for gainful employment.

Discretionary events authorize the Secretary to request additional financial information from the institution if the Secretary determines that the Department is likely to receive a large number of borrower relief claims from the result of a lawsuit, settlement or judgement against the institution; the institution experiences significant fluctuation in enrollment; the institution received a citation from its accreditor or state authorizing agency; the institution saw high annual dropout rates; or the institution has pending borrower relief claims.

This section requires an institution to submit additional financial information to the Secretary upon subsequent change of such institution's financial circumstances changes again and requires financial information submitted under this section to be publicly available. This section requires the IG to conduct audits every two years to ensure the financial responsibility standards are aligned with accepted accounting requirements. This section also allows institutions that have a rating of investment grade or above from a recognized credit agency to meet the requirements of this section. This section adds receivership to the list of conditions under a change in ownership that requires an institution to demonstrate compliance with requirements to participate in title IV. This section requires a negotiated rulemaking to update the criteria used in the composite score to determine whether an institution meets statutory financial responsibility requirements.

Sec. 4722—Program review and data

This section makes conforming amendments to prioritize program reviews of institutions with an aCDR over 18 percent and institutions in the highest quartile of aCDRs. Such amendments are necessary to transition to use of aCDR as required by this Act.

This section authorizes the Secretary to conduct undercover and secret shopper operations to encourage the ethical treatment of students and detect fraud and abuse by an institution including misrepresentation of educational programs to students, enforcement of the incentive compensation ban, and admissions and recruitment activity. This section requires the Secretary to develop written guidelines for such activities in accordance with commonly accepted federal practices and requires the Secretary to report the results of such activities to Congress and to make such reports publicly available.

Subpart 4—Strengthening Institutional Quality

Sec. 4731—Strengthening institutional quality

This section allows institutions with a high aCDR to receive technical assistance and financial support from the Department to improve student outcomes. Only public institutions, HBCUs, and private nonprofit institutions with a low-income student enrollment of 45 percent or greater are eligible for such technical assistance and financial support. This section authorizes such assistance and support for between one and three years per eligible institution, with length of support determined by such institution's progress based on accreditor-set student achievement standards. Institutions that fail to reach an aCDR of less than 10 percent by the end of three years lose eligibility to receive further improvement funds, as do institutions where the share of low-income students declines by more than 10 percent. The Secretary is directed to develop a formula for distributing improvement funds. This section authorizes and appropriates $100 million for such technical assistance and financial support for FY 2021 and each succeeding fiscal year.

This section limits marketing expenditures for institutions that spend little on instruction. It requires the Secretary to separately define expenditures on marketing, recruitment, advertising, lobbying, and student services for annual reporting by institutions in IPEDS. If an institution spends less than 1/3 of its revenue from tuition and fees on instruction in any of the three most recent fiscal years, such institution is subject to the marketing limitation. For any such institution, if total expenditures on marketing, recruitment, advertising, and lobbying exceed the amount of revenue the institution receives from sources other than federal financial aid (including the GI bill) for two consecutive years, the institution loses access to title IV for at least two years.

The Secretary is required to publicly disclose a list of institutions that have failed to meet accreditation requirements or title IV requirements, as well as a list of institutions that are in progress period status and receiving improvement funds under this section. Institutions are required to disclose accreditation status and keep such disclosures up to date within 30 days of a change of status. The Secretary is directed to develop a disclosure template that institutions must use.

Part I—America’s College Promise Federal-State Partnership

Sec. 4801—Program authorized

This section authorizes the Secretary to make grants to states and Indian tribes (“grantees”) to waive tuition and fees at participating community colleges for eligible students. This section authorizes the Secretary to devise a formula where the federal government will contribute at least 75 percent of total costs. The formula will also account for the grantee’s share of eligible students, per-student funding levels at public colleges, and the average net price charged to low-income students at public four-year colleges.

This section outlines the conditions grantees must meet to be eligible for a grant—namely, waiving tuition and fees on a first dollar basis for eligible students at community colleges—and outlines the required contents of applications for funds. Applications must include: an estimate of the number of students who will be served by the grant; a description of evidence-based institutional reforms community colleges will undertake to improve student outcomes; and a description of how the grantee will ensure that programs provided that lead to a postsecondary credential are high-quality. Applicants must also provide an assurance that all participating community colleges have entered into a program participation agreement with the Department of Education; an assurance that the state or tribe will assist eligible students in obtaining information about and accessing means-tested Federal benefit programs like SNAP and WIC; and, in the case of state applicants, an assurance that the state will consider changes to state law to make more community college students eligible for such benefits.

In addition to waiving tuition and fees for eligible students, states receiving a grant under this section must promote alignment between their secondary, two-year, and four-year postsecondary education systems. States are required to submit a plan to align the requirements for receiving a regular high school diploma from public high schools in the state with the requirements for entering credit-bearing coursework at participating community colleges in the state. States are further required to submit a plan to improve postsecondary transfer pathways, including by ensuring that associate degrees awarded by public institutions in the State are fully transferable to, and credited as, the first two years of related baccalaureate programs at public institutions of higher education. States are required to certify that they have achieved both types of alignment within three years of receiving a grant under this section. States that fail to achieve alignment in that time frame are required to provide a written explanation for that failure and a plan to come into compliance within the following two years.

This section outlines additional allowable uses available to grantees that have waived community college tuition and fees for all participating eligible students. Allowable uses include enhancing the quality of public higher education, expanding the scope and capacity of community college programs, improving postsecondary readiness, expanding dual enrollment opportunities, and improving affordability at four-year colleges. It additionally requires that states maintain their financial support for higher education in order to receive their full allotment of funds. The maintenance of effort provision applies to per-student funding at public institutions, funding for operational expenses at four-year public institutions, and funding for state need-based aid programs. This section specifies that funds made available under the America's College Promise partnership must be used to supplement, and not supplant, funds that would otherwise be expended by grantees. This section includes reporting requirements.

This section defines key terms, including eligible student, which is defined as any student enrolled in a title IV-eligible program at a community college on at least a half-time basis who maintains satisfactory academic progress and qualifies for in-state tuition. Students who would qualify for in-state tuition but for their immigration status are also eligible. Students lose eligibility three calendar years after first receiving a benefit under this subpart. This section authorizes and appropriates $1.57 billion for FY 2021 and authorizes and appropriates increasing amounts for each succeeding fiscal year, with such authorization and appropriation equaling $16.3 billion in FY 2030.

Sec. 4802—Student Success Fund

This section authorizes a student success fund to ensure that public institutions, including public two-year and public four-year institutions, in states and tribes participating in the America's College Promise partnership have the resources they need to serve students well. States that receive a grant pursuant to Sec. 4801 of this Act are eligible to receive an additional allocation based on the formula included in such section. Grantees are required to provide an increasing amount of matching funding the longer they participate in the student success fund, starting at an amount equal to 25 percent of the federal allocation in years one through four and increasing steadily to a maximum of 100 percent in year nine and beyond. Indian tribes serving large shares of low-income students may request a waiver from the matching requirements.

This section enumerates application requirements for eligible entities seeking funds through the student success fund. Grantees must provide a plan for using funds provided under this section, including a description of how the grantee will use such funds to support the adoption and expansion of evidence-based reforms and practices to advance student success. Grantees are also required to identify annual implementation benchmarks for the adoption of such reforms and practices, as well as the improvements in graduation and transfer rates that the grantee anticipates. Such implementation benchmarks and anticipated outcome improvements are subsequently used to track progress in reports that are submitted by grantees every two years. Progress reports must also include updated plans for the use of student success funds for the subsequent two-year period.

States utilizing the student success fund are required to identify gaps in per-student spending and academic achievement and to prioritize spending on underfunded institutions that serve disproportionate shares of low-income students, students of color, students with disabilities and students in need of remediation. Grantees may use up to ten percent of program funds for administrative purposes.

The Secretary may approve or require changes to the initial applications and renewal plans submitted by grantees. The Secretary is also required to make all final plans publicly available on the Department's website.

This section authorizes and appropriates $500 million in FY 2021 and each of the succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 4803—Pathways to student success for Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Tribal Colleges and Universities, and Minority-Serving Institutions

This section authorizes grants to eligible four-year HBCUs based on actual tuition and fees. The per-student amount granted will not exceed the national average of public, four-year institutional tuition and fees. Grant funds are used to waive or significantly reduce the cost of tuition and fees on a first dollar basis for eligible students for up to sixty credits. In order to be eligible, HBCUs must have a student body that is at least 35 percent low-income, including Pell-eligible students. Additionally, eligible HBCUs must commit to maintain or adopt evidence-based institutional reforms designed to improve student outcomes, and to set performance goals for improving those outcomes. Eligible HBCUs who enter into articulation agreements with community colleges may also receive grant funds for eligible transfer students.

This section authorizes grants to eligible four-year TCCUs based on actual tuition and fees. The per-student amount granted will not exceed the national average of public, four-year institutional tuition and fees. Grant funds are used to waive or significantly reduce the cost of tuition and fees on a first dollar basis for eligible students for up to sixty credits. In order to be eligible, TCCUs must have a student body that is at least 35 percent low-income, including Pell-eligible students. Additionally, eligible TCCUs must commit to maintain or adopt evidence-based institutional reforms designed to improve student outcomes, and to set performance goals for improving those outcomes. Eligible TCCUs who enter into articulation agreements with community colleges may also receive grant funds for eligible transfer students.

tion and fees. The per-student amount granted will not exceed the national average of public, four-year institutional tuition and fees. Grant funds are used to waive or significantly reduce the cost of tuition and fees on a first dollar basis for eligible students for up to sixty credits. In order to be eligible, an MSI must have a student body that is at least 35 percent low-income including Pell-eligible students. Additionally, eligible MSIs must commit to maintain or adopt evidence-based institutional reforms designed to improve student outcomes, and to set performance goals for improving those outcomes. MSIs who enter into articulation agreements with community colleges may also receive grant funds for eligible transfer students.

This section defines terms for the purpose of grants authorized under this section. Eligible students are those who are enrolled at an HBCU, TCCU, or MSI on at least a half-time basis, who maintain satisfactory academic progress and are low-income, including Pell-eligible students. This includes both students who start at an HBCU, TCCU, or MSI, as well as those who transfer from another college. Benefits apply for a maximum of sixty credits, and students lose eligibility for benefits after three calendar years. Students whose parents were denied a Parent PLUS loan between November 2011 and March 2015, who subsequently withdrew from an HBCU, TCCU, or MSI, may also participate in the program even though they are returning students. HBCUs are defined as institutions that meet the requirements described in paragraph (2) of section 322 of the HEA. TCCUs are defined as institutions that meet the requirements of section 316 of the HEA. MSIs are defined as institutions that meet the requirements described in any of paragraphs (2) or (4) through (7) of section 371(a) of the HEA. This section authorizes and appropriates $63.25 million in FY 2021 and authorizes and appropriates increasing amounts for each succeeding fiscal year, with such authorization and appropriation equaling $1.63 billion in FY 2030.

Sec. 4804—Unmet need for Federal Pell Grant recipients

This section authorizes the Secretary to expand the America's College Promise partnership authorized by Sec. 4801 of this Act to provide an additional affordability guarantee, subject to appropriations. Under this section, each Pell recipient at a public college in the participating states and tribes is provided with a grant sufficient to cover the student's remaining unmet need (i.e. the difference between the student's cost of attendance and other grants already received by the student). This guarantee applies to Pell recipients at both two- and four-year institutions. Students lose eligibility for grants three years after they first receive a benefit at a two-year institution and six years after they first receive a benefit at a four-year institution.

Funds under this section are allocated using a formula that accounts for the number of eligible students within a state or tribe as compared to the number of eligible students among all participating grantees. Grantees are provided a minimum federal allocation sufficient to pay for 75 percent of the grants covering unmet need for eligible students (based on average unmet need among Pell recipients nationwide). States and tribes are required to provide matching funds equal to 25 percent of the cost of providing such grants. An exception to such matching requirement is made for Indian tribes with a Pell enrollment of at least 75 percent.

Only states receiving a grant under Sec. 4801 of this Act are eligible to participate in the expanded affordability guarantee authorized by this section. This section includes reporting requirements, student eligibility requirements, technical assistance, and logistical provisions aligned to the requirements enumerated in Sec. 4801 of this Act.

Sec. 4805—Unmet need for students

This section authorizes the Secretary to expand the America's College Promise partnership authorized by Sec. 4801 of this Act to provide an additional affordability guarantee, subject to appropriations. Under this section, each student at a public college in the participating states and tribes is provided with a grant sufficient to cover the student's remaining unmet need (i.e. the difference between the student's cost of attendance and other grants already received by the student). This guarantee applies to students at both two- and four-year institutions. Students lose eligibility for grants three years after they first receive a benefit at a two-year institution and six years after they first receive a benefit at a four-year institution.

Funds under this section are allocated using a formula that accounts for the number of eligible students within a state or tribe as compared to the number of eligible students among all participating grantees. Grantees are provided a minimum federal allocation sufficient to pay for 75 percent of the grants covering unmet need for eligible students (based on average unmet need among students nationwide). States and tribes are required to provide matching funds equal to 25 percent of the cost of providing such grants. An exception to such matching requirement is made for Indian tribes with a Pell enrollment of at least 75 percent.

Only states receiving a grant under Sec. 4801 of this Act and covering the unmet need of Pell recipients under Sec. 4804 of this Act are eligible to participate in the expanded affordability guarantee authorized by this section. This section includes reporting requirements, student eligibility requirements, technical assistance, and logistical provisions aligned to the requirements enumerated in Sec. 4801 of this Act.

Sec. 4806—Tuition waivers

This section authorizes the Secretary to expand the America's College Promise partnership authorized by Sec. 4801 of this Act to provide an additional affordability guarantee, subject to appropriations. Under this section, participating states and tribes would waive the cost of tuition and fees for students at public four-year colleges. Students lose eligibility for waivers six years after they first receive a benefit under this section.

Funds under this section are allocated using a formula that accounts for the number of eligible students within a state or tribe as compared to the number of eligible students among all participating grantees. Grantees are provided a minimum federal allocation sufficient to cover 75 percent of the tuition waivers for eligible students (based on average tuition at public four-year institutions nationwide). States and tribes are required to provide matching funds equal to 25 percent of the cost of providing such waivers. An exception to such matching requirement is made for Indian tribes with a Pell enrollment of at least 75 percent.

Only states receiving a grant under Sec. 4801 of this Act, covering unmet need for Pell recipients under Sec. 4804 of this Act, and covering unmet need for non-Pell students under Sec. 4805 of this Act, are eligible to participate in the expanded affordability guarantee. This section includes reporting requirements, student eligibility requirements, technical assistance, and logistical provisions aligned to the requirements enumerated in Sec. 4801 of this Act.

Sec. 4807—Expansion for private institutions

This section authorizes the Secretary to expand the unmet need affordability guarantees authorized under Secs. 4804 and 4805 of this Act to allow states participating in those sections to extend benefits to students at private nonprofit institutions of higher education, subject to appropriations. The Secretary is required to establish eligibility standards for private nonprofit institutions participating under this section which must, at a minimum, include benchmarks for the enrollment of low-income students, a requirement that participating nonprofit institutions not reduce institutional need-based aid, and a requirement that the grant funds provided for students at nonprofit institutions under this section may not exceed the grants received by students with similar levels of financial need (as measured by EFC) at public institutions in the state. Student eligibility requirements under this section are the same as those established under Secs. 4804 and 4805 of this Act, except that eligibility standards related to in-state tuition do not apply.

TITLE V—DEVELOPING INSTITUTIONS

Sec. 5001—Hispanic-serving institutions

This section adds a new authorized use for title V which allows Hispanic-Serving Institutions (HSIs) to use grant funds to promote opportunities for international education, including through partnerships with international institutions. Such flexibility includes allowing institutions that use title V funds for endowments to count restricted gifts to the endowment fund toward the current-law matching requirement and reducing such requirement from a minimum of 100 percent to 50 percent. This section further allows institutions using title V funds for endowment growth to use endowment earnings to support student scholarships.

Sec. 5002—Promoting postbaccalaureate opportunities for Hispanic Americans

This section amends the Promoting Postbaccalaureate Opportunities for Hispanic Americans (PPOHA) program by reorganizing and expanding the program's authorized activities. This section divides authorized activities into two categories, the first of which includes all currently authorized activities other than faculty development (described as PPOHA Activities) and the second of which includes an expanded list of activities related to faculty development, support for graduate students, faculty recruitment, and research support for early-career faculty (described as Faculty Development Activities). An individual grant may fund PPOHA Activities or Faculty Development Activities, but not both. This section directs the Secretary to devote at least one-third of appropriated funds toward grants for PPOHA Activities and at least one-third of appropriated funds towards grants for Faculty Development Activities.

Sec. 5003—General provisions

This section reauthorizes title V programs. This section authorizes $350 million for part A and C programs and $115 million for part B programs. All programs are authorized for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. Further, this section directs the Secretary to reserve 0.75 percent of funds appropriated for Part A for technical assistance and administrative training for staff and faculty.

TITLE VI—INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Sec. 6001—International education

This section authorizes graduate students who are at the beginning level of learning a foreign language as eligible to receive a Foreign Language and Area or International Studies Fellowship. This section repeals three program authorizations and authorizes a program that combines and updates the principles and activities of the repealed program authorizations. Such program supports necessary international and foreign language (FL) education research and innovation projects to assess and strengthen international education capacity and coordination. This section requires the Secretary to conduct research to better understand the country's international and FL education capacity, structure, and effectiveness; scale up proven strategies and invest in promising new ideas to deliver international and FL education resources; and develop a database that documents such activities and research.

Sec. 6002—Global business and professional education programs

This section authorizes a program that combines and updates the principles and activities of programs repealed in this Act. Such program supports innovative initiatives that give undergraduate and graduates students the opportunity to gain or build the skills and perspectives necessary to strengthen the United States' ability to engage and compete globally.

Institutions or institutions in partnership with a nonprofit entity are eligible to receive grants authorized by this section. Such grants shall be used to incorporate foreign language programs with immersion opportunities, internship abroad or other opportunities, and economic studies in their academic programs. Grantees must also work with professional communities, corporations, and nonprofit organizations to strengthen programs and ensure relevance for private and national security needs. Grantees may use funds to develop specialized instructional materials, provide student opportunities outside of the traditional school year or over academic breaks, establish exchange programs, and other innovative activities for academic and career development. The Secretary may only award grants authorized by this section for a fiscal year in which the appropriation for title VI of the HEA exceeds the annual appropriation for such title in FY 2019 ($65,103,000).

Sec. 6003—Repeal of assistance program for Institute for International Public Policy

This section repeals part C of title VI of the HEA, the Institute for International Public Policy.

Sec. 6004—General provisions

This section requires the Secretary to provide technical assistance to HBCUs, TCCUs and other MSIs to help such institutions submit qualified applications for grants authorized under title VI of the HEA. This section authorizes the Secretary to give priority to qualified grant applications submitted by HBCUs and other MSIs or institutions of higher education that propose significant and sustained collaborative activities with one or more HBCU, TCCU, or MSI. This section authorizes $125 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

TITLE VII—GRADUATE AND POSTSECONDARY IMPROVEMENT PROGRAMS

Sec. 7001—Graduate assistance in areas of national need

This section reauthorizes the Graduate Assistance in Areas of National Need (GAANN) program which provides fellowships to graduate students in a field designated as an area of national need, for FY 2021 and each of the succeeding five fiscal years.

Sec. 7002—Graduate education programs

This section expands the eligible HBCUs and PBIs that can receive funding to support masters' degree programs to allow any HBCU or PBI that offers a qualifying masters' degree program to apply for funding in the future. This section creates two new subparts in the HEA to establish new grant programs that support graduate opportunities and faculty development at AANAPISIs and TCCUs. Grants are for five years and funds can be used to support graduate program activities including purchasing scientific equipment, maintenance of classrooms, purchasing research materials, support for low-income students through fellowships and scholarships, improving distance education technology, collaboration with other institutions, and other activities proposed by the institution. Funds can also be used to support faculty development activities including supporting graduate students pursuing academia, developing career services, supporting recruitment and retention of faculty, supporting research from early-career faculty, and other activities proposed by the institution. The grant program for AANAPISIs is authorized at $30 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years. The grant program for TCCUs is authorized at $5 million for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 7003—Fund for Improvement of Postsecondary Education

This section reauthorizes the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE) for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years.

Sec. 7004—Minority-serving institutions innovation fund

This section authorizes a program under part C of title VII of the HEA titled “Funding Innovations at Minority-Serving Institutions” designed to increase recruitment of older low-income students and students, improve student achievement and graduation, increase attainment of STEM degrees, expand the use of technology, and improve employment outcomes.

This section defines an eligible entity for a grant under this part as an MSI, including HBCUs and TCCUs, or as a consortium comprised of an MSI and any one or combination of the following: one or more additional institutions, a private nonprofit organization, a LEA, or a high school that receives title I funding under ESEA and has been identified for comprehensive support and improvement under ESEA.

This section authorizes competitive planning and implementation grants to eligible entities. Planning grants shall not exceed $150,000 and shall be awarded to each MSI designation in proportion to the allocations made in section 757 of the HEA and in the order in which applications are received. Competitive implementation grants last for five years except that the Secretary may only provide funds after the third year if the entity demonstrates satisfactory progress toward carrying out the grant activities. A grant shall not exceed $10 million. The section includes requirements for eligible entities applying as a consortium, including designation of a fiscal agent, requirements regarding written agreements, and the ability to make subgrants to members of the consortium.

This section requires applications for implementation grants to describe the specific innovations proposed, including a description of the evidence supporting such innovation, if applicable; how such innovation will address the purpose of this section and will further the institutional mission of the MSI; the specific activities that will be carried out to implement the innovation; proposed performance metrics to track progress; planned independent evaluations including interim and final reports; and plans to sustain the innovation beyond the grant period.

This section sets competitive priorities the Secretary shall use in awarding grants under this part. Applicants that submitted planning grant applications in the prior year but did not receive an award due to insufficient appropriations receive priority in subsequent years. For implementation grants, competitive priority will be awarded to applicants that have not previously received funds under this part. Competitive priority will also be awarded to applicants that address issues of major national need.

This section outlines allowable uses each of the grants. For planning grants, eligible entities shall conduct a comprehensive planning process that evaluates the institution’s needs, researches educational innovations, selects appropriate innovations, assesses the institution’s capacity for implementation, and further develops such capacity for implementation. For implementation grants, eligible entities shall develop, pilot, field-test, implement, document, validate, and, as applicable, scale up and replicate the innovations proposed to be implemented. Funding can be used on innovations that create a college-bound culture at secondary schools to increase college going; improve student achievement; increase postsecondary degree attainment for minority males; increase the percentage of students who make progress towards graduation and graduate on time; promote a positive climate on campus; increase STEM graduates; support economic development and entrepreneurship; improve courses; enhance the quality of teacher and school leader preparation programs; expand the use of technology; and strengthen postgraduate employment outcomes.

This section authorizes $850 million in appropriations for FY 2021 and each of the five succeeding fiscal years and includes a specific funding amount for each MSI designation.

Additionally, the revised career pathway guidance allows for the development and implementation of effective and evidence-based teaching methods to advise students with disabilities on: internships, apprenticeships, or work-based learning opportunities; counseling on coursework to meet the recognized educational credential; developing self-advocacy skills to advocate for appropriate accommodations once in the workplace; or supporting the student in selecting a career pathway that leads to competitive, integrated employment.

Sec. 7007—Office of Accessibility

This section requires each institution to establish or maintain an office of accessibility to develop and implement policies to support students with disabilities. Such office is required to: inform students during orientation about services at the institution and continually update such information through the office's website and other communications; provide information to students about accommodations and modifications provided by the institution; and provide information to students about their legal rights. The office also must adopt policies that make the following documentation sufficient to establish an individual has a disability: an individualized education plan; a 504 plan from the Rehabilitation Act; a plan or record of service under the American Disabilities Act; a record or evaluation from a relevant licensed professional; a plan or record from another institution; or documentation of a disability due to uniformed services.

Sec. 7008—Postsecondary programs for students with intellectual disabilities

This section reauthorizes grants to support transition programs for students with intellectual disabilities into higher education. This section includes inclusive programs that promote the successful transition of students with disabilities in higher education and the earning of a degree, certificate, or recognized postsecondary credential issued by the institution in the program purpose. Funds may be used to serve students with intellectual disabilities, provide individual supports and services, integrate person-centered planning in the development of the course study, integrate students into institutionally owned housing (if applicable), participate with the coordinating center, partner with one or more local educational agencies, plan for the sustainability of the program, and award a degree, certificate, or recognized postsecondary credential.

This section also requires institutions to collect and transmit to the coordinating center on an annual basis student-level information related to the experiences and outcomes of students who participate in the inclusive higher education program for students with intellectual disabilities. Further, each grantee must collect longitudinal outcome data from each student participating in the program and transmit the data to the coordinating center, consistent with federal privacy protections.

Sec. 7009—National Technical Assistance Center and National Coordinating Center for Inclusion of Students with Intellectual Disabilities

This section reauthorizes the National Technical Assistance Center and adds transitioning students with disabilities from secondary school to postsecondary education as a new demonstrated expertise in defining eligible entities for the purpose of programs funded under such center.

This section reauthorizes the National Coordinating Center for Inclusion of Students with Intellectual Disabilities and clarifies that technical assistance and evaluations may include the systematic collection of annual student and program data and facilitation of outcomes data of students with intellectual disabilities. This section includes additional cooperative agreement requirements for the eligible entity to evaluate programs using qualitative and quantitative methodologies for measuring program strengths, create and maintain a database of student and program level data, and create and maintain a mechanism to consolidate follow-up data on student outcomes.

This section enumerates required activities for when an eligible entity convenes a working group to develop and recommend model standards of inclusive higher education. The activities include conducting outreach to accrediting agencies; developing a technical guidance document to support implementation of model standards; developing and implementing model standards; and updating recommendations for model standards, criteria, and components of such programs, as applicable.

This section authorizes the Secretary to reserve up to 7 percent of funds to provide technical assistance, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and to execute program evaluations, and up to 3 percent of funds for administrative expenses. This section requires the Secretary to submit an annual report to Congress about the progress of the grant program.

This section establishes a minimum state grant amount of $500,000. Grant size is based on a state's foster and homeless youth population compared with the number of foster and homeless youth nationwide. To receive funds, states must submit a yearly application and an annual report.

This section requires states to use 25 percent of grant funds to establish intensive, statewide transition initiatives to improve the college-going culture among foster and homeless youth and increase their enrollment in colleges and universities. This section requires states to use 70 percent of grant funds to develop Institutions of Excellence to serve foster and homeless youth through campus-based support services and financial assistance. Sec. 10101—Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities Assistance Act of 1978

This section makes amendments to the Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities Assistance Act (TCCUAA), including through amending the definition of “tribally controlled college or university” and amending how the Bureau of Indian Education (BIE) counts Indian students at TCCUs (both in academic programs and continuing education programs) for purposes of funding under the TCCUAA. Additionally, this section requires the BIE to use the Indian student enrollment data from the prior-prior academic year.

This section amends the TCCUAA section that authorizes planning grants to help a tribe determine the feasibility of establishing a tribal college by replacing such authorization with a requirement that the Secretary of the Interior submit a report to Congress on inquiries received from federally recognized Indian Tribes and tribal organization about the process for establishing a TCCU. Additionally, this section allows the Secretary of the Interior to pay for the feasibility study used to determine whether there is justification to start a TCCU only from the BIE's administrative budget, rather than the TCCU operating fund.

This section makes other changes to grant programs authorized under the TCCUAA. It updates the priority used for grants to TCCUs to institutions that received payments under title I in FY 2019 or were affiliated with an institution that received payments. In the case that the sum appropriated for any fiscal year is insufficient to pay in full the total amount that approved applicants are eligible to receive, this section directs the Secretary of the Interior to first allocate funding to existing TCCUs at a specified amount before payments to new TCCUs are awarded.

This section replaces the TCCUAA study on vacant or underutilized facilities owned by the Bureau of Indian Affairs with a required study on the condition of TCCU facilities that identifies the need for new construction, renovation, and infrastructure enhancements at TCCUs. Further, this section outlines eligible activities for grants provided for such construction.

This section amends the endowment program authorized under the TCCUAA to better align the program with the Endowment Challenge Grant Program administered by the Department. Such amendments include restricting the grant to 20 years.

This section allows tribally controlled postsecondary career and technical institutions to be eligible for grant programs authorized under the TCCUAA.

These funds will support community colleges that have partnered with secondary schools, area CTE schools, four-year institutions, and workforce development systems to create stronger alignment in carrying out CTE programs and programs of study. Funds will additionally support the expansion of career pathways, articulation agreements, career guidance, and academic counseling. Of the $183.52 amount for FY 2021, $1.52 million is authorized to be appropriated to assist outlying areas and an additional $1 million is authorized to be appropriated for Tribally Controlled Postsecondary Career and Technical Institutions.

STATEMENT OF PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

Pursuant to clause (3)(c) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the goals of H.R. 4674 are to lower the cost of college for students and families, to hold colleges accountable for students' success, and to give a new generation of students the opportunity to graduate on-time and transition to a successful career.

DUPLICATION OF FEDERAL PROGRAMS

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(5) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee states that no provision of H.R. 4674 establishes or reauthorizes a program of the Federal Government known to be duplicative of another federal program, a program that was included in any report from the Government Accountability Office to Congress pursuant to section 21 of Public Law 111-139, or a program related to a program identified in the most recent Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

HEARINGS

Pursuant to section 103(i) of H. Res. 6 for the 116th Congress, the Committee held five legislative hearings reflected in the descriptive portions of this report, which were used to develop H.R. 4674.

STATEMENT OF OVERSIGHT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII and clause 2(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND CBO COST ESTIMATE

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, and pursuant to clause 3(c)(3) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Committee has received the following estimate for H.R. 4674 from the Director of the Congressional Budget Office:

The bill would:

- Increase direct spending for federal student loan programs by $169.9 billion over the 2020–2029 period
- Increase direct spending for the Federal Pell Grant Program by $83.1 billion over the 2020–2029 period
- Increase direct spending for other higher education programs by $78.8 billion over the 2020–2029 period
- Amend and permanently reauthorize the discretionary portion of the Pell grant program, which would increase spending subject to appropriation by $85.4 billion over the 2020–2024 period

Estimated budgetary effects would primarily stem from:

- Amending repayment options for federal student loan programs, eliminating origination fees, creating a subsidized loan program for graduate students, and expanding eligibility for Public Service Loan Forgiveness
- Increasing the maximum Pell grant and indexing the total to inflation
- Appropriating funds for America's College Promise, a grant program that would require participating states to eliminate tuition and fees at public two-year institutions

Areas of significant uncertainty include:

- Projecting future enrollment in postsecondary education and participation in the federal student aid programs
- Anticipating responses of students, postsecondary education institutions, and states to changes in the bill
- Projecting future incomes of borrowers in income-driven repayment and interest rates on student loans

Bill summary: H.R. 4674 would reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965 and amend student and institutional eligibility for several major student aid programs, including the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program and the Federal Pell Grant Program. The bill also would reauthorize funding for most other federal higher education programs.

Estimated Federal cost: The estimated budgetary effect of H.R. 4674 is shown in Table 1. The costs of the legislation fall within budget functions 050 (national defense) and 500 (education, training, employment, and social services).

Basis of estimate: For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 4674 will be enacted by July 1, 2020, which coincides with the upcoming 2020–2021 academic year. CBO estimates that enacting the bill would increase direct spending by $91.6 billion in 2020, $160.8 billion over the 2020–2024 period, and $331.9 billion over the 2020–2029 period. CBO's estimates are based on analysis of data from a variety of sources, including the National Student Loan Data System, data on applications for federal student aid from the Department of Education, and the National Postsecondary Student Aid Study.

H.R. 4674 would reauthorize and create many discretionary programs for higher education through fiscal year 2026. Although almost all of the underlying authorizations have expired, many of the programs have continued to receive appropriations. Most of the authorizations would automatically be extended through 2027 under the General Education Provisions Act. The bill also would amend several other laws, including the U.S. Institute of Peace Act and the Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities Assistance Act. CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 4674 would cost $148.9 billion over the 2020–2024 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts. The largest amount ($85.4 billion) would result from reauthorizing and amending the discretionary portion of the Pell grant program.

Direct spending: CBO estimates that over the 2020–2029 period, enacting H.R. 4674 would increase direct spending by $331.9 billion.

Federal student loan programs. The federal government provides loans to undergraduate and graduate students and to the parents of undergraduates under the William D. Ford Direct Loan Program, which was created in 1994. The government serves as the lender for all borrowers but contracts with private entities to service the loans.¹ CBO estimates that in fiscal year 2020, the federal government will make about 16 million new loans to students and parents, totaling about $100 billion. Under the technical and economic assumptions that underlie CBO’s May 2019 baseline, we project that mandatory and discretionary spending for the federal student loan programs will total $31.5 billion over the 2019–2029 period.²

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (FCRA), CBO estimates most of the costs of the federal student loan programs on a net-present-value basis. A present value is a single number that expresses a flow of current and future payments in terms of an equivalent lump sum received or paid today. Under credit reform, the present value of all loan-related cash flows is calculated by discounting those expected cash flows to the year of disbursement, using the rates for comparable maturities on Treasury securities. (For example, cash flow for a one-year loan is discounted using the rate for a one-year, zero-coupon Treasury note.)³ As required by FCRA, changes to the estimated costs of outstanding student loans are shown in the year of enactment; for this estimate, CBO assumes H.R. 4674 will be enacted in fiscal year 2020. The costs for the federal administration of student loans are estimated on a cash basis. The major provisions affecting direct spending for student loans are described below. In total direct spending for those loans would total $169.9 billion over the 2020–2029 period.

Borrowers’ (Student and Parents) Repayment Options. Under current law, borrowers select a loan repayment plan from the following options:

- Standard (or default) repayment plan—borrowers under the standard repayment plan make fixed monthly payments for 10 years.
- Extended repayment or consolidation plans—in certain circumstances, borrowers may extend the repayment of a loan for up to 30 years.

¹Before July 1, 2010, the federal government also provided loan guarantees to financial institutions for student loans made through the Federal Family Education Loan Program. The Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 required loans originated after July 1, 2010, to be in the direct loan program.

²See also Student Loan Programs—CEO’s May 2019 Baseline. <https://www.cbo.gov/system/files/2019-05/51310-2019-05-studentloan.pdf>.

³A second approach to estimating the costs of federal credit programs is called fair value. Fair value estimates are based on market values—market prices when those prices are available or approximations of market prices when directly comparable figures are unavailable—which more fully account for the cost of the risk the government takes on in its credit programs. To account for that risk, CBO discounts the same projected cash flows as under FCRA but uses a market-based discount rate. CBO has not completed an estimate of the loan provisions in H.R. 4674 using fair value estimating procedures. For more details on fair-value accounting, see Congressional Budget Office, Fair-Value Estimates of the Cost of Federal Credit Programs in 2019 (June 2018) www.cbo.gov/publication/54095.

- Income-driven repayment (IDR) plans—student borrowers may use these plans, such as the PAYE (Pay as You Earn) Repayment Plan and the REPAYE (Revised Pay as You Earn) Repayment Plan, to make monthly payments. Those payments are calculated as a percentage of income, and borrowers usually make payments for 20 or 25 years, with total forgiveness of outstanding balances at the end of that term. Payments for most new borrowers are set at 10 percent of discretionary income, and there is no limit on the amount that may be forgiven. Parent borrowers can only use the Income-Contingent Repayment Plan, which requires higher payments for a longer period of time than most income-driven repayment plans for students.

H.R. 4674 would eliminate those repayment plans and replace them with two new plans: a fixed-repayment plan (the default plan) and an income-driven repayment plan. Current borrowers could remain in their plan or switch into one of the two new plans.

Under the bill, the fixed-repayment plan would allow borrowers to make monthly payments for 10, 15, 20, or 25 years, depending on the amount of their debt when entering repayment.

Under the income-driven repayment plan, borrowers would pay 10 percent of their discretionary income, defined as any amount above 250 percent of the federal poverty level.⁴ That percentage would be reduced by 10 percentage points for every $1,000 that single borrowers' adjusted gross income exceeded $80,000 or for every $2,000 that married borrowers' income exceeded $160,000. Any loan balance remaining after 20 years would be forgiven.

Based on borrower data from the NSLDS and income projections derived from the CBO Long-Term model, CBO estimates that amending the repayment plans would increase direct spending by $42.0 billion for student borrowers and by $26.8 billion for parent borrowers over the 2020–2029 period (see Table 2). CBO expects that the majority of that increase would be for outstanding student loans because borrowers with lower incomes (who are most likely to see lower payments and more forgiveness of outstanding balances) would probably switch into the new income-driven repayment plan. However, as borrowers' incomes rise over time and more borrowers exceed the income at which reductions in the discretionary income level occur, CBO expects that the costs of the new IDR plans would decline.

Components may not sum to totals because of rounding; PSLF = Public Service Loan Forgiveness; * = between –$50 million and $50 million.

^a CBO estimates this provision would increase direct spending for Pell grants by $900 million and decrease spending on student loans by $1.1 billion over the 2021–2029 period. Those totals are included above under the headings for “Federal Student Loans” and “Pell grants.”

Subsidized Graduate Loan Program. Under current law, graduate students can borrow up to $20,500 annually in unsubsidized loans, which accrue interest from the date of origination. Under H.R. 4674, borrowers attending public and private, not-for-profit institutions would be eligible to borrow up to $8,500 of that annual amount in subsidized loans, which would not accrue interest while the borrower is enrolled at least half-time or during certain periods of deferment.

Under current law, CBO projects that graduate students will incur about $340 billion worth of loans over the 2021–2029 period. Based on the amount of borrowing in the subsidized loan program for graduate students that existed until 2012, CBO expects that approximately 35 percent of that projected loan amount would move to the subsidized loan program. As a result, CBO estimates this provision would increase direct spending by $21.8 billion over the 2021–2029 period.

Origination Fees. Under current law, borrowers with subsidized and unsubsidized loans pay an origination fee of 1 percent of the loan amount. The fee for parent and GradPLUS loans is 4 percent.⁵ H.R. 4674 would eliminate all origination fees, which increases the cost of those loans, resulting in an increase in direct spending of $17.7 billion over the 2021–2029 period, CBO estimates.

⁵ The Budget Control Act of 2011 requires automatic reductions in the cost of certain mandatory programs. For student loans, the savings are achieved by increasing origination fees above the percentages specified in the Higher Education Act. The origination fees described in the text do not include this additional amount.

Public Service Loan Forgiveness for Borrowers who Consolidate. Under current law, to be eligible for the Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF) Program, borrowers' loans must be in the federal direct loan program and a borrower must be making payments to an eligible repayment plan, such as an income-driven repayment plan. Borrowers who have Family Federal Education Loans or who are making payments in extended repayment or other repayment plans are not eligible for the program.

H.R. 4674 would allow borrowers who consolidate their loans under one of the new repayment plans to count their previous payments under other prepayment plans toward the 120 payments required for PSLF. Using data from the Government Accountability Office and information about borrowers who have certified their employment for the PSLF Program, CBO estimates that enacting the provision would increase direct spending by $16.0 billion in 2020 because it would change the cost of outstanding loans.

Borrower Defense to Repayment Rule. Under current law, borrowers who demonstrate financial harm from an institution's false or misleading statements may apply to have their loans discharged under what is known as the borrower defense to repayment.

H.R. 4674 would expand eligibility to borrowers who have attended an institution that made a substantial misrepresentation and allow a legal representative to bring defense claims on behalf of a group of borrowers. Based on the loan volume at schools that are under investigation for cases that could fall under borrower defense to repayment, CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would increase direct spending by $13.5 billion over the 2020–2029 period.

Refinancing Loans. Under H.R. 4674, eligible borrowers could apply to have the Department of Education refinance outstanding federal direct or guaranteed student loans or private loans at interest rates specified in the bill. The interest rates under the policy would be equal to the interest rates that apply to new federal loans issued in academic year 2019–2020. The department would have the authority to limit refinancing to borrowers who meet income requirements or debt-to-income ratios that it established. For private loans, the bill would prohibit borrowers from refinancing any loan that is in default and require that borrowers be current on their payments for the previous six months.

According to the Department of Education, the total amount in outstanding federal student loans or loan guarantees stands at nearly $1.5 trillion. More than three-quarters of the federal student loan volume is in federal direct loans; the remainder is for federally guaranteed loans issued before July 1, 2010. Using data from the National Student Loan Data System, CBO estimates that borrowers who account for about 40 percent of the outstanding loan volume would not benefit from refinancing because the interest rates on many recently originated federal loans are lower than or equal to those specified in the bill. CBO expects that more than half of the outstanding loans that would benefit would be refinanced, but borrowers' participation would be greatest for loans with higher current interest rates and more years left to repay. The federal government would receive less in interest income over the life of loans that were refinanced at lower rates. In total, CBO estimates that allowing students to refinance federal direct and guaranteed loans would increase direct spending by $13.3 billion.

According to MeasureOne, a private-sector firm that analyzes education data, about $123 billion is currently outstanding in private student loans that are not federally guaranteed. CBO estimates that a little less than half of that loan volume would be refinanced under the bill, and using the procedures specified in FCRA to estimate the cost of loans, CBO estimates that the interest earned by the government on those loans would be greater than the cost to finance them on a net-present-value basis. Accordingly, CBO estimates that borrowers' refinancing of those private student loans would reduce direct spending by $5.0 billion over the 2020–2029 period for those administrative costs.

The cost of administering formerly private and guaranteed student loans would create additional mandatory spending, which is recorded on a cash basis. Based on the costs of administering existing loans, CBO estimates that direct spending would increase by $250 million over the 2020–2029 period.

Other Loan Policies and Interactions. H.R. 4674 would make other changes to federal student loan programs, including amending the list of professions that would make borrowers eligible for the PSLF Program, reducing the instances in which outstanding interest is capitalized (added to the loan's principal to determine interest owed), and automatically discharging loans for borrowers who attended an institution that closed while they were enrolled. CBO estimates that those changes would increase direct spending by $16.1 billion over the 2020–2029 period. Interactions among all the numerous provisions related to student loans would increase direct spending by an additional $7.5 billion.

Federal Pell grant program: The Pell grant program was created in 1972 to provide need-based grants to postsecondary undergraduate students. Pell grants are not repaid by students, and they constitute the largest source of federal grant aid for postsecondary education. In the upcoming academic year 2019–2020, CBO projects that 7.1 million students will receive Pell grants that average $4,200 each, at a total federal cost of about $30 billion.

Although Pell grants are paid for in part with direct spending, their funding is mainly provided in annual discretionary appropriations with a mandatory set-aside that supports the discretionary portion of the Pell grant program.⁶ Additional direct spending is provided automatically on the basis of a formula to support a “mandatory add-on” that increases the award amount above the maximum set in the annual appropriation act. For the 2020–2021 academic year, which begins July 1, 2020, the total maximum grant will be $6,195. Of that, $5,135 will be supported with discretionary funds and the mandatory set-aside, and $1,060 will be supported through the mandatory add-on. Those awards are the amounts that were the grant levels in the 2019–2020 academic year. The current continuing resolution (Public Law 116–69) will expire on December 20, 2019. However, because CBO scores continuing resolutions on an annualized basis, CBO has assumed that those award amounts will be the same for the 2020–2021 academic year.

⁶ Provided in section 401(b)(7)(A)(iv) of the Higher Education Act.

Because funding for Pell grants comes from mandatory and discretionary sources, the budgetary effects of changes made to Pell grants in H.R. 4674 are discussed in two sections of this estimate. Changes to the mandatory add-on are discussed in this section, and discretionary-funding effects are discussed under “Spending Subject to Appropriation.”

Increase the Mandatory Add-On. H.R. 4674 would increase the mandatory add-on by $625 (raising the grant amount from $1,060 to $1,685) to increase the 2021 total maximum Pell grant to $6,820. Beginning in 2022, the total maximum grant would increase annually with inflation, and any required change would be reflected by an increase in the mandatory add-on award. In 2029, CBO estimates that the total maximum award would be $8,250; the average award would increase by $1,420 (or about 33 percent). In addition to increasing the average award, CBO estimates that enacting this provision would increase the number of grant recipients in 2029 by about 390,000 and would increase direct spending by $68.7 billion over the 2020–2029 period.

Other Pell Grant Policies and Interactions. H.R. 4674 would make several other changes to the Pell grant program that, in general, would expand eligibility (and thus increase the number of recipients) or increase award amounts. The bill would provide grants to previously ineligible students who meet certain criteria and are enrolled in nonproprietary institutions. That group includes graduate students, incarcerated students, and students enrolled in short-term programs. H.R. 4674 also would change the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, the application process, the formula for determining eligibility, and lifetime eligibility.

H.R. 4674 also would place new regulations on proprietary schools, which CBO estimates would reduce the number of recipients.

CBO estimates that considered together, including America’s College Promise (as described below), these other provisions would increase the number of Pell grant recipients by about 1 million (or 11 percent) in 2029 and increase direct spending by $6.8 billion over the 2020–2029 period. Interactions among all the numerous provisions related to Pell grants would further increase direct spending by $7.6 billion.

In total, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 4674 would increase the number of Pell grant recipients by 1.4 million in 2029, or 16 percent, and increase direct spending by $83.1 billion over the 2020–2029 period.

Other mandatory programs: In addition to Pell grants, H.R. 4674 would amend and extend funding for current and expired mandatory programs and appropriate funding for several new grant programs, the largest of which is the America’s College Promise grant program.

America’s College Promise. Beginning in 2021, H.R. 4674 would appropriate specified amounts for annual grants to help states eliminate resident tuition and fees at public two-year institutions. All told, $75 billion would be provided over the 2021–2029 period, of which CBO estimates $59 billion would be spent. Ultimately, CBO estimates, most states would participate in the grant program.

CBO assumes that the elimination of tuition and fees at two-year institutions also would indirectly affect other federal spending on education. CBO estimates that this provision would increase spending for Pell grants because eliminating tuition and fees at these institutions would cause more students to enroll and some of them would be eligible for Pell grants. However spending for student loans would decrease because the elimination of tuition and fees would result in less borrowing. CBO estimates that as a result of this provision, federal costs for the mandatory portion of the Pell grant program would increase by about $900 million over the 2021–2029 period and that direct spending on student loans would be reduced by $1.1 billion over that period.

Other Mandatory Program Policies. H.R. 4674 would increase direct spending for various other programs. For example, it would amend the TEACH grant program; extend funding for existing but expired mandatory grant programs, including those for Historically Black Colleges and Universities and minority-serving institutions; and create new programs, such as the Institutional Pell Bonuses program. CBO estimates that those provisions would increase direct spending by $19.5 billion over the 2021–2029 period.

Spending subject to appropriation: CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 4674 would cost $148.9 billion over the 2020–2024 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts—$205.6 billion—and spending consistent with historical patterns.

The bulk of that spending would be for the Federal Pell Grant Program ($85.4 billion over the 2020–2024 period) and grants to support students’ unmet need ($27.6 billion over the 2020–2024 period). In addition, the bill would authorize funds for other grant programs for post-secondary students and institutions.

Federal Pell grant program: The Pell grant program is by far the largest grant program authorized by the Higher Education Act, and although it receives some mandatory funding, most spending for the program is subject to annual appropriation. As shown in Table 3, CBO estimates that H.R. 4674 would cost $85.4 billion over the 2020–2024 period.

Beginning in fiscal year 2021, H.R. 4674 would permanently authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary for the Pell grant program. CBO estimates that reauthorizing the program with no other changes would require the appropriation of $91.4 billion with resulting outlays of $72.2 billion over the 2020–2024 period. (The estimated cost of this reauthorization represents the cost of the discretionary program—under the assumption that the maximum grant would be $5,135—minus previously appropriated funds and mandatory funds that support the discretionary portion of the Pell grant program provided in section 401(b)(7)(A)(iv) of the Higher Education Act of 1965.) Because the maximum student award under the discretionary portion of the program is set in annual appropriation acts, CBO assumes that the maximum award that is funded with discretionary spending would be $5,135 in each year over the 2020–2029 period. That is the amount in the most recent appropriation act and CBO has no basis for estimating a different amount in future years.

The bill would make other changes to Pell grants (see Federal Pell Grant Program under the “Direct Spending” heading). CBO estimates that the total additional discretionary cost of implementing those provisions would be $13.3 billion over the 2020–2024 period.

Additional college affordability grants: H.R. 4674 would authorize the appropriation of whatever amounts are necessary to fund the federal share of grants to states to cover eligible students' unmet need or finance tuition waivers. Unmet need is defined as the cost of college attendance, after accounting for expected family contribution and all grant aid. Grants would only be provided to states that have provided all eligible grants under the bill's America's College Promise program for community college grants.

Participating states could receive federal assistance to cover the unmet need of eligible students enrolled at least half-time in in-state public, two- or four-year institutions. After providing grants to students at public institutions, states could expand the grant program to cover the unmet need of students at nonprofit private institutions in the state.

For this estimate, CBO assumes that, over the next five years, states would choose to cover the unmet need of Pell grant recipients, as prioritized in the bill, but would not provide further grants for other students in the state, cover tuition waivers, or expand the grant program to private institutions. CBO estimates that implementing this provision would require the appropriation of $46.7 billion over the 2020–2024 period and would cost $27.6 billion over the same period.

Other spending subject to appropriation: H.R. 4674 also would amend and extend the authorizations for many existing programs under the Higher Education Act and other acts, such as the Tribally Controlled Colleges and Universities Act, and authorize new programs. As shown in Table 1, CBO estimates that implementing the bill would require appropriation of $50.9 billion over the 2020–2024 period, which CBO estimates would increase spending by $35.9 billion over the same period. Table 3 shows CBO’s estimates of spending subject to appropriation by title.

Uncertainty: CBO’s budgetary estimates are uncertain for a variety of reasons. For example, the ways in which students, institutions of higher education, federal agencies, and states would respond to this bill’s provisions are all difficult to predict. In producing these estimates, CBO has tried to estimate outcomes that are likely to be roughly correct on average.

In fact, CBO’s projections for current-law spending also are uncertain. For example, in 2017, the first group of student borrowers became eligible for the Public Service Loan Forgiveness Program. But data about that group are limited and therefore cannot yet be used to confidently project future participation. Actual participation, and the resulting budgetary changes from expanding the PSLF program, may be higher or lower than CBO’s estimates.

Changes to the underlying economy also could significantly affect the bill’s costs. Fluctuations in interest rates, for example, would change the cost of the student loan program and a sudden change in rates of employment could affect postsecondary enrollment or the income of borrowers in income-driven repayment programs, which would increase or decrease the cost of all federal student aid.

Despite that uncertainty in CBO’s assessment, the direction of the budgetary effects of most of the bill’s provisions is clear. For example, the changes to the federal student loan programs and the Pell grant program would, on net, almost certainly increase federal costs by a very significant amount.

Pay-As-You-Go considerations: The Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010 establishes budget-reporting and enforcement procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or revenues. The net changes in outlays that are subject to those pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in Table 4.

TABLE 4.—CBO'S ESTIMATE OF THE STATUTORY PAY-AS-YOU-GO EFFECTS OF H.R. 4674, THE COLLEGE AFFORDABILITY ACT, AS ORDERED REPORTED BY THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR ON OCTOBER 31, 2019

Increase in long-term deficits: CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 4674 would increase on-budget deficits by more than $5 billion in all of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2030.

Mandates: H.R. 4674 contains intergovernmental and private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA). CBO estimates that the aggregate cost of complying with the mandates would fall below the annual thresholds established in UMRA ($82 million and $164 million, respectively, in 2019, adjusted annually for inflation).

Mandate that applies both to public and to private entities: The bill would require institutions of higher education to establish an office of accessibility. That office would provide information to students with disabilities about their legal rights and accommodations provided by the school, and specify the documentation needed to establish that a student is a person with a disability.

Under current law, all institutions of higher education must provide accommodations to students with disabilities. Further, universities that receive federal funding are required to appoint a coordinator for disability services. CBO expects that institutions receiving federal assistance would incur minimal costs to comply with the bill's requirement to establish an office that centralizes activities already taking place. Institutions that do not receive federal assistance may incur higher costs to establish an office of accessibility; however, using information from industry sources, CBO estimates that the number of affected institutions would be very small.

Mandate that applies to private entities only: The bill would require financial institutions to report to federal agencies and the Congress information related to their portfolio of education loans. Lenders already provide most of the information to credit bureaus and other private data repositories; therefore, CBO estimates the cost to comply with the new reporting requirement would be small.

COMMITTEE COST ESTIMATE

Clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives requires an estimate and a comparison of the costs that would be incurred in carrying out H.R. 4674. However, clause 3(d)(2)(B) of that rule provides that this requirement does not apply when the Committee has included in its report a timely submitted cost estimate of the bill prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, H.R. 4674, as reported, are shown as follows:

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italics, and existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

HIGHER EDUCATION ACT OF 1965

* * * * *

TITLE I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

* * * * *

SEC. 102. DEFINITION OF INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION FOR PURPOSES OF TITLE IV PROGRAMS.

(a) DEFINITION OF INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION FOR PURPOSES OF TITLE IV PROGRAMS.—

(1) INCLUSION OF ADDITIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—Subject to paragraphs (2) through (4) of this subsection, the term “institution of higher education” for purposes of title IV includes, in addition to the institutions covered by the definition in section 101—

(A) a proprietary institution of higher education (as defined in subsection (b) of this section);

(B) a postsecondary vocational institution (as defined in subsection (c) of this section); and

(C) only for the purposes of part D of title IV, an institution outside the United States that is comparable to an institution of higher education as defined in section 101 and that has been approved by the Secretary for the purpose of part D of title IV, consistent with the requirements of section 452(d).

(2) INSTITUTIONS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of qualifying as an institution under paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary shall establish criteria by regulation for the approval of institutions outside the United States and for the determination that such institutions are comparable to an institution of higher education as defined in section 101 (except that a graduate medical school, nursing school, or a veterinary school, located outside the United States shall not be required to meet the requirements of section 101(a)(4)). Such criteria shall include a requirement that a student attending such school outside the United States is ineligible for loans made under part D of title IV unless—

(i) except as provided in subparagraph (B)(iii)(IV), in the case of a graduate medical school located outside the United States—

(I)(aa) at least 60 percent of those enrolled in, and at least 60 percent of the graduates of, the graduate medical school outside the United States were not persons described in section 484(a)(5) 484(a)(2) in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part D of title IV; and

(bb) at least 75 percent of the individuals who were students or graduates of the graduate medical school outside the United States or Canada (both nationals of the United States and others) taking the examinations administered by the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates received a passing score in the year preceding the year for which a student is seeking a loan under part D of title IV; or

(II) the institution—

(aa) has or had a clinical training program that was approved by a State as of January 1, 1992; and

(bb) continues to operate a clinical training program in at least one State that is approved by that State;

(ii) in the case of a veterinary school located outside the United States that does not meet the requirements of section 101(a)(4), the institution's students complete their clinical training at an approved veterinary school located in the United States; or

(iii) in the case of a nursing school located outside of the United States—

(I) the nursing school has an agreement with a hospital, or accredited school of nursing (as such terms are defined in section 801 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 296)), located in the United States that requires the students of the nursing school to complete the students' clinical training at such hospital or accredited school of nursing;

(II) the nursing school has an agreement with an accredited school of nursing located in the United States providing that the students graduating from the nursing school located outside of the United States also receive a degree from the accredited school of nursing located in the United States;

(III) the nursing school certifies only Federal Direct Stafford Loans under section 455(a)(2)(A),

Federal Direct Unsubsidized Stafford Loans under section 455(a)(2)(D), or Federal Direct PLUS Loans under section 455(a)(2)(B) for students attending the institution;

(IV) the nursing school reimburses the Secretary for the cost of any loan defaults for current and former students included in the calculation of the institution's cohort default rate during the previous fiscal year; and

(V) not less than 75 percent of the individuals who were students or graduates of the nursing school, and who took the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses in the year preceding the year for which the institution is certifying a Federal Direct Stafford Loan under section 455(a)(2)(A), a Federal Direct Unsubsidized Stafford Loan under section 455(a)(2)(D), or a Federal Direct PLUS Loan under section 455(a)(2)(B), received a passing score on such examination.

(B) ADVISORY PANEL.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of qualifying as an institution under paragraph (I)(C) of this subsection, the Secretary shall establish an advisory panel of medical experts that shall—

(I) evaluate the standards of accreditation applied to applicant foreign medical schools; and

(II) determine the comparability of those standards to standards for accreditation applied to United States medical schools.

(ii) SPECIAL RULE.—If the accreditation standards described in clause (i) are determined not to be comparable, the foreign medical school shall be required to meet the requirements of section 101.

(iii) REPORT.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Higher Education Opportunity Act, the advisory panel described in clause (i) shall submit a report to the Secretary and to the authorizing committees recommending eligibility criteria for participation in the loan programs under part D of title IV for graduate medical schools that—

(aa) are located outside of the United States;

(bb) do not meet the requirements of subparagraph (A)(i); and

(cc) have a clinical training program approved by a State prior to January 1, 2008.

(II) RECOMMENDATIONS.—In the report described in subclause (I), the advisory panel's eligibility criteria shall include recommendations regarding the appropriate levels of performance for graduate medical schools described in such subclause in the following areas:

- (aa) Entrance requirements.
- (bb) Retention and graduation rates.
- (cc) Successful placement of students in United States medical residency programs.
- (dd) Passage rate of students on the United States Medical Licensing Examination.
- (ee) The extent to which State medical boards have assessed the quality of such school's program of instruction, including through on-site reviews.
- (ff) The extent to which graduates of such schools would be unable to practice medicine in 1 or more States, based on the judgment of a State medical board.
- (gg) Any areas recommended by the Comptroller General of the United States under section 1101 of the Higher Education Opportunity Act.
- (hh) Any additional areas the Secretary may require.

(III) MINIMUM ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENT.—In the recommendations described in subclause (II), the criteria described in subparagraph (A)(i)(I)(bb), as amended by section 102(b) of the Higher Education Opportunity Act, shall be a minimum eligibility requirement for a graduate medical school described in subclause (I) to participate in the loan programs under part D of title IV.

(IV) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may—

- (aa) not earlier than 180 days after the submission of the report described in subclause (I), issue proposed regulations establishing criteria for the eligibility of graduate medical schools described in such subclause to participate in the loan programs under part D of title IV based on the recommendations of such report; and
- (bb) not earlier than one year after the issuance of proposed regulations under item (aa), issue final regulations establishing such criteria for eligibility.

(C) FAILURE TO RELEASE INFORMATION.—The failure of an institution outside the United States to provide, release, or authorize release to the Secretary of such information as may be required by subparagraph (A) shall render such institution ineligible for the purpose of part D of title IV.

(D) SPECIAL RULE.—If, pursuant to this paragraph, an institution loses eligibility to participate in the programs under title IV, then a student enrolled at such institution may, notwithstanding such loss of eligibility, continue to be eligible to receive a loan under part D of title IV while attending such institution for the academic year succeeding the academic year in which such loss of eligibility occurred.

(3) LIMITATIONS BASED ON COURSE OF STUDY OR ENROLLMENT.—An institution shall not be considered to meet the definition of an institution of higher education in paragraph (1) if such institution—

(A) offers more than 50 percent of such institution's courses by correspondence (excluding courses offered by telecommunications as defined in section 484(l)(4)), unless the institution is an institution that meets the definition in section 3(3)(C) of the Carl D. Perkins Career and Technical Education Act of 2006;

(B) enrolls 50 percent or more of the institution's students in correspondence courses (excluding courses offered by telecommunications as defined in section 484(l)(4)), unless the institution is an institution that meets the definition in such section, except that the Secretary, at the request of such institution, may waive the applicability of this subparagraph to such institution for good cause, as determined by the Secretary in the case of an institution of higher education that provides a 2- or 4-year program of instruction (or both) for which the institution awards an associate or baccalaureate degree, respectively;

(C) has a student enrollment in which more than 25 percent of the students are incarcerated, except that the Secretary may waive the limitation contained in this subparagraph for a nonprofit institution that provides a 2- or 4-year program of instruction (or both) for which the institution awards a bachelor's degree, or an associate's degree or a postsecondary diploma, respectively; or

(D) has a student enrollment in which more than 50 percent of the students do not have a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent, and does not provide a 2- or 4-year program of instruction (or both) for which the institution awards a bachelor's degree or an associate's degree, respectively, except that the Secretary may waive the limitation contained in this subparagraph if a nonprofit institution demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the institution exceeds such limitation because the institution serves, through contracts with Federal, State, or local government agencies, significant numbers of students who do not have a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent.

(4) LIMITATIONS BASED ON MANAGEMENT.—An institution shall not be considered to meet the definition of an institution of higher education in paragraph (1) if—

(A) the institution, or an affiliate of the institution that has the power, by contract or ownership interest, to direct or cause the direction of the management or policies of the institution, has filed for bankruptcy, except that this paragraph shall not apply to a nonprofit institution, the primary function of which is to provide health care educational services (or an affiliate of such an institution that has the power, by contract or ownership interest, to direct or cause the direction of the institution's management or policies) that files for bankruptcy or receivership under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, between July 1, 1998, and December 1, 1998; or

(B) the institution, the institution's owner, or the institution's chief executive officer has been convicted of, or has pled nolo contendere or guilty to, a crime involving the acquisition, use, or expenditure of funds under title IV, or has been judicially determined to have committed fraud involving funds under title IV.

(5) CERTIFICATION.—The Secretary shall certify an institution's qualification as an institution of higher education in accordance with the requirements of subpart 3 of part H of title IV.

(6) LOSS OF ELIGIBILITY.—An institution of higher education shall not be considered to meet the definition of an institution of higher education in paragraph (1) if such institution is removed from eligibility for funds under title IV as a result of an action pursuant to part H of title IV.

(b) PROPRIETARY INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—

(1) PRINCIPAL CRITERIA.—For the purpose of this section, the term “proprietary institution of higher education” means a school that—

(A)(i) provides an eligible program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation; or

(ii)(I) provides a program leading to a baccalaureate degree in liberal arts, and has provided such a program since January 1, 2009; and

(II) is accredited by a recognized regional accrediting agency or association, and has continuously held such accreditation since October 1, 2007, or earlier;

(B) meets the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 101(a);

(C) does not meet the requirement of paragraph (4) of section 101(a);

(D) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association recognized by the Secretary pursuant to part H of title IV; [and]

(E) has been in existence for at least 2 years~~...~~; and

(F) meets the requirements of paragraph (3).

(2) ADDITIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—The term “proprietary institution of higher education” also includes a proprietary educational institution in any State that, in lieu of the requirement in section 101(a)(1), admits as regular students individuals—

(A) who are beyond the age of compulsory school attendance in the State in which the institution is located; or

(B) who will be dually or concurrently enrolled in the institution and a secondary school.

(3) REVENUE SOURCES.—In order to qualify as a proprietary institution of higher education under this subsection, an institution shall derive not less than 15 percent of the institution's revenues from sources other than Federal education assistance funds, as calculated in accordance with paragraph (4).

[(1)] (4) CALCULATION.—In making calculations under [subsection (a)(24)] paragraph (3), a proprietary institution of higher education shall—

(A) use the cash basis of accounting, except in the case of loans described in subparagraph (D)(i) that are made by the proprietary institution of higher education;

(B) consider as revenue only those funds generated by the institution from—

(i) tuition, fees, and other institutional charges for students enrolled in programs eligible for assistance under this title;

(ii) activities conducted by the institution that are necessary for the education and training of the institution's students, if such activities are—

(I) conducted on campus or at a facility under the control of the institution;

(II) performed under the supervision of a member of the institution's faculty; and

(III) required to be performed by all students in a specific educational program at the institution; and

(iii) funds paid by a student, or on behalf of a student by a party other than the institution, for an education or training program that is not eligible for funds under this title, if the program—
